NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

Office of "The Canadian Grocer,"

St. John, N.B., August 18, 1903.

BUSINESS tends to improve. Markets have strengthened in many lines.

Pork products continue low. Pure lard, in particular, shows a continued falling off in price. Salmon have increased attention. The reports from the coast point to a short pack, particularly of red fish. Sugar, as for the past year, occupies the first place in the attention of the trade. While prices keep low, the slight advance and the firm market have the effect of causing dealers to carry full stocks. Cream of tartar is rather lower.

OIL.—The low prices continue in burning oil. The large Fall orders have been booked. Spot sales increase with the advance of the season. Paint oils are very low compared with early Spring prices. Turpentine shows little change. Lubricating oils continue to have a good sale. Receipts of cod oil are still light and the market is very firm. We quote :

SALT.—In Liverpool coarse salt business has been rather dull. There is quite a large stock held in store, and the demand, while steady, is not sharp. Prices, while firm, show but a slight profit to holders. There is a fair demand for fine salt. We quote :

CANNED GOODS.—Salmon has had more attention this week. Our market is oddly placed. One brand of Spring fish has the large sale. Spot goods of this line are largely cleaned up. In new, the expected pack has already been sold and some are still short supplied. Buyers find it rather difficult now to place orders for other brands as the outlook on the coast is for a short pack. Prices are unchanged. In vegetables and fruits about half of the trade are buying from the association and half outside. Most of the largest buyers are outside, and they are well pleased with the outlook for business. Blueberries, it is expected, will be scarce. Spot new peas sell freely. The American tomatoes, while they have cost high have given good satisfaction. Domestic canned sardines are so far a light pack. We quote :

GREEN FRUIT.—Dealers are very busy. There is a particularly good sale for new apples, which are of good quality. Bananas are very large sellers. Oranges have but a limited business. Some very nice Jamaicas are now offered. Lemons are high ; there is a steady sale. Melons are dull. The sale of California pears, peaches and plums is large. Berries are out of the market. We quote :

DRIED FRUIT.—Spot business is light. In prunes and raisins the last year was disappointing with considerable stock still held; buyers take hold lightly of futures. Evaporated apples are firmer; spot business light. New prunes and raisins will, it is expected, cost higher than last year. Apricots are very high. Nuts will rule at quite low prices. We quote:

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL.—In flour, Manitoba is firm at the advance. Ontario is still unchanged with a steady sale. Oats and oatmeal are quite firm. There is little business doing. NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, August 17, 1903.

THE wholesale grocery trade in this city continues exceedingly good considering the season of the year, and dealers are quite satisfied that they are doing rather better than the average business. Conditions are fairly satisfactory, payments being very little below the average, and the prospects for the balance of the year are exceedingly bright. The fact is that crops are turning out much better than formerly predicted, and this means everything to the grocer as well as to other lines of trade.

The molasses and sugar trade has been quite brisk of late, and on the recent sugar rise quite heavy orders came in, as it was expected that prices might run still higher. Two more small cargoes of molasses arrived during the week and a large quantity of sugar came by the regular West India P.&B. steamer. Molasses remains very firm and the quantity of Porto Rico in store is very much smaller than usual at this point.

The produce market is becoming quite active, especially in green stuffs, and there is considerable being hawked about the streets. Old potatoes are about out of the market for local use, but quite a quantity may still be purchased, most of which will go to the southern markets until new potatoes are fit to ship. New potatoes are coming in quite freely and the high opening price has eased off considerably.

Eggs are a little firmer and are selling at 15 to 16c. This is high for the season. Prince Edward Island stock sells slightly lower—the usual difference being one cent. The butter market is now well stocked, best grades of dairy selling at 16 to 17c., and creamery at 21c. Considerable tub butter is being brought from Western Ontario, a good grade of which has been purchased in two or three hundred tub lots, at 14½c. f.o.b. Cheese is coming in freely and the situation is somewhat easier locally.

Flour and feeds are firm and there is a good demand for the latter for feeding purposes. Flour has lately advanced 15c. and best Manitoba is quoted at $4.80 in carload lots. Middlings are scarce and quoted at $23 to $24, bran is quoted at $19.50 to $20.50. Hay, old stock, is pretty well sold up, and on account of the better crop prospects the price has run down to about a level of $12.50 for good stock. Oats have also declined and can be got now for a little better than 40c., although some dealers are still asking the old price—44 to 45c. Cornmeal has an upward tendency as there is a scarcity of corn available; the price is $3 to $3.15.

Canned goods are now being offered freely and the opening prices are reported slightly higher than last year. The fruit already put up is good, especially in strawberries. Corn and tomato prices have not yet been named as the full pack has not yet been fairly estimated. Reports come from British Columbia that the pack of salmon will be smaller than usual, and that last year's high prices will prevail.

R.C.H.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, August 17, 1903.

YOUR correspondent is almost ashamed to state once more that there is nothing of interest to report in the grocery and provision world of Winnipeg. The happenings of the week, apart from the caterers' excursion which is dealt with at length elsewhere, are very small indeed and not one change of price is recorded in any line for the week.

GREEN FRUIT.—This prospect is not alluring. The California plums have all advanced and so have the peaches. The supplies are scanty and so far the supplies that may be looked for from Washington and Oregon are an unknown quantity. Some Washington crab-apples arrived during the week and were a very fine sample and very moderate in price. So far nothing has been heard of British Columbia fruit. The crop in that province is not a bumper one and the Northwest Territories will probably consume all they had to spare. About 50 baskets of Ontario plums arrived during the week and though they were in good condition the day they arrived, they had to be repacked the following day. Perhaps in the next forty years the Ontario fruit grower will learn not to ship plums 1,500 miles thrown together in 20-in. baskets. Ontario tomatoes are beginning to arrive and so far are of excellent quality. Reports from the east indicate that apples and grapes will be abundant. The demand for fruit in the West is larger than it was last year and people seem willing to pay good prices if they can get what they want.

EGGS.—Are still scarce and dear and the hope of moderately cheap eggs is over for the season, as the harvest season is now in full swing, and after that comes the threshing, all of which demands the supply of large quantities of eggs in the country.

FOWL.—The supplies have improved slightly during the week but are still very inadequate to the demand.

Evaporated apricots are now so high that the new crop cannot be sold on this market under 11½ to 12½c. Evaporated apples are also very high and fresh stocks coming in would cost at least 7½c. to lay down.

In the provisions section of the market everything is moving very quietly. Supplies are not lavish in any of the dairy lines and for this reason prices are holding firm at last figures.

Mr. H. G. Browne, agent for the Ubero coffees, is in the city. His visit is in connection with the appointment of Messrs. Foley, Lock & Larson as agents of the company for Manitoba and the Northwest. Mr. Brown is making only a flying visit, but expects to return in a short time when extensive demonstrating advertising will be undertaken in one of the principal dry goods stores.

D. L. Lockerby, of Lockerby Bros., Montreal, also made his annual visit. Mr. Lockerby has visited the West almost every year since his first trip in 1878, and feels that the faith he then placed in the country has been justified.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B.C., August 15, 1903.

THE movement to form a weekly market in Vancouver for farm produce is meeting with strong support. An influential committee comprising delegates from the Board of Trade, the Tourist Association, the Trades and Labor Council and from the general public, has been organized and a meeting is convened for this evening, when details will be discussed and a definite plan prepared for submission to the City Council.

The rapid expansion of the agricultural industry in all lines on the lower mainland and on the many arable islands of the adjacent Gulf of Georgia, is producing a marked change in conditions as they have existed in this province for years. The only successful market for farm produce held weekly has been that at New Westminster, and it has, like many of the same sort in Ontario and Eastern Canada, been a big boon to farmers and consumers in the city alike. The dealers of Vancouver have for years patronized this market extensively, and the move to bring about a similar establisnment in Vancouver is heartily approved by the ranchers as well as by citizens.

Reports from the Kootenays continue to show improvement in business conditions. Mining, especially in such camps as Rossland, is assuming a more active aspect, and new properties are being put on the shipping list, as well as old properties resuming shipments. There is a feeling of strength in the silver lead camps of the Slocan and other districts too, ascribed in large measure to the recent enactment respecting a bounty on lead ore and lead manufactured.

The sugar ship Silesia, of the German Kosmos Line, which has been discharging a cargo of 1,450 tons of raw sugar from Salaverry, Peru, sailed this week for the Sound, where she loads cargo for Europe.

The packing of halibut in bricks, similar to cod, has been made a successful commercial venture by The Western Canadian Fish Co., an extensive concern organized here to exploit other varieties of fish than the salmon. They operate a large fish-curing plant. One schooner is now in Behring Sea on her first voyage fishing grey cod, and is expected to return in September with a full cargo of 250 tons or more of salted codfish. Reports received from the master of the vessel indicate that the schooner is meeting with success. This is the first attempt to establish the cod-fishing industry in British Columbia, and it promises to be successful.

The success The Western Canadian Co. is making in drying and curing halibut is the more noteworthy, in that several processes have been tried elsewhere with no success heretofore. Several cars of the dried and cured halibut have been placed on the market of the Eastern States. The fish is bricked and wrapped in neat paper cartons, giving it an attractive appearance.

The fruit market here is in a better condition than it was a short time ago. There have been some more condemnations of California fruit, but principally apples. Some improvement is always noted in quality of shipments as the season advances, the fruits from the higher lands of the Golden State apparently being freer from pests which are detrimental to fruit trees. Carlots, as well as direct consignments by steamer, are liberal in receipt. In watermelons, the trade here this year has been pretty extensive. No less than seven straight cars of California lemons have been received so far this season.

Other stocks of fruit are coming in freely. Apricots are over, Burbank plums nearly so, and their place is being taken by other varieties. Early Crawford peaches are in fairly good supply, though the indications are that the prices will be firm this year. A car of preserving peaches arrived to-day. Bartlett pears are plentiful. The black grapes, Muscats and Tokays are on the market. Oranges of Valencia, Mediterranean Sweets and a few Seedlings are up to requirements, local demand not being heavy. Lemons are in brisker demand than of late, warmer weather having had a stimulating effect on demand. Gravenstein apples from California and Early Transparent, of local growth, are in the market.

Prices are about as follows: Oranges, $3 to $4; lemons, $4 to $4.50, and $5 for fancy; apples, Gravensteins, $1.75 to $2, Early Transparent, $1 per box; plums, $1.35 to $1.50; peaches, Crawfords, $1.25; pears, Bartletts, $2 to $2.25 per box, (same size as apple box); watermelons, $3.50 to $4 per box, nutmeg melons, $3 to $3.50 per crate, cantelopes, $4 to $4.50 per crate; black grapes, $2 to $2.50, Muscats, $2 to $2.50, Tokays, $2 to $2.25; tomatoes, $1.50 per 20-lb. box. These are still from California, though local product will soon be in.

In dairy produce, butter is slightly firmer, partly due to the action of the local creameries, raising the price this week. It is said the quotation to jobbers for local creamery in bricks is now 30c. This is not important in view of fairly good supplies of first-class Manitoba and Northwest Territories creamery. This is quoted still at 20 to 22c., in boxes, as to size, with 1c. added for bricking. Dairy sells at 18 to 20c. to the trade. Eggs are firm at 20c. and even 21c. Ontario stock is still the supply in chief. Cheese is held at about 13c. to the trade, though Manitoba makers are said to be asking as much as 10½c. there at the present.

Grocery receipts by steamer from California this week are as follows, the principal imports being listed only: macaroni paste, 670 cases, evaporated apples, 50 cases, 50 kits salted mackerel, 137 cases lemons, 85 sacks onions, 10 cases tamales, 5 cases farina, 170 canned goods, 35 kegs olives, 20 kits herrings, 100 tins matches.

Receipts of new season's canned goods from the east are yet confined to peas, a car or two having been distributed in this market in the past week.

G.S.B.P.

OTTAWA TRADE GOSSIP.

BUSINESS during the past two weeks, judging from what travellers for local houses say, has been somewhat slack. This week has brightened up though as people are beginning to return to the city. Merchants are looking forward to a good Fall business.

Hard sugars advanced 5c. last Saturday making granulated $4.27 in barrels and $4.22 in bags. Yellow sugars remain the same at $3.57 in barrels and $3.52 in bags.

In canned goods, some houses here have stopped taking orders for future guaranteed delivery of tomatoes and corn as reports from the West say that on account of the unfavorable weather conditions prospects are for a small crop. New crop peas are now in stock with wholesalers.

In canned salmon sharp advances are looked for as advices from the coast indicate a shortage in the pack.

New raisins are expected about September 1. Orders for small lots have been booked with a price on arrival.

Currants will undoubtedly be higher than last year.

Wholesalers say there is no possibility of receiving any cheap Japan tea this season.

Flour advanced another 10c. a barrel this week.

Cheese sold on this board on Friday last at an advance; the price obtained was 10⅛c. and everything was cleaned up. It is thought that the price will be maintained as it is getting so near September, when cheese is bought for keeping purposes.

Rice is still advancing. Quotations this week are $3.50 in large sacks and $3.60 to $3.70 in small lots.

At the Ottawa Fruit Exchange the receipts of Ontario fruit have been large. Great quantities of peaches, plums, apples and pears are arriving daily in baskets. Prices have been very good considering. Clingstone peaches in 12 qts. bring 30 to 40c., in half baskets, 25 to 30c. Plums in 12 qts., 47½ to 50c., in half baskets, 25 to 30c. Pears, 35 to 40c., Bartlett pears, 40 to 60c. Apples, 20 to 35c. Tomatoes are scarcer this week and selling from 50 to 65c. Blackberries 5½ to 7c. Blueberries, 90 to $1.10. Watermelons are bringing from 22 to 25c. Bananas are plentiful and the demand is slackening owing to so much other fruits. Prices for good stock are about $1 to $1.40, seconds, 75c. to $1.

NOTES

The secretary of The Central Canada Fair is a busy man these days. Great preparations are being made for this year's exhibition, which promises to eclipse all previous, in size and attractions.

In reference to the article on bananas in last week's "Grocer" your correspondent, in speaking with the manager of the Fruit Exchange here learned that 75 per cent. came direct through St. John, New York or Boston ports. There was a time some years ago when Ottawa had to play second fiddle in the fruit business, but not now.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. Waller, agent for Messrs. Hunt & Co., Yokohama, Japan, is visiting the Montreal trade this week.

Mr. H. Bell Irving, of The Anglo-British Columbia Packing Co., Limited, Vancouver, is representing the Vancouver Board of Trade at the congress of chambers of commerce, now in session in Montreal.

Mr. Arnold, of Messrs. R. Herron & Co., is in Montreal this week, having just finished a most prosperous trip through the West. Where he goes, goes "Red Cross" jelly powder, and if orders indicate work, he certainly seems to have done his share.

Mr. Wm. Dobie, general manager of E. W. Gillett Co., Limited, and Mr. C. R. Gillett, of Chicago, returned to Toronto a few days ago from a fishing expedition and brought back fine strings of black bass and maskinonge.

Mr. J. F. Holden, Western Ontario representative of E. W. Gillett Co., Limited, has just returned from Winnipeg and Brandon, where his company sent him to do some special work at the fairs. Mr. Holden reports that everything in the West is booming.

Messrs. J. A. Mathewson & Co., Montreal, are in receipt of very encouraging news as to the popularity of the "Quaker" Ceylon package teas in the Transvaal, S.A. The representatives there report sales of several tons of "Quaker" tea and look for increased business.

A visitor to Montreal markets this week is Mr. W. A. Clark, of The Toronto Cream & Butter Co., Limited, 11 Jarvis street, Toronto. Mr. Clark reports business very good. On the cheese question he looks for easier prices, as the production this season will exceed all previous records.

A visitor to the Montreal office of "The Grocer" this week was Mr. A. A. Steward, of Messrs. L. & J. A. Steward, Rutland, Vt., manufacturers of tin cans and can-making machinery. Mr. Steward has placed a number of their improved and patented can-making machines with Montreal packers, and, having a good article—an automatic double seamer—and being a wide-awake hustler, will, no doubt, be able to interest packers in the West, to which territory he contemplates paying a trip shortly.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Contributors are requested to send news only, not puffs of goods they handle, or the arrival of standard goods that everyone has in stock, or that they are offering goods at close figures, or that they have had an unusually large sale this season.

E. D. Marceau, Montreal, are receiving by steamship Kaga Maru, 115 hf.-chs. Condor XXX Japan tea. These teas are expected in about 15 or 20 days, and parties having trade for very fine liquoring teas should find it interesting to inquire for same.

Hudon, Hebert & Cie, Montreal, report full lines of Japan teas, ranging from 18 to 35c. These are reported as fine samples and good liquoring teas.

L. Chaput, Fils & Cie, Montreal, are offering special values in Valencias, also table raisins, at very low prices. These goods are kept in cold storage and are in excellent condition.

The attention of the trade is called to the ad. of Snowdon, Forbes & Co., Montreal, in this week's issue of "The Grocer." Rowat's pickles and olives are now become staple articles, and as the prices are attractive and the quality of the best, dealers will find them of interest. Mr. Forbes has just returned from a trip through Ontario, and his sales of these goods are most satisfactory. Since their introduction to the Canadian market they have popularized themselves.

"Ubero" coffee is in stock with L. Chaput, Fils & Cie, Montreal, another carload having been received this week. Repeat orders from the trade speak value in this goods.

Hudon, Hebert & Cie, Montreal, have received a shinment of 500 cases of byrrh wine, which they are offering at special values.

The F. J. Castle Co. have been appointed selling agents for Ottawa and vicinity for "Ubero" coffee, which is being pushed so extensively at present.

The Ottawa Milling Co. are making a great hit with their K. Y. rolled oats in the Old Country.

Laporte, Martin & Cie, Montreal, report arriving shortly shipments of the "Duchess" and "Lady" brands of green Ceylon teas, and as these are especially good values, intending buyers should avail themselves of the opportunity to secure their requirements. This firm are also expecting any day shipments of "Victoria" and "Princess Louise" brands of Japans. Special values are offered.

T. Collins & Co., St. John, offer splendid values in New Orleans molasses.

Paterson's camp coffee has a large sale at this season. It is practically the only liquid coffee sold at St. John, N.B.

Laporte, Martin & Cie, Montreal, have arriving shortly full lines of English candied peels.

Maconochie's pickles have been received this week by Bowman & Cole, St. John, N.B.

Lucas, Steele & Bristol are offering splendid values in washboards—brass, nickel and enamel—very dainty.

S. J. Major, Ottawa, reports receiving into stock this week a carload of Williams Bros. & Co., Detroit, pickles, jams, etc., and they are in a position to offer them at interesting prices.

The whole cloves, pepper, pickling spice, etc., offered by Lucas, Steele & Bristol are snaps.

Finished Ceylon teas, packed similar to Japans, rattanned and matted, are a leading feature with The F. J. Castle Co., Ltd., of Ottawa, and prices are quoted as attractive.

Malt vinegar in 10, 20 and 30 gallon packages may be procured from Lucas, Steele & Bristol.

Japans, new, 18½c., are offered by Lucas, Steele & Bristol.

The F. J. Castle Co., Ltd., Ottawa, report expected shipment in two weeks of new Valencia raisins, Trenor's Blue Eagle brand. Most of the shipment has been placed. Intending buyers should communicate with the firm.

H. N. Bate & Sons, Ottawa, are in receipt of large shipments of Trinidad sugar, in bags, which they are offering to the trade at interesting prices.

Myers' Royal Cattle Spice is sold by H. N. Bate & Sons, Ottawa. This firm are sole selling agents for Myers' & Co.'s celebrated Royal Spice for cattle and poultry for Eastern Ontario and Western Quebec.

INDIAN AND CEYLON TEAS.

Notes on Indian and Ceylon teas for the month of July published by McMeekin & Co., London, Eng., at hand report:

INDIAN.—From India there are reports of good quality teas to arrive later on and also of heavier shipments to the United Kingdom. Instead of a decrease the exports from India to the United Kingdom now show a considerable increase, the total shipped in July being a record for that month. Avoid coarse picking, has been urged strongly upon all producers, but many estates show largely increased yields, the increase doubtless being to some extent attributable to the climatic conditions peculiar to this season. The Russian and some other foreign demands having been largely supplied direct will take away some aid previously available in London when handling large quantities.

CEYLON.—The quality being produced for several weeks back has, by telegram, been reported to show improvement and the quantity shipped is again falling off and not in excess of current requirements for the United Kingdom.

GREEN TEAS.—216 packages of Indian and 751 packages of Ceylon were offered, but attracted little attention from the trade.

INDIAN TEAS.

Indian Planting and Gardening says: Quality of tea to hand from the districts continue to keep at and above fair average, with the exception of Dooars, which is a district with a "contrairy" disposition. Climatic conditions have told very heavily against the Dooars recently and teas are weathery, but we understand that a spell of better weather has been experienced, and while the rush of leaf has been checked, better quality may be expected.

TEA FROM JAMAICA.

It has long been considered practicable to cultivate tea in Jamaica, and Sir Alfred Jones, of The Elder-Dempster Line, has commissioned Mr. Dawson, an Indian tea expert, to report on the subject. The latter, after completing his prospecting tour, states that there is a good opening for persons desirous of investing money in the cultivation of tea in the island.

The tea grown experimentally in Jamaica resembles, in many respects, the finer Chinese blends, and is quite unlike that produced in Ceylon.

Zanzibar cloves will be short this year, a crop of 80,000 bales being in prospect, 30,000 bales less than one year ago. Cassia is firm in the East, and reported short compared with the crop of one year ago. New season in order will be in market about the first of September.

Window and Interior Displays

Timely Hints and Suggestions.

Window Dressing Important.

IF you have something you would like to sell, and sell quickly, the first thing required to effect your wish is to let people know. How are you to let them know? There are many ways of doing so, all of which might be classed under the general term of advertising. The two principal means of advertising are the newspaper and the window. These are the two media through which a very large part of advertising is done.

Without doubt advertising is the great business producer of the present day. Every manufacturer knows perfectly well that to introduce his goods on the market he must advertise; and having succeeded in placing them there he must still advertise to keep them there. He knows the truth of that maxim "Out of sight, out of mind," and he recognizes that unless he keeps his name and his goods ever before the people they will soon forget. The same is the case with the wholesaler: he must keep advertising. He must advertise in the newspapers and in the trade journals; he must send out his travellers to call on the retail trade to push the old lines and to introduce special or new lines to the market.

The manufacturer must advertise and so must the retailer: he cannot exempt himself from that necessity any more than can the manufacturer or the wholesaler. In the case of retailers in large cities, where newspaper advertising that would bring results is practically out of the question, on account of the cost, window display is certainly the best advertising medium. The large city retailer has chances galore of advertising his goods in the arrangement of his window display. If he is on one of the principal streets these chances are multiplied. Thousands upon thousands of people pass his store daily, and in that fact lie his opportunities. As each person passes the retailer is afforded an opportunity of advertising his goods and his store. It is up to him to take advantage of these opportunities. The majority of the thousands that pass his store daily are people who notice things if they are at all prominent and attractive. The retailer should make his window-display prominent and attractive with the goods he wishes to sell. If he is offering the goods at a special price they should be neatly ticketed with that price, and even if they are to be sold at the ordinary quotation, a price-ticket neatly designed adds prominence to the display. The passing person sees the goods and reads the prices. Is that not as good as a newspaper advertisement? It is certainly! That is not all the window display does, however. Having seen the goods and read the prices, the person, if he wishes to make a purchase, has the open door in front of him; he has only to step within and make the desired purchases. Does the newspaper advertisement come up to that? By no means. The person reading of the goods in the newspaper may be miles from the store. The attention of the person may be attracted and a desire aroused to buy, but the open door is not before him and he cannot step right in and buy. He has to wait until he is down town, and perhaps by that time he has forgotten all about it or, remembering it, perhaps the desire to possess has left him. So that the disadvantage of not being in a position to advertise in newspapers, is, in a measure, made up by the great advantages the large city grocer has of advertising his goods in his display window.

Although the grocer in the smaller places has his local newspaper to advertise in, he has not the chances his city brother has of advertising his goods in the show-window. There are not thousands upon thousands of people passing his store daily. He hasn't the chance of picking up chance customers which, through his window display, the city grocer has. However, because that is so he should not neglect his window dressing. He can get some chance customers by it, and the better his window is dressed, the more he will attract to his store. Should the grocer have a large farmers' trade it would be a good idea to have his window-display coincide with his newspaper advertisement; what he advertises in his newspaper space he should advertise in his window display. The farmer reads of the goods in his newspaper at home, and the next time he comes into town there is the same advertisement staring him in the face from the display window. Would he not be more taken with the goods than if he had read of one thing at home, and upon arriving at the store, found an altogether different line of goods displayed? For the trade of the townspeople it would, of course, be of advantage to do the same thing, but not so much so as for that of the farmers.

Leaving the question of the advertising side of a good window-display, is not the mere appearance of a good window-display of great importance to a store? Would not a person sooner be a regular customer at a store where the window was attractively dressed than at a store where the appearance of the window said plainly that window-dressing was not given much attention? Those questions hardly need an answer. Window-dressing is not only to attract chance custom but also to get permanent customers and to retain the customers already dealing at a store.

A Window Display Competition.

THE CANADIAN GROCER, for the encouragement of tasty window displays, has decided to open a competition for its subscribers. Prizes will be awarded for photos or drawings of window displays and accompanying descriptions of the same. The prizes will consist of:

First Prize - - -	$10
Second Prize -	$7

and $2 for every picture and description which is considered worthy of publication.

The competition, which closes on Sept. 1, will admit of photographs, pen and ink or wash drawings, with good ideas counting more than the picture itself, although, of course, all pictures in order to receive a prize, must be of sufficient distinctness and good workmanship to admit of their publication.

There is no progressive merchant but has at least one window a month that is worthy of entering this competition, and the prizes are so arranged that, even if a window does not win the $10, $7 or $5 prize, it may be awarded a $2 prize, provided only that it is of sufficient merit to publish in the columns of this paper. This award will cover the cost of the photograph and there is no reason why any merchant should not obtain it. The number of photographs or drawings submitted by each store is not limited, nor is the number of $2 prizes; a merchant may win a dozen if his pictures merit them.

Should any intending competitor not know how to take a window picture, this paper will be glad to furnish him with instructions. In general terms, it may be stated that the early morning, when the light is clear, when few people are abroad and when there is the least reflection, is the best time to photograph the display. A good photograph can also be taken at night by the aid of an electric or flash light.

Mark all manuscripts and photographs intended for this department with the words "Window Dressing Competition."

In their Pictou factories, which are devoted exclusively to the making of biscuits and confectionery, the firmemploy 180 hands and are unable to keep up with the demand for their goods. In Halifax, if he centralized his business there, Mr. Hamilton expects to have 500 employes within five years.

WINNIPEG CATERERS' PICNIC.

THERE is one day in the whole long year that the caterers of Winnipeg call their own. Christmas, New Year's, Good Friday, Victoria Day, the First of July, all have their hours of duty for those who supply the hub of the Empire of the West with foodstuffs. Just once a year, usually about the middle of August, an excursion is arranged for. For some years the trip was made to Rat Portage, again Portage la Prairie, Morden and Carman were visited. This year the new Summer resort, Winnipeg Beach, was decided upon, and the date fixed for August 13. The caterers' outing is always looked upon as a pre-eminently safe excursion to take, if you want to have a good time. The whole thing is admirably managed and the convenience and comfort of those who attend is carefully studied. This year, the distance from the city being only 52 miles, the attendance was even larger than usual, at least 2,000 people going out. The run down was made in three trains, timed to start from the city one hour apart, the first one leaving at 8.30 in the morning. The day in Winnipeg was very unpromising, as a spitting, spiteful shower began about nine o'clock, but nothing dampened the enthusiasm, and the caterers were rewarded with an ideal day at the beach. It was not too hot, not too cold, there was just enough sun and not too much. The crowd on leaving the trains made for the lovely crescent of white sand that marks the beach, strolled through the woods or went out in the flotilla of sail boats that, with gaily decorated sails, lay at anchor when the crowd landed.

Leaving town early, and the bracing air of the shore and woods developing fine appetites at an early hour, from 12 until two the whole company gave themselves up to supplying the wants of the inner man. It was a basket picnic, and jolly family parties were to be seen everywhere. An abundance of comfortable tables and seats were provided under the lovely trees; others preferred the big dancing pavilion, which is also provided with tables and chairs. Others again went in for the more primitive method of spreading their cloths on the grass. Tea, coffee and milk were supplied free, as was also boiling water, for the making of tea where parties preferred their own private brand. For those who did not care to trouble with baskets and were not attached to any party, comfortable meals at reasonable prices were furnished in the pavilion dining-room, and also in a large tent on the grounds. The caterers' picnic is always noted for the profusion of excellent eatables and this year seemed to surpass every other for the abundance and quality of the good things provided.

THE SPORTS.

Immediately after dinner the crowds lined the beach to witness the sports. The water was too rough for all the sports but a number were gone through with great enthusiasm. The first event was a single canoe race for which there were seven competitors, J. Noel winning the first and R. T. Riley second. The double canoe races and the polo game in canoes had to be called off owing to the roughness of the water.

The men's swimming race of 100 yards was won by H. Sawyer first, and W. D. Dolman, second.

For the boys' swimming race five lads entered: D. R. Rollo came in first and John Mack second.

In the swimming race for ladies, the roughness of the water daunted all but Mrs. Stone, of the Spencer block. Mrs. Stone holds gold medals for swimming contests in England, and as she had no competitor, gave a very interesting exhibition of trick swimming and diving. The committee thought this effort fully merited the prize, which was duly awarded to Mrs. Stone.

The pig hunt was the gem of the afternoon. His pigship had been donated by Gordon, Ironsides & Fares, and after a short and devious career, was captured by R. Elwood.

The tug-of-war wound up the sports for the day. The first tug was between the travellers and butchers. Having won the first heat, the butchers next tried a tug with the grocers and were again victorious. The teams engaged were: Butchers—Charlie Hood, W. Danskin, E. M. Oliver, F. McCuaig, G. Elliott, Geo. Hill, E. Elliott. Travellers—T. J. Riley, J. D. Wildburg, J. Patterson, D. D. McRae, A. Douglas, M. Richardson, J. Cairns. Grocers—W. R. Johnson, Thos. Bell, J. Thorgison, W. McRae, M. Matheson, J. R. Gowler and W. B. Francis.

For those who were not interested in sport, there was dancing. Wigston's orchestra discoursed sweet music all the afternoon and, in fact, until the last train left in the evening. As the floor was in excellent condition there were many dancers.

The A.O.U.W. band played a number of selections down on the beach and also on the platform leading to the pavilion.

The run home was very comfortable, the first train arriving at 10 o'clock and the last before midnight.

The officers of the association are to be congratulated on the success of the outing and if any special bouquets are to be thrown, they should go to W. G. Locke, the secretary; Ben Holman, of the Finance Committee, and President Alderman Campbell.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

The Open Door.

CANADIAN millers are kept busy filling domestic orders, and on this account there is in some quarters a spirit of indifference regarding wider and more distant markets—notably those of the Far East. It seems too bad that present advantages should not be followed up, that the fame and prestige Canadian flour has acquired should be allowed to languish for want of interest and effort on the part of Canadian millers.

It may be true—doubtless is—that the home consumption is equal to and greater than the supply, and it may seem to be business prudence to cater to the market most easily and simply reached; but there are other considerations that must be taken into account. To seize the present and be careless or unmindful of the future is not and never was good business.

Both men and nations are apt to become short-sighted, over-confident, and a trifle lazy when their wealth multiplies A fat wolf is a poor hunter. It will pay our millers to look beyond the immediate present, to ponder over the questions: Will the home market continue to absorb our output? If not, where shall we send our surplus?

The wheat areas of the West are growing enormously, and the wheat yield likewise. It is one of our fondest dreams that we shall supply the Empire with bread.

That Britain may always be counted upon to be a liberal customer goes without saying, but the British market is a free one, where every country growing wheat may offer its surplus. Thus prices are never likely to be so good as they would be if competition were not met with. It would seem that Canadian flour in Japan, for example, has established such a distinguished position that it is wanted to the exclusion of all other offerings. This being so, Canadian flour commands a premium—a premium which represents an annual extra profit worth going after.

Quick Work.

MILLING, a Liverpool journal, says in a recent issue: Canadian farmers have learnt to hustle quite as well as their Yankee brethren across the frontier. A Toronto correspondent has mailed an interesting story of Canadian smartness. He says the farm of G. N. Barrie, at North Dumfries, in Waterloo County, had some wheat in the sheaf at three o'clock in the afternoon, which at six o'clock the same evening had become scones. When the operation began, a wagon stood in the barn with about half a load of grain in the sheaf. Beside it was a thresher, and connected with the thresher was a gasoline engine. The engine was started, the sheaves were fed into a cylinder, and the grain, carried by an elevator, was deposited in a bin. Then power was transferred to the cleaner and the work of changing the newly threshed wheat into flour was quickly carried through. The rest of the task was, of course, easy. If this typifies Canadian smartness, Chicago must begin to look to its laurels, for the States will find they have a young and strenuous competitor in the Dominion. To our Canadian cousins Britons everywhere will say with honest pride: "More power to your elbow."

Latest Crop News.

LATE crop reports received by Mr. Hartney, Manitoba Government Agent in Toronto, are more encouraging than those of a couple of weeks ago. The recent rains have done much good, and in several places the wheat is headed out with the full six rows. While the total yield will not be nearly up to what was anticipated early in the season, it is expected that an average yield of 18 bushels to the acre throughout Manitoba will be realized.

It is stated that the present crop will be a good paying one for Manitoba. For one thing, higher prices for wheat are confidently expected, which will make up considerably what is lost in the quantity produced. The thin and short quality of the straw also renders threshing much easier, and thus saves in the cost.

The crop situation in Southern Manitoba is summed up by Mr. Hartney as follows: The average yield from Killarney and Miami east will be 10 bushels to the acre, while from those points and Brandon to the west the yield will average from 18 to 20 bushels to the acre.

In the Red River Valley the grain is ripening rapidly, and is not only thin on the ground, but the straw is too light in color to give first-class returns. To the west the crops are much better, though cutting will not be general before August 20. Few of the fields are showing color, but nearly all appear to be in a good healthy condition. Some of them will go as high as 25 to 30 bushels, while others will not go beyond 12½ to 15 bushels to the acre. This country enjoyed a number of showers at the critical stage in its growth, and, if the present market price of wheat holds, the farmers will be even better off than last year.

Oriental Flour Trade.

THE more or less strained relations between Japan and Russia, with the prospective shortage of the wheat crop of the island kingdom, is resulting in a commercial benefit to the United States, in that Japan is buying an unusual amount of American flour at this time, says The Seattle Post Intelligencer. Never before at this season of the year have the flour shipments been so heavy. The state of Washington is supplying the bulk of flour shipped to Japan from the ports of Puget Sound.

During the month now closing no less than 90,000 bbls. have been consigned to the principal cities of the Mikado's country from Seattle by vessels of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha line alone. Proportionately as much went by the Tacoma and Vancouver lines, to say nothing of the shipments from Portland and San Francisco.

No specific reason has been given for wheat shortage in Japan, and none really may exist. Nevertheless, Japan is buying an enormous amount of flour, which gives force to the murmurings of war between the Czar and the Mikado It is known, too, that Japan is drawing upon China for American flour.

Owing to the warm, damp climate of China in Summer, flour does not keep well. It is unsafe to carry very large stocks. Hongkong, usually the great depot for American flour shipped to China, has her warehouses full, but these she is emptying to Japan.

For nearly two months the flour shipments to China have been light. They will increase again about August 15, running heavy throughout the Fall and Win-

While Japan and China grow wheat, their production is infinitesimal as compared with the demands for flour from their millions of population.

Cereal Evolution.

IT is interesting to consider the success of the new forms of breakfast cereals.

For so long we had only the cruder forms of meals—wheat, corn and oats. Then, with improved machinery, there were produced finer grades of these meals. Later came the rolled or flaked grain, requiring very few minutes to prepare. Now we have cereals already cooked, ready for immediate serving. This last form has been put on the market with amazing swiftness. The public were not asked whether or not they liked cereals of this sort; they were practically compelled to buy and eat. But once tasted the ready-for-serving cereals won great favor, until in many households they are used exclusively. They are wholesome, tasty and convenient, and when served with cream, or with fruit and cream, are yet more to be desired. It would not do for us to say that the older forms of breakfast cereals are becoming obsolete: indeed, there are feequent evidences of a reaction, and, in any event, one is safe in saying that oats as a basic grain will never be superseded. In view, too, of the multitudinous forms breakfast foods have assumed in the last few years, it may be reasonably expected that the succeeding years will continue to see other and still newer cereal preparations offered.

The cost of putting a new cereal on the market has become so great that many good things have not been neard of. Most of us know something of the extent and cost of the advertising of such cereals, for example, as Pettijohn's Quaker oats, Tillson's oats, Force, Malta Vita and Shredded Wheat. It has been advertising that has made their names household words. Appreciating the tremendous influence advertising has on the public mind, some of our Canadian millers are using liberal space in the press, and by other means are widening and ensuring a market for their especial brands. The value of advertising has been signally demonstrated in the matter of breakfast foods. The wise miller will profit by this knowledge.

A Canadian Invasion.

We have heard very much of late of the invasion of foreign markets by the American manufacturer, but of late Canada has been doing remarkably well in the invading line herself.

The export trade of the Tillson firm alone is worthy of notice. It has grown enormously of late and covered during the past few days large shipments to Holland and Norway.

A Bumper Crop in the Territories.

THE wheat and other crops in the Northwest Territories are estimated to be in good condition, and to be the largest in the history of the country. The total wheat crop is estimated at 15,042,000 bushels. Last year's was 13,956,850 bushels, and the next previous 12,808,447 bushels. Before that the crop was inconsiderable. The total wheat acreage is 727,998, that of the next previous years being 625,757 and 501,697 respectively.

The yield is lighter than last year, but still a good one. The Calgary district has had perfect conditions all along, and another district is ten days earlier.

The oats acreage is 365,719, the next largest being last year's, 310,357. The crop is estimated at 11,803,000 bushels, the best yet, the next largest, that of 1891, being 11,113,066 bushels.

The barley figures are: Acreage, 42,445; last year, 36,455; crop estimated 1,116,300 bushels; last year, 870,117 bushels.

Flax, as well, is the best yet, and indeed, shows the best of any of the other Territorial crops. The acreage is 27,509 against 15,067 last year. The estimated crop is 634,500 bushels against 258,185 bushels last year.

Millstones in England.

IT would appear that the millstone is still pretty largely in evidence in England, according to figures presented by Milling, of Liverpool. In 1880, our contemporary says, there were 10,000 flour millers in the United Kingdom. Of these only 1,000 remain, and most of these are feed millers as well as flour millers. The other 9,000 are now represented by say 6,000 feed mills ("provender mills," they call them), and it figures that each of the 1,000 flour mills and 6,000 feed mills uses on an average two runs of stones or their equivalent. This would make 14,000 pairs of stones or their roller equivalents as in use for feed grinding; but Milling considers that nine-tenths of this number, or 1,0, would represent the pairs of millstones actually in use. It also figures that it costs $125,000 per year to dress these stones, which would seem to offer a fruitful field for the revival of the old stone dressing machines.

The Manitoba Harvest.

Harvesting commenced in Manitoba ten days earlier than last year, and The Lake of the Woods Milling Co. received last week some excellent samples of this season's threshing.

Cereal Notes.

There is quite a demand for the "Sunny Jim" buttons, the advertising novelty recently issued by The Force Food Co.

Albert N. Reay, Canadian representative of The Force Food Co., reports business as well above the average in Eastern Canada.

Several of our cereal and food manufacturers purpose making large exhibits at the Dominion Exhibition in Toronto next week.

The wheat crop in Grey County is showing up well this season. The yield in some sections being at least 35 bushels to the acre.

A permanent exhibition of industrial food products of Canada will be opened at the Crystal Palace, London, England, in the Autumn.

Many thousand bushels of oats grown in the Territories are now being sold in the Yukon. This market was formerly supplied from Washington and Oregon.

The greatly increasing business of The American Cereal Co., at Peterboro, has given its expensive plant all it can possibly attend to for the past few months.

Even those millers who care little for books, and have less time to read them, are anxious for a large volume of business, and exert themselves to obtain the same.

Hill's mill, Sarnia, was the first to receive new wheat in that section. The grain was of the famous Red Nigger variety, and when cleaned tested 64 pounds.

W. D. Robertson, secretary of The Tillson Co., Tillsonburg, is spending a well-earned vacation on the St. Lawrence and will not return to business before the end of the month.

The 1902 balance sheet of the Grands Moulins de Corbeil, the largest milling company in France, shows a loss of 1,28 .93 francs, about $250,000. Nearly as much was lost in 1901.

The Great West oatmeal mill at Pilot Mound, Manitoba, has been shut down for repairs and alterations. The proprietors are building a new engine room 40x54 and are putting in a new Corliss engine and boiler.

No less than 2,089 vessels passed through the U. S. canal at the Soo, and 686 through the Canadian canal in June. The number of barrels of flour was 455,876 through the U. S. canal and 433,842 through the Canadian canal.

The customs district of Jerusalem last year imported over $200,000 of flour, mostly from adjoining Turkish provinces. Ordinarily the district supplies itself, except that about $40,000 worth of Russian flour is imported to mix with the native article.

Recent shipments of Canadian flour to Trinidad have been very satisfactory. The Canadian agent general at Jamaica notes the increased exports of Canadian flour and says that it is encouraging to know that practical efforts are now being made throughout Canada to increase our trade in this direction.

The steadily growing business of The William McCann Milling Co., King street, Toronto, will necessitate some expensive additions to their plant in the very near future. Their present equipment although worked to full capacity is entirely inadequate to the task of handling the work of the present season.

At Greenock, Scotland, a flour dust explosion occurred in a peculiar manner. A neighboring distillery was in flames and thousands of gallons of burning whiskey found their way into a stream which passed down by or under a flour mill. The mill took fire and exploded, the walls falling and killing seven persons in the street.

OTTAWA'S WHOLESALE GROCERY HOUSES.

A REPRESENTATIVE of THE GROCER visited the Capital on Thursday and Friday last week. His tour among the wholesale grocers was a very agreeable and profitable one, and he was much impressed with the splendid air of prosperity evidenced on all hands by the appearance of the establishments.

The first call on the old and well-known firm of H. N. Bate & Sons on Canal street brought to knowledge a report of an unexcelled trade in all lines. Bate & Sons state that business has never been better than this year, and the prospects for the future are unusually encouraging. That Bate & Son are up-to-date in every respect was made apparent to the writer by their system of circulating price lists, a feature that impressed your representative from an advertising point of view. J. M. Bate, who is in charge of the sample room and sales department, kindly furnished him with a sample set of their method. At regular intervals a complete list of all goods carried in stock is printed in pamphlet form and is accompanied by a unique and convenient order pad for use by the customer. Attached to the pad is a pocket containing a supply of envelopes addressed to the firm, and on the face of the pocket is a small calendar for the months covering the period in which the order pads are to be used in connection with the price list enclosed. This set is sent complete on every issue to each customer of the firm. That it is found serviceable is proved by the fact that customers write in for supplies. As an old grocer, having had many years' experience in soliciting orders by mail, the writer is compelled to admit its superiority over anything that has come under his notice. The idea and system is patented, and is the invention of Mr. Bate, sr.

In visiting the wholesale house of The F. J. Castle Co., Limited, on Queen street, the writer met in the principal, Mr. Castle, an old friend, and also Mr. Lowe, who for many years was with the firm of Warren Bros. & Co., Toronto. The F. J. Castle Co., Limited, occupy one of the handsomest and best equipped jobbing houses in the country. The sample room on the ground floor is large and bright, and, with the exception of liquors, a full line of staple groceries is carried. The growth of this firm's business is such that, though they moved into their new premises only a few months ago, they are compelled to build a large addition, and building operations are now under way. A special feature with this firm is the tea business, and Mr. Castle's long experience as a tea broker, and later an exclusive tea merchant, places his firm in a position of close knowledge of this branch of the grocery trade.

Across in Lower Town on York street, your representative visited the wholesale grocery establishments of S. J. Major, Provost & Allan and Joseph Grant. A description of these establishments in detail would more than tax his descriptive powers. They are modern in every respect. The management of S. J. Major (lately deceased) is in the hands of Mr. Cote and the activity and business enterprise of his late principal is still to the fore. The sample room through which Mr. Roberge conducted the writer, contains everything in staple and fancy groceries and liquors. Business is reported as being of the best and a large Fall trade is looked forward to.

Joseph Grant's sample room and offices on York street are in every respect admirable and the arrangement of the samples on shelves and stands is most convenient. It is one of the brightest groceries in the east and reflects credit on the designer. Mr. Grant spoke enthusiastically of the condition of trade and the future outlook.

A call on Provost & Allan, where your representative was received in a most friendly manner by Mr. Provost, brought forth expressions of satisfactory business for their house. The substantial building and compact and well-arranged sample room show that in everything pertaining to the grocery line this firm are in line.

Altogether the trip to Ottawa was a very pleasant one for the writer and his reception by the trade encourages him to pay other visits to the Capital trade. As a rule the persistent and insistent advertising agent gets scant courtesy, but whether it was the pleasant weather that favored him and put every one in an amiable mood, or the inherent courtesy of the Capitalists or the writer's good looks, the fact is, a pleasant trip was his fortune.

Cultivation of Tobacco in England.

IN the early days of smoking in England tobacco was cultivated to supply the home consumption. It was largely exported to Turkey. James, in 1621, prohibited the growth of tobacco in England, not merely because he strongly objected to the practice of smoking, but with a desire to increase the revenue from the import duty.

The probibition was maintained by Charles 1., but during the Commonwealth the law was a dead letter.

Tobacco was largely cultivated in Gloucestershire. It is stated that in 1655 the county hangman plaintively remarked that the people were so busily engaged growing the herb that they had neither inclination nor time to commit sheep-stealing or any other capital offence, and that his occupation was gone. When Charles II. was on the throne in 1663, he re-enacted the prohibition of tobacco culture, and extended the law to Ireland, which previously had been exempt.

The penalty was 40s. for every rood planted with tobacco. The universities and physicians were allowed to plant half a pole of land annually for use in "physick or chirurgery." The penalty was raised in 1684 to £10 per pole.

The laws did not apply to Scotland, and large quantities were cultivated around Kelso and Jedburgh. During the war of independence tobacco was cultivated in England for home use, but the planters were severely punished for breaking the laws of the realm.

In the Vale of York and in Rydale, in the North Riding, the tobacco was publicly burnt by the hangman, and the growers fined £30,000 and imprisoned. In 1782 the cultivation of tobacco was again prohibited in England, and in 1830 its cultivation had become so extensive in Ireland that it was also prohibited there.

In no part of the United Kingdom could tobacco be grown for manufacturing purposes.

London Tobacco Gossip.

TRADE with all the manufacturers here continues particularly good and numbers of them are away behind with orders. A very decided stimulus has been given the Northwest trade by the recent great influx of settlers. Almost all, if not all, the London trade are participating in the additional business that is already noticeable.

The new warehouse which Line, McDonald & Co. purpose using as part of their manufacturing plant is rapidly nearing completion, and they expect to be located there about September 15th.

A very great number of out of town customers, both in the hotel and tobacconist trade, visited London for the festivities of the Old Boys' Re-union, and were one and all surprised at the magnitude of the affair.

The alleged strike has dwindled day by day until but a bakers' dozen of those who first went out remain, the majority having either left the city or engaged with other factories at old terms, while a few have renounced the union and returned to work in the non-union factories.

Almost an even dozen tobacco leaf travellers from the large centres in the United States made a point of being present at the travellers' picnic on the 1st inst., and remained for the Old Boys' Reunion. Among these visitors were some even from Havana, Cuba.

TIPS.

Do not wait for something to turn up, go at it yourself and turn something up; in other words, take a "turn" out of your show window and it will surely "turn up something" in good business for you.

Smokers smoke in Summer time practically as much as they do in the Winter, although some men contend that men smoke less in Summer. One would naturally think that a man would smoke more in Summer, as he usually smokes more in pleasant weather; he will also walk farther and perhaps distribute his trade more widely.

It is well at all times to make the store as attractive as possible—so attractive that it is practically impossible for a smoker to pass without dropping in. By making good use of the window display, the goods and catchy announcements therein will attract the transient trade.

Always be polite, Mr. Cigarman—not too polite, but just polite enough; a kind word and a pleasant smile cost nothing, and they go a long way towards making friends and increasing trade.

Tobacco is man's solace under all circumstances. With a good cigar, or a pipe full of good tobacco, the average man can fight his woes or foes; through its magic smoke even the face of his mother-in-law will appear pleasant.

PUFFS.

"Smithers never lights one of his cigars. Just keeps it in his mouth and chews the end. I've often wondered why."

"You wouldn't if you had ever smoked one of them."

"Percival, you're making a great smudge in the house with your smoking."

"Yes, ma; I'm smoking a Pittsburg stogie."

"Well, well, I've always wondered why there was so much smoke in Pittsburg, and if men smoke those things that accounts for it."

Mrs. Ham.—"My husband thinks a man can't feel at home unless he is smoking."

Mrs. Pepper.—"And that is why he thinks he will feel at home in the next world."

"Pa," said little Willie, who had been reading a cigar store advertisement, "what's imported and domestic?"

"A servant girl," replied Pa.

Smoking in the Antarctic.

THIS is a continuation of the description of life in the Antarctic derived from personal experiences of bluejackets who left the Discovery last March and sailed to New Zealand on the relief ship Morning. The entire ship's company indulged in plenty of sleep. At the conclusion of the evening meal there was not much inducement to remain out of one's bunk. The majority, however, tarried awhile over their "tot" of rum, telling yarns and smoking. There were two mandolins in the forecastle, and there were frequent calls on those who could play an accompaniment to a song. Each man was entitled to a pound of tobacco every month, and the heavy smokers had no difficulty in obtaining additional supplies. For them the Antarctic presented a singular phenomenon. They found themselves practically unable to smoke in the open. In that pure air, it seems, tobacco does not smell at all like tobacco, even to the man who is smoking it. It smells "like burning rags," so that at first the smoker suspects that his clothing is on fire; and the sensations on the palate are described as highly disagreeable. However, the pipe had all its accustomed qualities when indulged in below deck, and even a few draws were appreciated at night in the tent on a sledge journey.—London Daily News.

Tobacco Plugging.

"Why is it that one side of your nose seems so frequently to be bigger than the other?" a stranger asked a Manayunk Norwegian recently, and the man replied: "We Norwegians are nearly all tobacco pluggers. I'll show you what I mean by that." He opened his pouch and took out a tobacco leaf an inch wide and three inches long. He rolled the leaf as one would roll a cigarette, into a kind of cone, and this cone he pushed up his right nostril until only the end of it was visible. "I'll keep it in my nose," he said, "for about two hours. My system by that time will have drained it quite dry of every property it has. This plugging habit is as common in Norway as the tobacco-chewing habit in America. A very fine, clean, cheap way of using tobacco it is, too." "Let me try it," said the other, and he plugged up his own nose with a leaf of tobacco, and began instantly to cough and sneeze and choke. He pulled out the leaf at once, but for an hour he could taste and smell the tobacco as plainly as though it had still been there.

Tobacco Stored in a Refrigerator.

Storing tobacco in a refrigerator is a new experiment for Reading, says The Tobacco World. It has been given a very successful test by the large cigar manufacturing firm of Yocum Bros. On the fifth floor of their building a refrigerator has been installed. This is nine feet high, six feet wide and four deep. In this are arranged twelve drawers, each nine inches in height. In these are stored Sumatra cigar wrappers. They are carefully tied up in the bundles used by cigarmakers. They are placed in cold storage to keep them in good working order, properly preserving their color and their strength. Yocum Bros. are the only local firm to use a refrigerator for the proper care of wrappers, but others will doubtless follow. The refrigerator is a model in every way, and a ton of ice is usually put into its tank at a time. It has a storage capacity of three bales of Sumatra.

Tobacco Notes.

About 30 additional cigarmakers were taken on last week by the London branch of The Tuckett Cigar Co.

The J. Bruce Payne Co., of Granby, Que., have secured the services of Alfred A. McClaskey, formerly the traveller for D. S. Perrin & Co., London.

The enquiry for the "Ronto" cigar from the grocery trade is steadily on the increase, and Horrocks, of Toronto, who handles the output of this popular cigar, says that he has been unable to fill his orders promptly for the past few months.

The Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin says in a recent issue: "A carload of Havana tobacco direct from Cuba, consigned to The Havana Cigar Syndicate of Winnipeg, and now in the bonded warehouse in this city, will be shipped to its destination to-day."

The plant of The Erie Tobacco Co., Windsor, Ont., although taxed to its fullest capacity, is unable to meet the greatly increased demand for goods of their manufacture. Their "Queen's Navy" is a recognized popular favorite, and their different brands of chewing tobacco retain their well-known reputation for excellence.

The Hamilton Times says the employes of The Tuckett Tobacco Co. and their friends were out in force on Saturday to attend the annual picnic. Victoria Park, Niagara Falls, was their destination. They travelled by the T. H. & B., going on a special train. Every one had a most enjoyable time, and the affair was a big success. A fine list of games and sports was successfully carried out, and added much to the enjoyment. The picnickers returned in the evening in good time.

A CHAT ABOUT TEA.

MR. P. C. LARKIN, of The Salada Tea Co., who, as announced in another column, has just returned from a five months trip to Europe, was seen by a representative of THE GROCER Wednesday morning and asked if he had anything to say in reference to his trip which might be of interest to readers of THE GROCER.

"Well, I don't know." replied Mr. Larkin, who looks remarkably well, "the subject that I am most interested in, viz., tea, is not a very popular commodity in Europe, but is fast becoming so. In cities like Paris you see Ceylon and India tea for sale practically everywhere, and at fashionable hotels where afternoon tea is served, Ceylon and India tea is always a popular beverage, and it will eventually become popular among the masses. There are any quantity of restaurants, hotels and confectionery stores at which afternoon tea is served as regularly as luncheon.

"I have noticed that so far as advertising goes, in England, tea is certainly not kept before the public in the way it is in Canada, and in the way it is fast becoming in the United States; when you consider that 6 lb. per head per annum is consumed in England one is rather surprised that more money is not spent on exploiting teas in Great Britain."

"Is there anything new in the tea situation in London?"

"Well, the Ceylon people are going to spend a great deal of money at the St. Louis Exposition," was the reply. "The Ceylon Planters' Association are going to have a capital display of their products. The Indian Tea Association also intend to pave the way before the Exposition by advertising, and will continue the campaign after the Exposition, thereby avoiding the great mistake that was made at the Chicago Exhibition where both associations had a magnificent display of their tea products, but because the way had not been paved before and the campaign was not pressed vigorously afterwards, nine-tenths of what had been done ended in nothing."

"The Ceylon and India people are working together?"

"Well, yes! they are both in the same boat, their interests are identical."

"How did you find the position of Ceylon and India 'Greens' in London?" enquired THE GROCER.

"During the first six months of this year Ceylon exported more green tea than she did during the whole of last year and still the price was firmer at the end of the six months than it was at the beginning of the year, showing the enormously increased demand. This firm, The Salada Tea Co., are actually shipping close on 500 chests or 1,000 half-chests of green tea every month, and the number is rapidly increasing. Of course a large proportion of this is being sent to the United States in 'Salada' green tea packets."

"Reports show that exports of Ceylon green, up to date this year to America, are about equal to that of blacks."

"Yes, but that is for direct shipments. The greater amount of green tea coming to America would practically come from Ceylon and India direct, whereas with black teas, the amount coming direct would be only perhaps one-fifth of what would be used in America, the balance being purchased at London sales. All dealers here, and for that matter in the United States, get a large proportion of their black teas from London, but they could not depend upon London for their green teas, as that is not a market for Ceylon and India greens, and most firms in Canada and the United States make direct contracts with Colombo firms or with the gardens for their requirements. Therefore when we take the consumption of black and green tea in Canada into consideration you have got to take in not only the direct exports from Calcutta and Colombo to America, but also the exports from London to America.

"With regard to our own business, The Salada Tea Co. during the first seven months of this year had a total increase of business at this office of 27 per cent. over the corresponding seven months of 1902. In black tea we had an increase of 16 per cent., and this after 11 years exploiting of black tea. In green tea we had an increase of 122 per cent., making, as we said, 27 per cent. increase in all. In some of our branches we have had most enormous increases. In Buffalo we had an increase of 35 per cent., in Detroit, of 73 per cent.; in Pittsburg, 91 per cent.; in New York, 95 per cent. increase.

"There is no question about it in the world—as we said as far back as 1899, when we received our first shipment of Ceylon greens—Ceylon and India green tea will eventually displace all other green teas, simply because they are better teas of their kind.

"Leaving the subject of tea, concluded Mr. Larkin, there is one thing that I noticed in London upon which the Canadian Government is to be heartily congratulated, and that is the new Emigration Offices they have opened in Trafalgar Square. I was over there a couple of times, but unfortunately was not able to see Mr. Preston. The offices seemed to be full and the show windows fitted up with the products of Canada attracted hundreds of people. When I was at the offices I could scarcely see over the shoulders of the people looking in at the windows. The pity of it is, that it was not done years ago. Anyway Mr. Sifton deserves the hearty congratulations of all Canadians on the way the office is run and the attention it is attracting. The office is being run in a business way and on good business lines; in fact, it is being run as energetically as if it were a private enterprise. This is something new in government offices and redounds to the credit of the emigration agent."

A CURRANT REPORT.

A report from Patras under date of July 28 announces the obsequies of the currant monopoly. The abandonment of the measure led to great dissatisfaction among the peasant growers and turbulent meetings and riots were rife. The total result, however, was the resignation of the Ministry and its substitution by a faction which promises to relieve all the evils to which currant growers are heir. Meantime the arrangement with the currant bank guarantees a minimum price equal to 11s. 6d. f.o.b. and the feelings of the growers are assuaged.

Soon after the flowering it was thought that the currant crop would be abundant, but as time wore on it became apparent that the bunches were not attaining their ordinary development, also that in berry the fruit was smaller than usual. This somewhat unusual fact is attributed to the dryness of the past Winter and Spring; some, however, are of opinion that it is the result of unusually cool weather during May and June, but in any case it is certain that the crop will not be a large one. On the other hand, the fruit is extremely healthy and should the weather assist should be of exceptionally fine quality. The crop is about a week later than usual and cutting will not be general before the first week in August, and the first shipments about 20th or 24th idem.

A total crop of about 150,000 tons is anticipated and with a 20 per cent. retention law the amount available for export will not exceed 130,000, which is about the usual annual consumption. France has entered the field as a buyer of currants of late and a considerably higher range of prices than what prevailed for the crop of 1902 is not unreasonably expected.

DEPARTMENT OF ADVERTISING SUGGESTION AND CRITICISM

Edited by
W. Arthur Lydiatt,
TORONTO.

NOTE—Herein are discussed the principles and practice of advertising. Subscribers are invited to send Mr. Lydiatt specimens of their newspaper and other advertising, for the purpose of review in this department. Address care of Department of Advertising, CANADIAN GROCER.

That's Not Good Advertising That all Understand Not.

IN his letter, which was reproduced a couple of weeks ago, Mr. W. J. Condron expresses the opinion that the best way for a retail store to sell the people what it has to sell is direct by circulars. It has proved the most result-producing way for him at any rate. Experiences vary so. I have heard others say that it was wasted money to distribute circulars, that they didn't have any money to spend in supplying people with paper to light the fires with.

We who live in the city are fairly besieged with circulars of all styles and sizes, proclaiming the merits of everything from liver pills to fine furniture. If one is away for a few weeks the letter boxes become choked up with a mass of "stuff."

Are they all read?

Do we read any of them?

That depends.

The woman who receives through the mail a nicely gotten up little circular telling her interestingly of things she needs, feels personally appealed to, and sometimes perhaps a little bit flattered.

She is likely to read such a circular with considerable interest and if she does not visit the store at once, is pretty sure to do so at her first opportunity.

You can pretty generally conclude that the real value of any kind of advertising depends to a large extent on how it is done.

A store that sends out circulars should be careful to do it properly. Show care and a desire for respectability in the quality of the circular. You wouldn't write a friend a letter on a piece of newspaper.

Include in the list not only all your regular customers, but every possible customer whose name can be secured.

Make sure that every one of them is properly delivered. Sending them through the mail is preferable, though, of course, more costly. This seems to have been Mr. Condron's difficulty, as he reminds us in his letter that "the main thing is to get them distributed properly."

I am reprinting some of the most interesting matter from the circulars Mr. Condron sent me. Several of the circulars were regular posters, size about 12 x 17, and on one in particular appeared a large and rather hideous cut, with a few startling headlines. They were of a style known in the newspaper world as "yellow."

We cannot deny the fact that this style of appeal seems to please and "catch" what we choose to call the "lower classes," so perhaps it is best. But there is a danger of carrying it too far, and I think Mr. Condron might do well to venture more toward the elegant or refined style of circulars.

The circular before me is of a large size—about 12 x 17—as are also a few others which Mr. Condron sent me. I think they could be smaller for an improvement—setting the matter in either four or eight smaller pages in preference to this large "poster" size.

If these circulars pay him well he ought to be able to afford to go to a better and more up-to-date printer who has a taste for more modern type that his present printer seems to show.

The matter on the circulars is nicely arranged, though, as previously suggested, it might to advantage be of a less sensational style.

One other circular caught my eye, and though I con't care to admit that I approve of this style of advertising, I am calling it to my readers' attention because there are some retailers who think this kind of a thing is very good.

The circular looks like a railroad time-table on first glance, and at the top appears the following:

EXCURSION
BUFFALO AND RETURN
$1.00
Good For 30 Days

would be remarkably low rates, but not as low as groceries will be sold at Condron's Cash Grocery on our two bargain days a week.

Tuesdays and Fridays

We cannot give a complete list of all bargains on this circular, but this is a fair sample, as everything has been reduced.

Mr. Condron's way of putting things sounds so genuine that I am sure it would be hard for many of the recipients of his circulars to doubt his sincerity. His circulars give one the impression that he really means what he says, and that his bargains are real bargains. So while we might easily criticize the make-up, the literary style and all that, such criticism too strongly put would be altogether out of place, for does not Mr. Condron say that he gets results, and that's what he issues the circulars for.

Notice this bit which appears at the bottom of one of the circulars:

> TURN OVER a new leaf and pay cash for your groceries. You will feel 10 years younger if at pay-day your wages are yours instead of your grocer's. If you are looking for a store where quality and economy join hands, come to CONDRON'S CASH GROCERY.

This "example" on the advantage of paying cash is worth repeating :

You make quite a saving by paying cash. (If you buy here.)

There is no doubt our prices are much less for better goods than elsewhere.

Our reason is: Being cash buyers, we buy cheaper than other stores do.

Still another reason: If you pay cash, you will limit your purchase to suit cash in hand, and will not buy more than you can afford to because you can have it "charged."

An average family will spend about $300 a year for groceries, and even if they only save 20 per cent. (a too low estimate), you would save $60 a year, or $5 a month. Think it over.

REMEMBER! If you pay cash in a credit store you pay credit prices. You don't get the advantage for your cash that you will here. Our delivery service is as prompt as any store in the city, and it will be improved as occasion demands.

Evidently Mr. Condron is doing a good deal in the way of educating people to pay cash, for his circulars seem full of arguments showing the advantages of buying groceries in this way.

This last one may prove of some suggestive value to some other grocer readers who try to do business on a cash basis, so I reprint the matter :

WHY YOU SHOULD PATRONIZE US

1st reason.—We have no bad accounts for you to help pay for.

2nd.—Selling for Cash, we can buy for Cash, and so buy cheaper than other stores do.

3rd.—You make quite a saving by paying Cash, if you buy here.

4th.—If you pay cash in a credit store you pay credit prices.

5th.—We treat everybody alike and everyone so well that they will come again,

6th.—We want your own experience to teach you that you may have absolute confidence in us.

7th.—It's our object to give our customers the benefit of our ability in buying through our eight years experience in the wholesale trade.

8th.—The law says sixteen ounces make a pound. A legal pound is the kind you get here.

9th.—We are not bragging about our honesty, but because this is another reason your money will go farther here.

10th.—Pay Cash for your groceries and you will feel ten years younger if at pay day your wages are yours instead of your grocer's.

CHARTREUSE.

On account of the expulsion from France of the monks of Chartreuse, the famous product of their distillery, chartreuse liqueur, has advanced in price to a remarkable extent. Brother Raphael Bonal, however, is continuing the manufacture in the Department of Isere, of his celebratedly fine "raphaelle." The difference between "raphaelle" and chartreuse lies only in the name and price, and the quality is such that the most critical connoisseur can find no fault. Montreal is fairly well supplied on the moment, though as shipments of chartreuse will be few and far between, dealers will do well to place their orders for import with B. O. Beland, 26 Lemoine street, Montreal.

Some Merchants' Experience.

Solomon said in his haste: "ALL MEN ARE LIARS!" He didn't mean it. He was simply so mad with one man that he included all the rest.

Let us not fall into Solomon's mistake. We should take out of our experience the wisdom there is in it AND STOP RIGHT THERE!

Otherwise we are as stupid as the cat who sat down on a hot stove lid. She will never sit down on a hot stove lid again, and that shows good judgment. BUT SHE WILL NEVER SIT DOWN ON A COLD ONE, EITHER.

Now, some merchants have had hard experiences lately with coupon books that were represented to be absolutely correct in count and made up just as good as any other, but they were not, and you won't know what a perfect coupon book is until you have tried either Allison's Coupon Books or Allison's Coupon PASS Books. Both are good; one book suits some, while the other fills the bill with the rest of the merchants.

We are doing a lot of special engraving work now for merchants who use books in large quantities. Our books are carried in stock by jobbers. We will be glad to send you a free sample.

Allison's name on a Coupon Book is itself a guarantee of perfection.

He studied at "the public and high schools of his native town "and at Williams College. Afterwards, in pur- "surance of his love for Chemistry, he entered "the employ of a druggist, and after 4 years in "that position he matriculated at the New York "College of Pharmacy. He was next appointed assistant in the Laboratory of one of the largest wholesale druggists of New "York, rising to the position of chief clerk. Subjects Being Discussed at Ottawa

Written for The Canadian Grocer by a Member of Parliament

POLITICAL discussion permits of wide divergence of views, and, almost invariably, these are accompanied by an equally wide divergence in alleged facts. In no case have both these features been more in evidence than in the discussion of the new Transcontinental Railway policy, and it must, indeed, be puzzling to the outsider who is reading the press of both parties with an honest intention of arriving at a just conclusion. In too many cases, we fear, he will be prone to charge misstatement and dishonesty of purpose on the part of the politicians, but he should remember that while public men are, from the very nature of things, as adherents of parties, special pleaders, they are not necessarily insincere in the statements which they utter. That the wish is father to the thought is often absolutely true, and where people have to deal with a whole field of at least but partially known conditions, the speaker is naturally driven to allegations which are likely to strengthen the position he has taken in any given case. So it is that we find one man describing the north part of Ontario through which the new road will run as a land of promise, rich in timber, in minerals, in water powers, in agricultural lands; while, to another, who has committed himself to the statement that the whole thing is an utterly "mad scheme," it is the land of rock, muskeg, the stunted poplar and impassable natural barriers.

In no phase of the whole debate has greater difference appeared than in that dealing with the financial conditions. From the statement of Sir Wilfrid that the cost to Canada could be paid out of this year's surplus, to that of Dr. Sproule, who asserts that the result will be to increase the national debt to $400,000,000, we have a wide choice for financial belief. Let us first, for a few moments, examine the contention of the Prime Minister. The Government section of the road from Moncton to Winnipeg covers a distance variously estimated at from 1,400 to 1,500 miles, the cost of which, Mr. Fielding, who, by the way, estimates the distance at 1,475 miles, as against Mr. Blair's 1,425 miles, places, including the interest during construction, at $54,609,677, while Mr. Blair estimates it at $65,000,000. The question as to which is more nearly correct has nothing to do with the criticism of the Premier's statement. The surplus this year will be in the neighborhood of $14,500,000, so in neither case would it even approach an amount which could meet the expenditure. Of course, what Sir Wilfrid meant, a meaning easily to be gathered from the context of his speech, by him who reads it in extenso, is, that the surplus would pay for all the outlay above that for which we have a tangible asset to show. True, we may spend from 55 to 65 millions on the Government section, but that section will be ours when completed, and will, after seven or, possibly, ten years, pay interest on the investment at 3 per cent., according to a term in the lease to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. In this, of course, lies the marked difference between the case of this new road and the case of the Intercolonial and the Government canals. In the I. C. R. we have invested nearly 70 millions, in the canals almost the same amount, and from neither do we receive the return of a fraction of one per cent. as interest on our investment. To say that the country is not in debt to the extent of 140 millions for these old works because we own them, and hence the asset must be set off against the liability, would be manifestly absurd, and to say the same of the new road would be equally so but for the guarantee of interest by way of rent to which we have alluded.

Even as it is, we feel that the Premier's statement is somewhat far-fetched in this particular. Our debt will undoubtedly be increased to the extent of the cost of constructing this new section. That may or may not be a bad thing. The farmer who mortgages his farm for $1,000 to put up a bank barn where before he had no building, is certainly $1,000 in debt, though he may be far more than $1,000 better off because of the increased facility with which he can carry on his farming operations. And so it will be with Canada. Time will tell whether the money is or not well spent; but that our debt will be increased in any case to just the amount of the expenditure, seems to be beyond peradventure. Now, to this must be added one other item—the interest for the seven years during which the G.T.P. gets the use of the Government section for nothing, and the interest for seven years on the cost of constructing the G.T.P. line in the mountain section up to $30,000 per mile. Without wearying our readers too much, we may say that these two sums combined would reach a total of from $14,500,000 to $16,500,000, according as we accept the extreme estimates of the rival advocates. In the former case the surplus would in reality pay off the whole obligation, leaving us with the Government section as an asset, and the cost thereof as a liability, and, even in the latter, if, as Mr. Fielding points out, we estimate the amount laid out now in the hands of some trust company to meet the payments of interest as they mature from year to year, the present surplus would be sufficient to meet the whole interest charge. As a matter of fact, the surplus, as we pointed out in an earlier article this session, is a politician's surplus. It is not a surplus of funds after paying all the Government outlays for the year, but only a surplus of income over what has time out of mind by both parties been called "current expenditure." That there is an actual surplus this year just closed over all expenditure, a surplus running into millions, a surplus which is to be applied in that very convincing fashion of a reduction of the national debt, all are pleased to acknowledge, but that we have $14,500,000 clear to apply in reduction of debt or to meet interest at some future date to accrue in connection with this railway scheme is far from the fact. This much is true: The amount this year actually available for any purpose after payment of all expenditure is so large as to be more than sufficient by a couple of million at least to pay one year's interest on the new railway indebtedness when incurred. The first month of the new fiscal year, July, shows a large increase in revenue over July of last year, and everything points to a surplus for the coming year as large if not larger than for the year just past. Should Canadian prosperity continue for six more years to come, and there seems no good reason why it should not, when we think of the large influx of population and the great development of natural resources—causes which kept hard times away from the United States when every other country in the world fell a victim to that financial disease—should it continue in even much less measure than at present, there would be each year an "actual surplus" quite sufficient to pay the interest for the seven years during which the G. T. P. pays nothing to the Government by way of rent, and in this manner the expense, outside of construction (to balance which there remains the road itself), would be entirely borne by revenue, and at the end of the non-productive period not one cent would have been added to our national debt above and beyond the first cost of the road.

Mr. Blair has contended that we cannot get our money at 3 per cent., the amount which the G.T.P. is to pay as rental after seven years, that 3¼ per cent. is the best we can look for, and, that, in consequence, we will have ½ per cent. each year to put up out of the treasury, and this he figures to represent an accumulated loss of $18,850,000 in the 50 years. As to this, time and the English money market alone will tell. The last occasion on which we went into the market we succeeded in getting our requirements satisfied for 2½ per cent., but the bonds were placed at a small discount, taking which into consideration the loan stood us at about 2.70 per cent., or not quite 2¾ per cent. At present the money market is a little tighter, and it is possible that we might not get such favorable terms. The capital, however, will not all be borrowed at one time. The road will take five years at least to complete, and loans will from time to time be made, as the money is required. To say what the market price will be from one to five years hence is mere guess work. The very fact that the large aggregate amount required will not be needed all at once will tend to keep down the rate, and, on the whole, we think we may venture to conclude that in this matter Mr. Blair's fears have got a little the better of him, and that the money will be forthcoming at 3 per cent. as estimated by Mr. Fielding. If this be so, of course the $18,850,000, above referred to, disappears from the cost of the undertaking, or, if we split the difference between the estimates as to the rate to be paid for the money made by Mr. Blair and Mr. Fielding and leave it at 3¼ per cent., the cost as placed by Mr. Blair comes down $9,425,000.

We have criticised the Prime Minister's statement as to the surplus being sufficient to pay for the road, it is now time to turn our attention very briefly to the Opposition contention that to the cost must be added the amount of the Government guarantee of G.T.P. bonds. As we know the contract provides that on the prairie section the Government is to guarantee the bonds of the company up to $13,000 per mile, and on the mountain section up to $30,000, provided neither sum be in excess of three-quarters of the cost of construction, or, in other words, the G.T.P. has to put in one-quarter of the cost out of its own funds in excess of the Government guarantee. This being the case what is the likelihood that the Government will ever be called upon to make good any of this guarantee? The section now under discussion has been called on all hands the "fat" section. There is no doubt expressed by anyone; the most sceptical has never even hinted that this section of the transcontinental road would not pay and pay well. If it pays, of course the Government cannot be damnified; if it does not pay, the Government has a first mortgage extending only to 75 per cent. and, in addition to that, has also a mortgage on $20,000,000 of rolling stock, in which it has not put one dollar,—on which it has guaranteed nothing. What, then, would happen if the Government were called upon to pay the interest on the bonds as guaranteed by it, proceeding to foreclose, and to take the road over? But behind stands the Grand Trunk Railway proper, as a second mortgagee, so to speak, with its quarter of cost of construction, and its $20,000,000 in rolling stock. How awfully bad would have to be the state of things; how awfully lean would the "fat" section have to prove, before the second mortgagee would sulk in his tent and allow the first claimant to close him out of all claim. No, it is most reasonable to suppose that this will never happen, and, if it does not, why, of course, it is fallacious to add millions upon millions to the alleged cost of construction in connection with this scheme.

Mr. Sifton introduced another financial item, which is not unworthy of consideration. He pointed out that negotiations were about completed with certain railway companies by which the odd-numbered sections in Manitoba and the Territories, for years locked up for railway grants, were about to be released and made free for Government purposes. As the even-numbered sections are retained for free homesteads, the Government feels at liberty to sell these new lands, amounting in all to about 50,000,000 of acres. He makes the statement that of this area about 20,000,000 acres are now absolutely worthless because of being totally unserved by railways, and that in ten years' time, owing to the building of the new road, these lands will have attained an average value of $300 per acre, or an aggregate of $460,000,000. Allowing for optimism on the part of the speaker, something substantial is sure to come out of the state of affairs which he indicates. We may then summarize our financial review of the contentions of the opposing parties by saying that the scheme will cost the actual outlay for construction on the Government section, the exact amount of which only time will tell, plus the interest for seven years, as above outlined, for even if the yearly actual surplus is sufficient to keep this paid, it is a cost nevertheless, since, but for it, the surplus could be applied in reduction of the national debt. As against this cost there will be the Government section of the road, plus the value of the lands referred to by Mr. Sifton as now being valueless. As to the other aspects of the case, from the point of increased transportation facilities, colonization, development of commerce, the binding together of the East and West, the shortening of the Imperial route to the East, it is no part of our plan to speak now.

RAISIN NEWS FROM DENIA.

THE Denia Exportacion de Pasa Valenciana, in the issue of August 6th, says of the raisin outlook: The drought will greatly shorten the quantity of the present crop, in terms that it will hardly reach 500,000 quintals in the whole.

Scaldings, on that account, are rather backward, and the fruit appears so very uneven that many bunches have only part of the berries ripe and the rest green, so that to scald the grapes in such a state the loss to the growers would be serious. Of course, at some early localities people have begun scalding, but this cannot be said to be the beginning of the campaign. Several agents are going round the producing districts paying 30 pesetas per cwt. for fruit of the new crop, and securing what little lots they can, as samples; but we do not call this the opening of the market, as there are no stores yet opened nor is there any packing going on so far.

With regard to elaborating raisins after the Malaga style, we believe that at Gata they will in the present season elaborate a larger quantity than they last year did, because they have actually better fruit for the purpose.

At Malaga, as far as we learn, the fruit will likewise be small for the same reasons we have before alluded to, and the quantity of the crop will be something like the last, say 1,200,000 boxes.

In a few days they will begin to take away some fruit from the drying grounds; and towards the 20th inst. the first boxes containing stuff of the new crop will be sent to the warehouses. Prices are expected to be high, but if so, they will not last long.

Scaldings at Malaga will, this year, have no importance.

From Granada they say that the crop of raisins in that province is small and of inferior quality.

IN REFERENCE TO CAPERS.

THE caper tree is a bush which is grown in some parts of Spain and in Algeria, as well as in some portions of France. The commercial caper is the flower bud, which is gathered before its development and preserved in vinegar. The tree thrives on chalky soils, on rising ground well exposed to the sun. Poor, dry soils may be utilized, but a good quality of earth brings about better results.

The gathering of the crop generally commences the first week in June, and as the branches continue to grow, and as there is one caper for every leaf, the harvest season continues until September or even October. About the 20th of July the crop is heaviest. The buds are picked by women, who work upon the same bush every five or six days. An effort is made to gather small capers, as the smaller sizes are the best and bring the highest prices. The pickers are paid 25 centimes (5 cents) per kilogram (2.2 pounds), and during the height of the season a competent woman can gather 20 kilograms (44 pounds) per day.

After the capers have been picked, they are placed in trays under a shed, where they are left until they evaporate a certain amount of water which they contain, in order that fermentation may not set in. They are then placed in barrels of vinegar for preservation. A white vinegar of 8 degrees Beaume is used for this purpose. A 6-degree vinegar might be employed, but with a stronger vinegar the capers acquire a more satisfactory consistency. Occasionally the brine is flavored with sprigs of tarragon, elder flowers, cloves and pepper in grains. This is a matter of individual taste and experience.

The capers, having been thus preserved, are next classified, during the Winter, by being passed through sieves of different sizes. There are seven classifications, as follows: "Nonpareil" (smallest size), "surfine," "capucine," "capote," "fine," "mi-fine," "commune" (largest size). Having been thus separated, the merchandise is replaced in barrels filled with vinegar and preserved until sold. When prepared for shipment, the capers are washed in vinegar of a standard of 12 degrees, which renders them quite firm, and they are placed in barrels without vinegar. They support long voyages very satisfactorily, if properly treated before.

The average prices per category and per kilogram of 2.2 pounds are: Nonpareils. 1.70 to 3.20 francs; 32.8 to 61.7 cents. Surfines, 1.25 to 2.40 francs; 24.1 to 46.3 cents. Capucines, 1.00 to 1.80 francs; 19.3 to 34.7 cents. Capotes, .80 to 1.40 francs; 15.4 to 27 cents. Fine, 60 to 70 francs; 11.5 to 13.5 cents. Mi-fine, 40 to 50 francs; 7.7 to 9.6 cents. Commune, 30 to 35 francs; 5.7 to 6.7 cents.

THE PACKAGE IDEA.

Even though, as some grocers complain, retail stores have become a storehouse for various sorts of packages, it is admitted by a large proportion that with the package has come increased profit. There is no downright loss on a package. It is a pound or five pounds at the start and costs so much. The grocer hands it over the counter for what it is and doesn't have to supply wrapping paper or twine unless he chooses. The old order has changed, giving place to new, and the new is, after all, more easily followed, and, other things being equal, is productive of greater profits.

Reports from abroad on the new crop Persian dates state that the crop is progressing favorably. The principal importers here will have two fast direct steamers this season, the same as last year, and the first cargo will be due the latter part of October.

THE MARITIME BOARD OF TRADE

Ninth Annual Convention, held at Charlottetown, P.E.I.

A Report of Proceedings. Moncton, N. B. the Next Place of Meeting,

THE number of delegates attending the ninth annual convention of the Maritime Board of Trade, at Charlottetown, P.E.I., on Wednesday and Thursday, August 19 and 20, was considerably smaller than at the conventions of the preceding few years, owing, of course, to so many of them being in attendance at the Congress of the Chambers of Commerce of the Empire in Montreal. But, all things considered, little fault could be found with the attendance, and as for the proceedings, the vigorous style in which most of the subjects were handled by the speakers will long be remembered by those who were present. It seemed to be a general endeavor not only to debate, but to arrive at some conclusions and adopt some resolutions which would be followed out to the end and have marked results.

The delegates were nearly all present during the session on Wednesday, though a number arrived that night. They were well looked after, President Haszard having been indefatigable in his efforts to provide them with all possible conveniences and comforts, in which he succeeded admirably.

OPENING OF THE CONVENTION.

It was half-past ten on Wednesday morning, August 19, when the president called the meeting to order in the Legislative Assembly chambers. Before the order Mr. Haszard referred to the number of leading members of the Maritime Board of Trade who were absent in Montreal. A meeting had been held in Truro, N.S., with the object of deciding whether or not this convention could not be postponed or brought on at a time when the members would not be called to the meeting of the Empire's chambers of commerce, but it was clearly shown that by their constitution the date of the meeting was practically a fixed one; at any rate it would be awkward to make a change.

WELCOMED TO CHARLOTTETOWN.

The president then introduced Hon. Arthur Peters, Premier of Prince Edward Island and Mayor Warburton, of Charlottetown, who welcomed the delegates to the city. Hon. Mr. Peters thought that the Maritime Board of Trade should be a particularly strong body and be of great benefit to the three provinces. It was natural for him to think of his own province first, and he knew of several matters in which they would value the aid of so powerful a body. There was the telegraph and railway service and the Winter steamer service between Prince Edward Island and the mainland. One particular phase of the latter was important: When the two boats were tied up with the ice last Winter the Legislative Assembly of Prince Edward Island and the Charlottetown Board of trade had gone to no little expense to relieve them. They had asked the Dominion Government to pay the expenses, as they certainly should have done, but so far, nothing had been done for them. This convention could accomplish many things of this kind, not only for his own province, but for all three.

Mayor Warburton believed that the visit of the delegates would stimulate business between the island and the Maritime Provinces very greatly. The delegates, too, coming to the spot, would see the needs of the island, though, had they come in Winter, these would have been more apparent.

Both speakers were warmly applauded, and, having retired, the business of the meeting began.

THOSE PRESENT.

The roll call showed that a number of boards in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia were not represented. There were present:

Alberton, P.E.I.—John Agnew, Alberton.

Amherst, N.S.—E. B. Elderkin, W. B. Murdock, C. S. McLeod.

Charlottetown—Horace Haszard (president), D. Nicholson, N. Rattenbury, Geo. E. Auld, Geo. E. Hughes, M.L.A.; F. L. Haszard, C. Lyons, Jas. Paton, W. H. Aitkin, W. F. Tidmarsh.

Kentville, N.S.— M. G. DeWolfe, Wm. Gould, B. H. Dodge, H. J. Simpson, E. C. Ward.

King's County Board—Jos. A. Kinsman.

Pictou, N.S.—Neil Fraser.

Sackville, N.B.—F. C. Harris.

North Sydney, N.S.—Jno. P. Brennan.

Wolfeville, N.S.—O. D. Harris.

Halifax, N.S.—John P. Longard, John B. Foster.

West Prince Board—F. J. Buote.

Tignish, P.E.I.—A. J. McFadyen.

South King's Board, P.E.I.—W. L. Poole, G. S. Inman, M. McGowan.

O'Leary—H. W. Turner.

Summerside — Capt. Joseph Read, M.L.A.; Hon. R. C. McLeod.

Souris—John McLean.

Windsor—Geo. Wilson.

Chatham—W. S. Logie, Geo. Watt.

COMMITTEE ON ORDERS.

After the roll call the customary procedure of appointing a committee to consider the order in which the various subjects should be taken up was followed and a committee was selected as follows: John P. Brennan (chairman), E. B. Elderkin, B. H. Dodge, Neil Fraser, O. D. Harris, John McLean, Geo. Watt, Jas.

The Meeting Place.

CHARLOTTETOWN, where the Maritime Board of Trade Convention was held this year, is a city with rather more attractions for the visitor than can usually be seen in a place of 12,000 or so of inhabitants. While not particularly rich in large public buildings the general appearance of its streets, both business and residential, though more especially the latter, is very prepossessing. The streets in all parts of the city are as wide as those of any city in Canada, excepting none, and their cleanliness would put many Canadian cities to shame.

The great square in which are situated the Legislative Buildings (where the meetings of the Maritime Board of Trade were held) would do credit to any city in North America. Here are three large edifices, and a fourth, the new market, is now being erected, built of the beautiful "Island Sandstone," a red sandstone excellent for building purposes, which is found in great abundance in Prince Edward Island. A public park at the west side of the city, with its tennis courts, cricket grounds, walks and drives, provides a most enjoyable spot in which to spend a Summer afternoon; though one has but to walk out of the city in any direction to find the surrounding country as attractive as the loveliest of parks or gardens.

Whether the capital of the Island Province will ever be a great commercial city or not future years alone can tell, but one thing is certain—when its attractions and the beauty of the surrounding country become better known it is very likely to be a great leader among the Summer resorts of America. Already thousands of tourists visit the city every Summer and their numbers are growing rapidly as the name and fame of the "Garden of Canada" reach further and further.

Paton, R. C. McLeod, A. J. McFadyen, W. L. Poole.

When this committee had retired to a private room the permanent secretary, Chas. M. Creed, submitted his report. It read as follows :

SECRETARY-TREASURER'S REPORT.

To the President and Members of the Maritime Board of Trade.

GENTLEMEN,—Your Secretary-Treasurer begs herewith to hand you his report for the current year. All the various resolutions passed at the last annual meeting were forwarded as directed and copies of important resolutions, which required the attention of the Federal Government, were forwarded to the Ministers of the various departments ; copies of the proceedings of the annual meeting, as contained in THE CANADIAN GROCER, were forwarded to every Board of Trade in the Maritime Provinces, as also to delegates to the meeting.

The correspondence connected with the same, as also the correspondence with the various boards, are now on the table for the inspection of members.

My correspondence with the boards has been frequent. I have never allowed it to lag, but, I regret to say, that the majority of boards have been very dilatory in answering, and some boards have never answered. I referred to that subject last year in my report, but trust the coming year the secretaries will be more prompt.

NEW BOARDS.

During the past year two boards have been formed in Nova Scotia—Canso and Hantsport—the Canso Board have affiliated and paid per capita, and the Hantsport Board have the subject under consideration. Two boards have been formed at Prince Edward Island, the Southern King's and West Prince. They have affiliated and the old Board of Summerside and Souris have also affiliated and all paid their per capita.

The total affiliated boards in the Maritime Provinces are as follows :

NOVA SCOTIA (21 boards)—Annapolis Royal, Berwick, Canning, Canso, Digby, Dartmouth, Halifax, Kentville, King's Co., Middleton, New Glasgow, Pictou, Truro, Windsor, Wolfville, Yarmouth, Sydney, North Sydney, Louisburg, Glace Bay.

NEW BRUNSWICK (7 boards)—Chatham, Sackville, Sussex, Moncton, St. John, Newcastle, St. Stephen.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND (5 boards) — Charlottetown, Southern King's, Summerside, Montague, West Prince, Souris, Alberton.

THE UNAFFILIATED BOARDS ARE :

NOVA SCOTIA (9 boards) — Bridgewater, Hantsport, Stellarton, Louisburg, Parrsboro, Springhill, Liverpool, Pugwash, Westville.

NEW BRUNSWICK (2 boards) — Fredericton, Woodstock.

The total number of boards in the Maritime Provinces are as follows :

Nova Scotia.....	21	affiliated
" "	9	unaffiliated...Total	30
New Brunswick.....	7	affiliated
" "	2	unaffiliated...Total	9
P. E. Island	5	affiliated.....	5
			44

The unaffiliated boards have been thoroughly canvassed by myself, and later on the president made a canvass, but as yet without any result. I found, from correspondence with the secretaries, that a number of the boards exist in name only, however, during the coming year, I hope to encourage them to greater exertions.

CHAMBERS OF COMMERCE OF THE EMPIRE.

On July 1st notices were sent to all affiliated boards inviting them to elect delegates to the fifth Congress of Chambers of Commerce of the Empire at Montreal on August 17th and following days. The boards of Amherst, Chatham, Sackville and Sydney, responded by electing delegates, and the names were forwarded to the secretary of the London Chamber of Commerce, who sent me certificates for each delegate, which I forwarded to those boards on the 10th inst.

NOTICE TO AMEND BY-LAWS

tabled at the last annual meeting with reference to subjects for consideration to be forwarded to the secretary 30 days prior to date of annual meeting is a step in the right direction ; each time I have been secretary I have put it in the notices, but it has never been taken notice of as it was not imperative, but on being made a by-law there will be full authority for the secretary placing it on the notices.

ANNUAL REPORT.

I would suggest that in future the proceedings of the annual meeting be published in the form of a report containing the names of officers, the number and names of boards, affiliated and unaffiliated, and the by-laws. They will be handy for circulation and be official.

OBITUARY.

It is with deep regret I refer to the death of Mr. F. O. Allison, the late esteemed secretary of the St. John Board of Trade, whose absence we are called upon to mourn. He always took a deep interest in the proceedings of this board, and was twice secretary. His work speaks for itself; he was thorough in every particular, well informed in all business matters and an agreeable companion.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL MEETING.

A meeting of the Executive was held at Truro on the 16th of June. The business transacted there is contained in the minutes which will shortly be read.

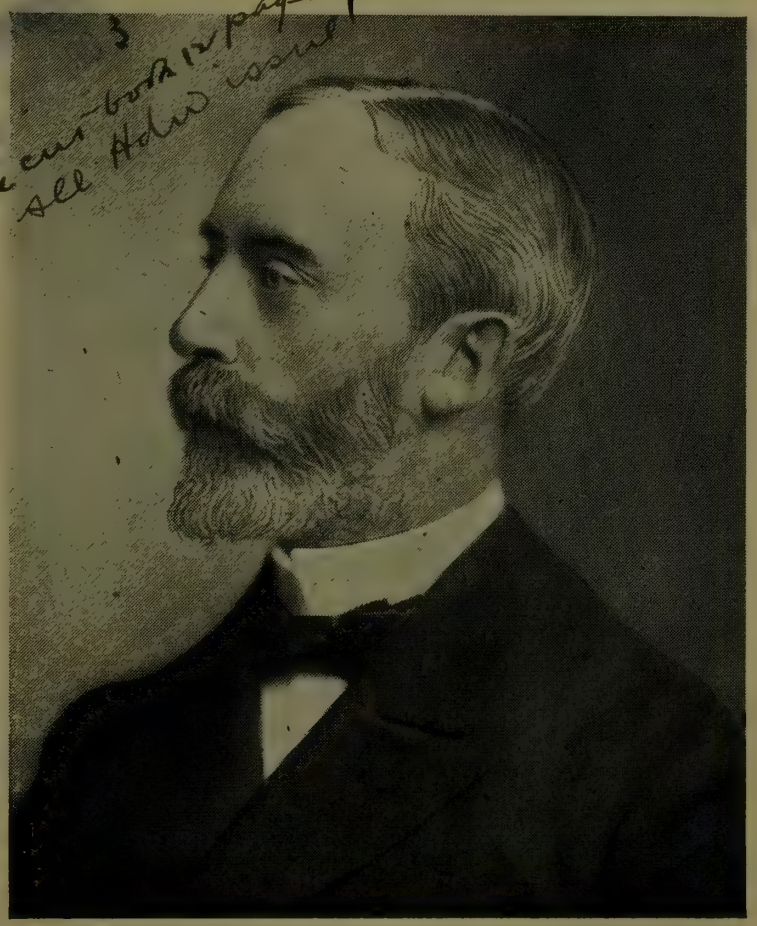
In conclusion I beg to say that during the year my best energies have been devoted to the advancement of the institution, at the same time doing all in my power to assist your worthy president, in which I had the able assistance and advice of Mr. M. E. DeWolfe, of Kentville, the father of many boards of trade, and one of the strong bulwarks of the Maritime Board of Tarde.

ACCOUNTS FOR THE YEAR.

The accounts for the year are all prepared, but as several boards will pay their per capita before the close of this day's meeting, they will be presented to-morrow for your approval and audit.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

(Sgd.) CHARLES M. CREED,
Permanent Secretary-Treasurer.



Mr. Horace Haszard, the retiring President.

LETTERS OF REGRET.

The secretary then read letters of regret at not being able to be present from David J. Welch, Moncton ; H. W. Kittson, of W. H. Gillard & Co.; Maurice Lich, Merchants' Exchange and Board of Trade, Portland, Me.; W. L. Edmonds, MacLean's trade newspapers ; Cyrus A. Birge, president Canadian Manufacturers' Association ; and from the secretaries of the boards of trade of Ottawa, Toronto, Montreal and Orillia.

REPORT ADOPTED AND SECRETARY THANKED.

W. S. Loggie, Chatham, in moving the adoption of the report, said: "I have listened with much pleasure to the cheering report of our secretary, and I think it shows the close attention that he has paid to the affairs of this Board of Trade. A year ago the office of secretary was made a permanent one, and I think it fell on good shoulders. I can congratulate the board on having a secretary who looks so keenly after maritime mercantile interests, and I move not only the adoption of the report, but a hearty vote of thanks also to our secretary for his exertions during the past 12 months.

M. G. DeWolfe had much pleasure in seconding the motion, "except," he added modestly, "in that allusion to myself. One can hardly form an idea of the work a secretary of a board like this must do by hearing the report read. Mr. Creed communicated with all the local boards in the Maritime Provinces, though some of them did not reply. This is their own loss, because we all must line up to the Maritime Board of Trade. The latter is a body dignified, respected and powerful, and commands the respect of the Government of Canada. I congratulate Prince Edward Island on its boards of trade. There are five of them in this little gem in the gulf, which speaks well for its business men. I regret that there are not more members from Nova Scotia here. From St. John there are none, which is perhaps due to the loss of Mr. Allison, the former secretary of the St. John Board of Trade, whose energy and enthusiasm always resulted in the members taking an interest in the Maritime Board. In connection with our resolution, I think we should include in the minute book the death of Mr. Allison. He was a very valuable friend of this board's.

"One remark of the secretary's struck me forcibly. He said that we had no annual report, but still we have a full verbatim report in MacLean's trade newspapers. If it were not for them we would have no full report at all, but they send a representative all the way from Montreal for the express purpose of recording our proceedings. As a rule the newspapers do not give us great notices for some reason or other. In one Halifax paper the notice of this meeting was put under the obituary list (laughter). In the Kentville Board of Trade, however, we have an annual report, giving a full list of the Maritime Board of Trade officers, gnd we publish it every year." Mr. DeWolfe concluded by again seconding the movement to adopt the report and pass a vote of thanks to the secretary.

The President: "Before putting the motion, I wish to say that I have had a great deal of correspondence with Mr. Creed during my 12 months of office and I never before realized the immense amount of work he has to get through. His assistance is invaluable."

The vote of thanks was, of course, adopted unanimously.

The venerable secretary of the board thanked those present for their expression of their good will toward him. He was not an orator, and would not attempt a speech. He had tried to do his duty, and hoped his life would be spared to continue the work for some years yet.

The Committee on Subjects, not having returned, President Haszard then read his address to the board.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

Gentlemen of the Maritime Board of Trade,—

Before proceeding to the subject of my address permit me to welcome you to the city of Charlottetown. Whilst I appreciate the honor which you have conferred upon me in electing me president of this large and increasing body of commerial and professional men, I take it as a special compliment to Prince Edward Island. I hope the time spent here may be pleasant for yourselves and profitable to the best interests of the Maritime Provinces. An abstract of the work of the council for the past year has already been placed before you by our secretary, C. M. Creed, who has been untiring in his efforts in the interests of the Boards of Trade of the Maritime Provinces.

We cannot hope to make this annual meeting as interesting as some of those held on former occasions, notably that held last year at Sydney, where for the first time many of us were privileged to inspect the Dominion coal and steel works at Sydney, the Marconi Towers at Table Head and the famous loading piers at historic Louisburg, all wonderful in themselves, never to be forgotten evidences of the immense possibilities that are yet in store for the dwellers by the sea, and which go far to reassure us that the day is yet far distant when the western provinces shall entirely overshadow those of the east.

Whilst we have no mines, timber limits or mineral wealth in this province, we rejoice in the fact that in the special sphere of agricultural development, together with the fishing industries, the fertile soil and healthful climate, we have mines as rich as any in all Canada.

The past year has witnessed many notable incidents of worldwide importance. King Edward's visit to France, so soon followed by President Loubet's visit to England, has already made its impression on the people of both nations, and cannot fail to bring about a better understanding and remove much of the friction which heretofore existed, the good results of which are bound to be reflected throughout Canada and Newfoundland. Later still the visit of King Edward and Queen Alexandra to Ireland, so tactfully arranged and so happily concluded, has already done far more than years of parliamentary debate could do to weld together the hopes and aspirations of the whole British people.

VISITING CHAMBERS OF COMMERCE OF THE EMPIRE.

The Fifth Congress of Chambers of Commerce of the Empire is holding its convention at Montreal, contemporaneously with our meeting here. Other groups of prominent gentlemen from the Motherland, consisting of members of the Imperial Parliament, bankers, merchants, manufacturers, journalists and leading solicitors and professional men are either now touring in the Dominion or about to do so.

Since the close of the Boer War public attention in England has been directed towards Canada in a marked degree, partly no doubt as a relief to the long drawn tension in considering solely the affairs of South Africa and the inauguration of the Commonwealth of Australia, and largely as a result of the systematic efforts of the Dominion Immigration Department to bring the manifold advantages of Canada prominently before the eyes of Europe. The effect of the strong searchlights of enquiry and investigation thrown upon the chief vantage points of our country, east and west, can hardly fail to do lasting good to our national interests.

THE GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC.

This question is still in the realm of politics, and being so, its wisdom or unwisdom cannot be profitably discussed in a non-political body such as this. There can be no doubt, however, of the vastness of the undertaking from a national Canadian standpoint, and we must hope that, should it be carried to completion, it may afford the outlet through Canadian ports for the produce of the western fields, which its promoters claim it will do, and that it may develop the trade of these provinces. The South Shore Railway and other lines in Nova Scotia are now under construction. No doubt they will open up new channels for extensive business operations in some of the earliest settled and most flourishing counties in Nova Scotia, and in Prince Edward Island. The Hillsborough Bridge and Murray Harbor Railway are progressing rapidly to completion, and when finished will afford much needed convenience and transportation facilities to an important section of the province.

ATLANTIC MAIL SERVICE.

No improvement has taken place since our last annual meeting in the matter of ocean mail communication with the Mother Country and Europe. A resolution on this important national question introduced by Captain C. O. Allen at the Sydney convention last year, advocating immediate and definite action was, as you are aware, unanimously adopted. The resolution was supplemented by a chart pointing out the shortest, safest, and most reliable ocean mail routes, Summer and Winter, between the British Isles and the Dominion of Canada. Copies of this chart have been printed by one of the local boards affiliated with the Maritime Board, which latter is under obligations to the designer of the chart and the Halifax Board for the enterprise displayed in affording such complete data and information on this long deferred question to the different governments and authorities interested.

A notable happening since the adoption of Captain Allen's resolution and chart has been the action of His Majesty's Government, which recently granted an appropriation to The Cunard Co. to assist in building two of the fastest and most up-to-date mail and passenger steamers in the world. In addition an annual subsidy of three-quarters of a million dollars for maintenance was voted.

These vessels will be employed without doubt on the ocean mail service between the United Kingdom and the United States of America. It is to be observed that the route via New York, now so extensively used by Canada, involves a detour in some cases of many hundreds of miles additional in reaching Canadian destinations in comparison with the shorter direct routes to and from a number of convenient and accessible harbours on the Canadian coast of the Atlantic. The diversion of freight and passenger traffic in the future from the nearby Atlantic seaports of the Dominion will doubtless be fully considered by this convention.

SOUTH AFRICAN TRADE.

Since our last meeting several steamships have sailed with cargoes for South Africa and there is every prospect of a good trade being done with Canada. The agent of the Dominion Government has been quite active, as is shewn by his reports to the Government. It would seem that there is a large and profitable business to be done there in many lines, which these provinces are in a position to supply; for instance, lumber and its products, including furniture, farming utensils, canned goods, cheese, butter, etc. It would seem to me also that a profitable market might be found in India for many of our products such as I have already enumerated in connection with South Africa. We now import a large amount of tea from India and Ceylon and I can see no reason why we should not in return supply them with many of the articles which they require.

THE WEST INDIAN TRADE

was so exhaustively dealt with by my predecessor last year that I find little to add to what he then said except to emphasize his remarks and again call attention to its importance.

NEWFOUNDLAND.

There is a decided feeling still abroad amongst business men that the admission of Newfoundland as a member of the Canadian Confederation would benefit the trade interests of both countries. A glance at the map will at once convince anyone that the possession of Newfoundland is geographically necessary to complete this Dominion. Not being an agricultural country the import trade in food stuffs is now very large and with the increase of population necessary as the development of its immense mining resources progresses, bids fair to assume greater proportions. This trade Canada would completely control were Newfoundland a part of the Dominion.

ALASKAN BOUNDARY.

The long pending dispute with our neighbors to the south respecting the Alaskan boundary has been referred to a special tribunal. The method of forming that tribunal is not as satisfactory as could be wished, but we can only hope that a fair decision may be reached, and even though no satisfactory result may be arrived at, there is no doubt but that much valuable information will be obtained, which in time, even if not at present, will conduce to a reasonable and honorable settlement of this vexed question.

STEEL SHIP BUILDING.

This subject has been placed before the Federal Government, and delegates from the Halifax Board of Trade had a conference with the Canadian ship builders at Toronto, and also with the Government, relative to a bounty, with good results, and it is hoped before our next meeting that something tangible will result from the efforts being made.

TOURIST TRAVEL.

It is gratifying to me to feel in a position to congratulate the Maritime Board of Trade on the general success that has attended the efforts of the affiliated boards to promote tourist travel. Much doubtless remains to be accomplished in the way of improving and perfecting arrangements, but the transportation facilities now leave little to be desired, every steamer and railway train bringing its quota of visitors, who, in nearly every instance return satisfied that every modern facility has been placed at their disposal at reasonable figures. The importance of this question can be best illustrated by quoting from Sir William Van Horne's speech at Quebec, in January, 1899: "There was no reason in the world, he said, why at least 50,000 additional tourists might not be brought into this province (Quebec). In one way and another these tourists would spend on an average $100 each, that meant the astonishing sum of $5,000,000 laid out in the community. Nor was this all. Some of the finest buildings erected in the city of Vancouver were put up by tourists. There is no limit to the possibilities that may follow a larger influx of tourists into Canada."

What is true of the province of Quebec is equally true in regard to the Maritime Provinces. We have instances in Prince Edward Island, as no doubt there are many instances in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Cape Breton, of wealthy tourists, who, after visiting the provinces, have erected palatial Summer residences and are occupying them at this time.

STOCK GAMBLING.

Permit me to call your attention to the ruinous spread during the past year of stock gambling,

Group of Members of the Maritime Board of Trade, taken in front of the Prince Edward Island Parliament Buildings in which the Convention was held.

The mania for speculation on margins in all kinds of securities seems to have become epidemic in Canada. While it has caused tremendous losses in Ontario and Quebec, we also in these Maritime Provinces have suffered from it. Some people quite ignorant of the simplest principles of stock dealing rush into these speculations, which are really one of the most dangerous and insidious forms of gambling, with the result of ruin to many and serious crippling of resources to more.

MARINE INSURANCE.

Suggestions have been made since our last meeting to invite an acknowledged expert on marine risks to visit all the territorial waters of the Dominion and the principal seaports in order to set at rest once and for ever the complaints as to discrimination that are continually being heard in several of our Canadian seaports. Should this proposition be carried out we may look forward to a final and satisfactory solution of a state of affairs which has been the cause of great irritation and annoyance in shipping circles in the Maritime Provinces for many years past.

FIRE INSURANCE RATES.

This matter was referred to in last year's address and a resolution passed.

The Nova Scotia Fire Insurance Company has recently opened its offices for business under promising conditions.

I am pleased to be able to report that business generally throughout Canada continues satisfactory. Failures have been few and there is an air of prosperity all along the line. At St. John, the Winter port, business last year was beyond that of any previous year. The business commenced in 1895-6, when the registered tonage of vessels employed in the service during that year was 50,892. During the Winter of 1901-2 the registered tonnage had increased to 276,746.

The number of sailings in the regular Atlantic winter service at St. John during 1901-2 was 66, while during the Winter of 1902-3 it was 98. There were in addition to this some 30 sailings of vessels for South Africa loaded with horses and hay during the Winter of 1901–2.

The increase in value of the shipments at St. John during last Winter over those of the preceding was upwards of $5,000,000.

In Prince Edward Island everything points to another prosperous year for the agriculturists, the dairying and fishing interests, while the reported failure of the apple crop in England, France, Belgium and Germany should lend encouragement to apple growers here as elsewhere in the Maritime Provinces.

In conclusion I have to report that since we last met six boards have become affiliated, making the total 33 in all, with an enrolment of 1,719 members. All of which is respectfully submitted.

HORACE HASZARD, President.

Mr. DeWolfe: "I have great pleasure in moving the adoption of this report. The address has meat enough in it to do any able-bodied man for 12 months, and would keep us all busy talking for a longer time than that. It must have taken a great deal of time and research to produce such an excellent review, and I doubt if they have as thorough a one at the big meeting in Montreal. The president has been entirely impartial in his view of things, and the address was in the interests of all the Maritime Provinces, besides giving us an insight into the South African trade, the fast Atlantic steamship service and many other important matters. In regard to a fast Atlantic service I want to say that the Maritime Board of Trade is its only salvation. If Canada ever gets the fast line it will be through the influence of this board. We are a thorn in the flesh of the Government, and we won't give it up. We won't accept a 19-knot service; it must be a 21 or 22-knot. In hearing the report read off it is not possible to judge of the immense amount of work required in its production, nor is it possible to grasp its full import." Mr. DeWolfe concluded by moving the adoption of the report and a standing vote of thanks to the president.

Mr. E. B. Elderkin, Amherst: "Instead of seconding the motion to adopt the report, I think it would be better to refer it to a committee to bring in a resolution in regard to it. I think it is too thorough a report, too 'meaty,' as Mr. DeWolfe has said, to merely pass by in this way, and I do not think it is fair to the president either, who has gone to so much trouble to prepare it; so if it is a proper motion, I move that it be referred to the Committee on Subjects, to bring in a resolution. If this cannot be done, I will second Mr. DeWolfe's motion."

Hon. Senator Wood
President Maritime Board of Trade.

Mr. DeWolfe approved of this and the address was left in the hands of the committee to report on at a later date.

President Haszard thanked the members for their hearty reception of his address and the compliments bestowed on it.

Letters were read from Messrs. Gauvin, Gentzell & Co., photographers, inviting the delegates to have their photographs taken in a group before the assembly building, and from the Y.M.C.A., tendering the visitors the use of their library.

SUBJECTS DISCUSSED.

The Committee on Subjects having returned, Mr. Creed read their report. The order of subjects to be discussed they had decided upon as follows:

No. 1.—The unsatisfactory telegraphic service.—Charlottetown Board.

No. 2.—The most practical route between Prince Edward Island and the mainland, via Capes Traverse and Tormentine, and that action be taken to put this route in the best possible condition to meet requirements of the traffic.

No. 3.—That the terminal facilities at Georgetown be enlarged and improved in order to meet the requirements of Winter traffic between the mainland and Prince Edward Island.—Southern King's Board.

No. 4.—Is the time opportune for legislative union of the Maritime Provinces?

No. 5.—Fast Atlantic mail service.—Kentville Board.

No. 6.—Government control of telephones. Better telephone service between Alberton and Charlottetown.—West Prince Board.

No. 7.—Ways and means for preventing forest fires.—Annapolis Board.

No. 8.—The advisability of securing legislation to change the names of places in the Maritime Provinces where more than one of the same name now occurs.—Sackville Board.

No. 9.—The necessity of additional warehouse room at the wharf, Sunnyside.

No. 10.—The necessity of a suitable steamer to ply between ports on the north side of Prince Edward Island, the Magdalen Islands and the port of Sydney. A subsidy required from the Federal Government.

As far as possible the above order was adhered to, though owing to a number of boards not being represented, it could not be completely carried out; and the subjects put in by some boards were discussed by others.

A VERY POOR SERVICE.

The subject of the unsatisfactory condition of the telegraphic communication between Prince Edward Island and the mainland was introduced by Mr. F. L. Haszard, K.C., Charlottetown Board. He said: "The difficulties that exist in regard to this are fairly well known to gentlemen present, and I think it is fitting that this Maritime Board should express its regret that, notwithstanding all our efforts heretofore to have the matter righted and the telegraphic service put into good condition, nothing has apparently been accomplished. It is clearly the duty of the Federal Government to see to this, as part of the terms on which this province entered into the Dominion Confederation were that telegraph connection with the mainland should be undertaken and maintained. We not only have a very poor service, but we pay excessive rates for it, more than double those in force in other provinces in some cases. From eight o'clock in the evening until eight the next morning we are shut off from all communication by telegraph with the mainland, and we are practically shut off from 8 p.m. on Saturdays till 8 a.m. on Mondays. The Charlottetown Board of Trade sent a delegation to Ottawa to wait on the Government in regard to this matter, though we had some correspondence with them before, and the delegation was given some promise that the Government would make an effort to improve the conditions. There was some movement to have a wireless telegraphic service installed by a Toronto company, and recently when in Ottawa I was told by the Minister of Public Works that the Government were considering the advisability of giving us a service of this kind. I believe there is a service like it in operation between Toronto and Hamilton, in Ontario. I told the Minister that as long as something was done right away we would be satisfied. What means they take to remedy the situation we do not care, as long as there is no further delay about it. So far nothing has been done. I do not think it would be suitable for me to move a resolution on the subject, as I was one of the delegation to Ottawa."

While the resolution was being prepared by Mr. W. F. Tidmarsh, of Charlottetown, Mr. Geo. E. Hughes, M.L.A., Charlottetown, gave some interesting information showing the disadvantages under which residents of Prince Edward Island labored in regard to the telegraphic service. A 60-word message, he said, could be sent from Sydney, C.B., to Ottawa, for 60c., one cent a word. But the same message sent from Charlottetown to Ottawa would cost $2. To the West Indies it cost 8c. more a word to send a telegram from a point in the island than if sent from any other part of Canada. "Telegraphic connection," continued Mr. Hughes, "means much more to us on the island than to people in the other provinces. For a part of the year it is actually our mail service, and there is no doubt but that we lose a large amount of business through the lack of proper communication, as we are limited as to time, there being no night service. It is time some decisive action was taken. The matter is one wholly in the hands of the Dominion Government. We were promised a regular telegraphic service when we entered the confederation, and the promise has not been fulfilled. The Local Government is not in a position to aid us, nor are the Boards of Trade. It is very much to be regretted that the Dominion authorities have given so little attention to the subject. They are quite aware of the condition of things here. At Sydney, last year, a committee was appointed to draft a communication to the Government. A delegation interviewed the Government also, and Hon. Mr. Emmerson went with them. The question was gone into thoroughly and was fully understood by the officials, but with no results. It is a very important subject, and I think it has gone as long as possible without being attended to. I hope the resolution to be adopted will be a strong one."

A resolution moved by Mr. Tidmarsh, and seconded by Mr. Jas. Paton, Charlottetown, was brought in, but was afterwards amended to read as follows:

"Resolved: That in view of the fact that the telegraph service is one which is clearly the duty of the Federal Government to remedy, this Maritime Board of Trade expresses its regret that nothing has yet been done to remedy the grievances complained of, and strongly urge upon the Government its imperative duty to make the service satisfactory; and that the representatives from the Maritime Provinces be requested to press this matter on the consideration of the Government, so that immediate action may be taken, and that the secretary of the board be instructed to send a copy of this resolution to each of the Maritime representatives."

Mr. Paton seconded the motion in a few words, saying that not only the lower provinces, but the western ones as well, would be affected by an improvement in the telegraphic service.

Mr. Geo. Watt, Chatham, N.B., said: "As one who does a good deal of telegraphing, I can see that you in Prince Edward Island have a real grievance. But it is not altogether the fault of the Government. This board is composed of the leading business men of three provinces and we can compel any Government to do what we want. We now have our wishes embodied in a resolution; it is our duty to see that proper attention is given them. We, as business men, can greatly influence the elections, if we wish. The politicians' only fear is of being turned out of office, and they must be convinced that we mean to turn them out if we do not get justice in this matter. When the politicians want anything done they pull all the wires to obtain their end. We must do the same, but heretofore we haven't done so. The Maritime Board of Trade is a slumbering giant and has but to make a test of its strength to find how powerful it is. I will vote for this resolution, but we, as a board, must see that it is carried out. In the coming elections the Government will need us. Let us tell them that they will have to see to this matter, or that we will put those there who will."

Mr. Watt is a vigorous speaker and his remarks were loudly applauded.

Mr. Paton suggested that if the resolution were backed up by each local Board of Trade it would greatly add to its force.

Mr. M. G. DeWolfe, Kentville, N.S., said: "We have had this question up before in the Maritime Board of Trade, and it is well worthy of our consideration. We are getting more and more in the way of eliminating all local matters from our discussions, but this, I consider, instead of local, a subject in which we are all interested as much as you gentlemen of Prince Edward Island. Looking at it as your mail service alone, in Winter, makes it indeed a strong argument. This lack of communication with the mainland has inconvenienced this board in the past. At a former meeting a gentleman from the island was compelled to refuse to act on the board, as he could not be sure of getting to the meetings. The speaker, however, who stated that these resolutions are pigeonholed, was in error. They all reach their proper destination, and every one has been acknowledged by the Department. Our board in Kentville has endorsed the resolution on this subject adopted at last meeting, and I agree with Mr. Paton, that all the local boards should do so. It is a serious matter, and we business men are, no doubt, the force behind the throne in Canadian politics. We are helping ourselves as well as Prince Edward Island when we endorse the views outlined in this resolution. We must let the Department understand that we have become tired and disgusted at the apathy displayed by them, and the matter must be attended to."

Mr. John McLean, ex-M.L.A., Souris, thought that the resolution did not go far enough. He agreed with Mr. Hughes that the resolution must be made as forcible as possible. "Business men in other provinces are continually exchanging telegrams with us, asking and giving quotations, and sometimes two or three parties are wired to, each of whom feels bound to answer, and the lack of proper facilities causes great inconvenience. If our representatives in the House, and all the others interested in it, could be got to press the question on the Government much would be accomplished. The Minister, doubtless, would quietly dispose of it if he could, and the only way is to have it constantly aired in the House. Then we would have results."

Hon. R. C. McLeod, Summerside: "This is not by any means a local question; and we would be glad if all the delegates from the other provinces would take part in the discussion. The trouble is that we have been considering it from too local a standpoint in Prince Edward Island, and having exhausted our efforts now must look elsewhere for aid. And where can we look with greater confidence than to the Maritime Board of Trade. We have not sought the board's assistance until we have done everything that we could do ourselves, and I trust that our friends from the other provinces will make it their cause as well as ours."

The amendment regarding the representatives of the Maritime Provinces being added, Secretary Creed read the resolution as given above, and it was unanimously approved of by the members of the board.

FOREST FIRES.

The next subject to be dealt with was that of the preservation of the forests of the Maritime Provinces from destruction by fire.

Mr. B. H. Dodge, M.L.A., Kentville, N. S., introduced it. He said: "This is an important question, and a very serious one, especially in Nova Scotia, where nearly all the forests this year have been devastated by fire. The cuts this Winter will be wholly of burnt timber, and great difficulty will be found in obtaining what is wanted. Just how protection against fire is to be secured is a difficult question to deal with. But first we should ask the owners of the timber if they wished the Government to take any action. Then we might outline some course to follow, which could be improved upon if necessary by the timber owners. In some places there are forest fire constables. They patrol the woods and put out any small fires that may be carelessly left by hunters or fishing parties, for this class is chiefly responsible for the fires that occur. They light a fire to cook their meals, and then instead of putting it out when leaving the spot, leave the smouldering embers there to be blown very often by the wind through the forests. The constables also track these parties and bring legal action against them. The constables should be paid partly by the Government, partly by the timber owners and partly by the municipality. The matter should be put before the Local Governments, and I think no body of men can urge it with greater chances of success than the Maritime Board of Tradef As to the replanting of the trees, that is the duty of the Forestry Association, who, however, are not doing very much.

Mr. W. S. Loggie, M.L.A., Chatham, N. B., gave the New Brunswicker's point of view. "It is a grave question in New Brunswick," he said. "The Surveyor-General of the province some time ago invited representatives of the lumber interests to the capital to discuss the question, and the subject was thoroughly gone into. As to how the forests could be best protected, it was a matter of opinion. How this board is to approach the question it is our duty to decide upon. The preservation of our forests so largely depends upon the cutting of undersized timber that that question is also involved. That this is done is a fact known to the Government and all concerned, but it is claimed that it is not practicable for the Government to enforce the law against it. As a matter of fact the double stumpage tax is not collected. Timber men say that it pays better to haul undersized logs than to pass them by. I would be glad to support a resolution if a practicable one could be framed. Forest preservation is a subject of perhaps more importance to New Brunswick than to Nova Scotia, as the latter province has great mineral wealth. But take away from New Brunswick her forests and the province could not stand it. I do not think New Brunswick could accept the responsibilities that would be put upon her if she did not receive the $120,000 a year for local government, that has been suggested. I am not prepared to make a motion on this question."

Chas. M. Creed

Capt. Joseph Read, M.L.A., Summerside: "The question now before the board shows me vividly how the interests of the three provinces are interwoven. This is not a question that concerns Nova Scotia and New Brunswick alone, although the Legislature of Prince Edward Island has already dealt with the question in this province. But we in Prince Edward Island are as deeply interested in the forests of the other two provinces as they are themselves. In the island we have arrived at a point where there is little forest left, and we have to import all our wood. In consequence we pay 'through the nose' for your forest fires. So the Maritime Board of Trade as a whole can take up the question, and I think we ought to be able to rouse our slow-moving legislatures to action. The time is already here when our forest wealth is greatly enhanced in value. As the forests are cleared and the product shortened the value goes up. No doubt if the Government of New Brunswick could be moved to enforce the laws as to cutting undersized timber, etc., it would not yet be too late to save our forests. I think we should also urge drastic laws against sportsmen negligently leaving fires behind them in the forests."

Mr. Geo. S. Inman, Montague, P.E.I., recognized the importance of the subject, but pointed out that if the fires were the result of accident, no punishment could be meted out; if they were started maliciously it would be very hard to find the culprit. "I do not think that the appointing of wardens for the forests would successfully combat the difficulty. Heavy fines could be imposed on sportsmen and others setting fires for cooking or other purposes in the woods at certain seasons of the year. If the forests are to be protected these fines could be raised from time to time, until people got to fear them. A provision in the criminal code also deals with this question. If people could not be made to cease the practice by fines and imprisonment, then these punishments should be made more and more severe each year till they become a terror to those who break the law."

Mr. Dodge: "We have all these laws in Nova Scotia, but the penalties are never imposed. There is no one to inflict them. I presume your law applies to those persons setting fires at a certain time of year, but people don't set fires to clear the land. They are started for other purposes. But if this board can devise some means for preventing these fires from being set at all the question will be answered."

Hon. R. C. McLeod, Summerside: "While we are interested here, we are not so to the extent that you in the other provinces are. But if you prepare some resolution we in the island would gladly support it. If a resolution is not prepared now, perhaps it can be before the conclusion of the meeting," and then adopted."

The President: "I think the proper course would be to pass a resolution calling the attention of the New Brunswick and Nova Scotia Governments to the subject, and let them deal with it as they think best."

It was decided that Messrs. Dodge, Loggie and McLeod, members of the three Provincial Legislatures, should be a committee to bring in a resolution in the afternoon session.

Before the adjournment for lunch, Mr. E. B. Elderkin, Amherst, said that the conditions in the three provinces were very different. New Brunswick owned its own timber. In Nova Scotia private individuals owned it. The law in Nova Scotia allowed fires to be lighted in the woods at certain seasons of the year, in other seasons they were prohibited. Thus any resolution could only be general in its nature.

An adjournment was then made for luncheon.

The Afternoon Session.

About three o'clock the meeting was called to order. The morning session had served to sharpen the members' debating powers and get them interested in the business of the meeting, and all settled down to work with evident enjoyment and relish.

FAST ATLANTIC MAIL SERVICE.

The subject to be discussed was the fast Atlantic mail service, one in which all could take a part in debating. It was introduced by one who has been identified with the efforts made to secure a fast Atlantic service for some years, Mr. M. G. DeWolfe. "This matter has been up before the Kentville Board already," said Mr. DeWolfe, "and I have been talking on the subject for the past four years and don't want to say much more about it now. But I will only ask, do all realize that the time for us to demand such a service has arrived, and that it is advisable for us to take steps to secure it? I will not make another resolution, as one was adopted at a meeting of the Sydney Board of Trade which might be endorsed by this board. Some parties have tried at different times to throw cold water on the scheme, proposing a 19-knot service, etc., but we don't want that. We want a service that will be really a fast service as compared with any now in existence. It was very noticeable that many delegates to the Convention of the Chambers of Commerce of the Empire at Montreal came by American lines, and landed in New York. Among the older members of this board the question has already been well threshed out and resolutions endorsed." Mr. DeWolfe then read the resolutions passed at Sydney.

Mr. John B. Foster, Halifax, though he had not come prepared to go fully into this question, nevertheless felt convinced that there was great need of a fast Atlantic service to some Canadian port. "And I think," he continued, "that Halifax is by nature best fitted to be the port. I have inspected the harbors of New York, Boston, Baltimore and other American cities and they cannot be compared with that of Halifax. It is very spacious and crossings can be made from the other side to this at the swiftest speed without the least danger. I would be in favor of giving the C.P.R. running rights over the Intercolonial to Halifax. Though it would be a shorter haul to

Chas. D. Stewart
Corresponding Secretary of the Board.

St. John there are so many other advantages possessed by Halifax that this argument is easily overruled. One of them is in regard to insurance, which with Halifax as the terminal port, would be little more than nominal. There is also a day's sail difference between Halifax and Portland and the other side, and three vessels from Halifax would do what four from Portland, or five from St. John could. The saving would be in the crew, in coal consumed, and many other items. As a Winter and Summer port no other will equal that of Halifax."

Capt. Read, Summerside: "I remember meeting the secretary in Halifax some 14 or 15 years ago, and discussing this very question, and I have had no cause to alter my attitude since then as to the best port for a fast line to run to. I have before advocated a fast service and my remarks were endorsed by a unanimous vote. What was true then is doubly true now. There are many elements that are to be considered in this connection which do not appear on the surface. Take the question of insurance, which Mr. Foster referred to. I am perfectly satisfied that that one item, if it were what it should be as between Halifax and Great Britain and St. John or Portland and Great Britain, would more than pay for the cost of any difference in the haul to the port. As Mr. Foster says, three steamers going from Halifax to Great Britain would do the work of four from Portland, so that the risk would only be three-fourths as much, the Halifax boat being only three-fourths as long at sea as the other." Capt. Read gave some very interesting information from a map, copies of which were in the hands of the members, showing that the proposed routes, both for Winter and Summer, were almost clear of fog and entirely clear of ice. It was an absolutely safe route, and all dangers would be minimized by the short distance to go. He began to compare the conditions in Winter between the ports of Halifax and St. John, when Mr. DeWolfe interrupted.

Mr. DeWolfe said that the two speakers, Mr. Foster and Capt. Read, were not sticking to the subject, which was, the necessity for a fast line. The question of which should be the port was not part of it, and a discussion on that subject could only result in arousing animosity between the rival factions favoring St. John and Halifax.

Capt. Read recognized the force of Mr. DeWolfe's remark, and proceeded: "We all know the advantages that would acrue to a young nation by having a fast ocean service; but I think there are not many of us who realize all the difficulties. It means a great deal to get a boat to go two or three knots faster. Take a steamer going at 10 knots an hour; to get her to go 12 knots the power would have to be doubled. That is not generally known. So that to secure a fast service, the last two or three knots after 19 would require an immense motive force. But if we were to secure a fast line it would be greatly to our advantage, directly and indirectly. Many crossing the ocean will be glad to make a trip of four days of it instead of six, and they would come by the line that made it in that time. Thus the passengers going to the United States would use the Canadian fast line in preference to others."

Mr. J. P. Longard, Halifax, thought that there was no reason for eliminating from the discussion the subject of the most suitable port. "We do not want to look upon this from a local standpoint," said Mr. Lougard, "yet if we are to arrive at a correct conclusion we must be more or less local. I have not the slightest doubt that if when the subsidy was offered a few years ago for a fast line, the contractors were offered the choice of a port we would now have the service. But it is hard to get anyone to take up the project when Montreal or Quebec are spoken of as terminal ports. The question has got to be threshed out throughout the Dominion, and as soon as we here can decide upon a national port the better for all concerned. It seems a shame that this country should be taxed to keep up ports in a foreign country."

Mr. Foster: "The reason why Halifax has not long ago been selected as the port is because the project has been gone about in a very roundabout way. It is the introduction of politics and political necessities that has given prominence to other ports' claims. Halifax is the most accessible port both in Summer and Winter. I know enough of the railway business to know that if a railway can't run to Halifax for this purpose those who conduct it don't know their business. I do not see why the C.P.R. could not operate over the Intercolonial to Halifax. For that matter the C.P.R. might manage the Intercolonial. It wouldn't cost any more to run to Halifax."

Mr. Elderkin: "While I am in sympathy with the remarks of Mr. Foster and Mr. Read, I think it would be unwise for this board to name Halifax or any other port in particular. Mr. Foster says that politics has been the drawback in our not getting the fast line. Well, politics are altogether what we make them. If the Government named Halifax as a port, then the St. John men would want to know why they were neglected, and vice versa. Instead of looking to the needs of the country as a whole, we all try to secure the great favors for our own localities, and we make things disagreeable for the Government when we don't get them, so we cannot blame the politicians if they try to avoid our censure. If this board merely asks for a fast line and names no port, then we will have the co-operation of every maritime representative in Parliament, instead of simply those who are satisfied with the port we choose. And if Halifax is as fine a port as the speakers have said, and St. John as poor a port, then there will be no question which should be chosen. But for us to name any port I think very unwise."

Mr. McLean: "No doubt, as Mr. Foster says, politics have a lot to do with our trouble in getting a fast line, but we can easily understand how the Government at Ottawa would be approached by Quebec members and delegates wanting a terminal port there, and any Government would hesitate before offending such powerful friends. If we advocate merely a fast Atlantic service, naming no port, then the Government will feel backed up by the Maritime Board of Trade. The matter can safely be left to the contractors, who are sure to pick the most suitable port."

The President: "If this board were to express the opinion that a terminal port should be sought for in the Maritime Provinces rather than up the St. Lawrence, it would materially lessen the difficulty."

Mr. Geo. Watt, Chatham: "I have a resolution prepared, in order to bring something definite before the board to work upon. There is no question that we need a fast Atlantic service. As instanced by Capt. Read, some of the delegates to the convention at Montreal came by the New York route. Even our own Cabinet Ministers travel that way sometimes. The subject of marine insurance is also worthy of attention. If Halifax is the splendid port some speakers here said, then there can be no two views on the subject at all. I can easily understand why the Cabinet do not come to a conclusion as to a port. It was for the same reason that they made Moncton the terminal of the proposed Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, fear of offending either one or the other opposing parties in these provinces. Where we have opinions I believe we should state them, but as a board I do not think it would be advisable to bind ourselves to any particular port." Mr. Watt then read a resolution calling for an immediate fast line to some Maritime port.

M. G. DeWolfe

Mr. M. G. DeWolfe read from "The Canadian Grocer" the resolution adopted by the Maritime Board of Trade on this subject last year at Sydney, and added that Mr. Watt's resolution was not strong enough. It looked like a new move on the part of the Maritime Board of Trade, and he thought something should be added to show that the board had been asking for this line for the past four years, and nothing had been accomplished by the Government. He thought it should be made a very forcible resolution.

Mr. Elderkin thought that it would really be a weakness to put it as strongly as suggested. This would be a Canadian line, one in which the whole Dominion would be interested, and "to demand that the port be here, when we are only a small part of Canada, would be a weakness."

Mr. A. J. McFadyen, Tignish, pointed out that many public men were in favor of Quebec or some other St. Lawrence port, and if a large expenditure of public money were sought by the Maritime Board of Trade for the lower provinces these men would have something to say in the matter.

Mr. Jas. Paton, Charlottetown: "If we are to have a fast line there can be no doubt but that Halifax should be the port. It cannot be up the St. Lawrence. A fast line that must go up the river becomes a slow line. So St. John, or Halifax, or at least some Maritime port, must be selected. It would be well in the resolution to insist on an up-to-date line in every respect, not a 19-knot service, but one of 22 or 23 knots an hour. We shouldn't be behind the United States.

Mr. Geo. E. Hughes, M.L.A., Charlottetown, suggested that the resolutions previously passed by the board should be sent along with this one to the Government.

Mr. D. Nicholson, Charlottetown: "I think we should leave out any mention of a Maritime port. What Canada wants is a fast line, and the Federal Government will have to provide the subsidy. Certainly we don't want the whole thing burked because we may not have a port in the Maritime Provinces as a terminus."

Mr. Watt did not agree with this. He contended that one reason why the service had not been secured was because there were too many questions to consider. "We are helping the Government by narrowing the scope."

Mr. Beer, Charlottetown: "I have listened to the debate with great interest and instruction, and the only conclusion I can come to is that we must send a delegation to the Government. Resolutions are useless. All the speakers seem strong as to the facts in the case, and should be able to convince the Government. They are not long in deciding to spend a hundred million dollars when they think it right."

Mr. Lyons, Charlottetown: "Mr. Beer struck the key note of the situation when he said to send a delegation to Ottawa. When anything is to be done all other bodies send delegations. Let us do the same, and send representatives from all over the Maritime Provinces."

Capt. Read agreed with Mr. Paton, that for a fast line to go up the St Lawrence would be impossible. "In Winter, ice; in Summer, fog," said the captain. While on his feet he suggested that the press should take up the question of the various accidents happening on the St. Lawrence. Some of them were due to sheer carelessness. They should not be allowed to exist by the authorities."

The resolution moved by Mr. Watt, seconded by Mr. Elderkin, after the two or three amendments suggested, was then read again and adopted. It is as follows: "Re-affirming the three previous resolutions from this Maritime Board of Trade, copies of which are herewith attached, which resolutions have hitherto been ignored, resolved, that in the opinion of this board, Canada needs a fast Atlantic mail service, whose terminus shall be some Maritime Province port, and consider it the duty of the Federal Government, to immediately institute a service equal to the fastest."

The last word came from Mr. Longard. "We'll never be a nation till we get a national port," he said.

GREETINGS TO CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Mr. DeWolfe, at this point, suggested that it would be in good taste to send a hearty telegram of welcome to the visitors at the convention in Montreal. Mr. Longard endorsed this, and a committee was appointed to draft a telegram, consisting of Messrs. Paton, Fraser and Watt.

Later in the afternoon the telegram was read and approved of by the delegates. It was as follows: "The Maritime Board of Trade, in session at Charlottetown, greet the Congress of the Chambers of Commerce of the Empire, feeling assured that your deliberations will tend to the welfare and advancement of the great nation of which we are proud to form a part."

A SUBJECT QUICKLY DISPOSED OF.

Government control of telephones was the next subject, but it came in for little discussion. The question dealt altogether with the needs of Prince Edward Island, and Mr. DeWolfe suggested that as it was a local matter, the various boards of the island should frame resolutions first, and afterwards these could be endorsed by the Maritime Board of Trade.

TOO MANY OF ONE KIND.

In the absence of representatives of the Sackville Board, who had sent in the subject, Capt. Read introduced the eighth topic on the list, the advisability of changing the names of places where there are more than one of the same name. He said that there was a Summerside in Prince Edward Island, and one in Nova Scotia also, and it frequently led to a great deal of confusion. It should be the case that a cable could be sent from any part of the world to a town in the Maritime Provinces with the certainty that it would get there and not go somewhere else.

Mr. Loggie said that it was a matter for the municipalities to deal with separately. It was not long since Kingston, N.B., had been changed to Rexton. Someone must take the initiative; there is nothing to prevent a town changing its name if the people desire so.

Capt. Reid: "You see, Mr. Loggie, Summerside people don't want the name of their town changed; we want the other fellow to change his."

Mr. Foster did not think the matter required the influence of a body like this.

The subject was dropped.

A GREAT QUESTION.

"Is the time opportune for legislative union?" was the weighty question asked by Mr. DeWolfe. "Unfortunately," said he, "a prominent man who was to take this question up is not here, but it was sent in by our board, so I bring it forward, not as requiring a resolution, but so as to open up the question and attract some attention to it for another session. We come here to gain and to give information, and, though, perhaps, some members of the different local legislatures would be opposed to the union, an interchange of opinions would be valuable. Compared with other provinces, we, in the Maritime section, are somewhat overgoverned and it is a question whether possible investors would not rather go to some other place where there were not so many high salaries and 'honorables.' There has been a great awakening in the Maritime Provinces of recent years, and material resources in splendid supply have been brought to our notice which we knew nothing of a few years ago. Canada, outside of British Columbia, has little material wealth to rival Nova Scotia in some lines. In the United States there is no great mineral wealth till we get to Pennsylvania; so that we have no rivals around us. We have a valuable seaboard here also. There is no doubt but that the Maritime Provinces could be placed in a position as powerful as that of the New England states in relation to the United States. The New England states are the industrial levers to the whole of the Republic, and the Maritime Provinces should stand in the same relation to the rest of Canada.

W. S. Loggie

"To accomplish this there are some changes we must make. We must first consolidate our forces, just as we have consolidated our local boards of trade into this Maritime Board. The Maritime Board has accomplished much that could not otherwise have been done by the local boards. By a union of the Maritime Provinces under one governing body we would make these provinces a very powerful part of the Dominion. Separated, we stand in a disadvantageous position before the other provinces. Ontario people tell us that their province would cover our three, and all we can reply is that all the smartest men in the country come from the Maritime Provinces. If we were one province, we could talk to them.

"We would be better able to keep our young men at home also. They are looking for large things nowadays, and they would feel prouder and stronger if belonging to one large maritime province. There are many features that look favorable to a union. Working together we could do great things. The expenses of government would be greatly lessened. The question will come up some time forcibly and will have to be finally decided."

FOREST FIRES RESOLUTION.

The Committee on Forest Fires then brought in the following resolution, which was adopted: "Whereas there have recently been devastating fires in our forests and timber lands, and, whereas, the laws against setting such fires are either insufficient or inoperative, and, whereas, so much depends upon the preservation of our lands; therefore, resolved, that in the opinion of this board the time has fully arrived when some practical measures should be taken by our Local Governments to prevent the destruction of our forests by fire, either by the appointment of special guardians, or such other means as they in their opinion believe will attain the desired object. And, further resolved, that it is most desirable that the laws made, or hereafter to be made, regarding cutting undersized sawlogs, be strictly enforced."

WAREHOUSE ROOM AT SUMMERSIDE WHARF.

This subject did not occupy the meeting long. After a few remarks from Capt. Read, Summerside; H. W. Turner, O'Leary, and A. J. McFadyen, Tignish, it was finally resolved: "That better shipping facilities should be provided at the railway wharf at Summerside to accommodate the steamers landing freight for transportation over the Prince Edward Island Railway." Mr. McFadyen moved the resolution, and Mr. Turner seconded. Mr. McFadyen said that there was accommodation at Summerside Railway wharf for only one steamer, and all the other steamers had to land at the other wharves, their freights being trucked across the town, thus taxing importers for both cartage and wharfage. The companies said they would willingly land at the railway wharf, but couldn't get accommodation.

NEW STEAMBOAT LINE WANTED.

Mr. John P. Brennan, North Sydney, brought up a new subject. He said: "We had a meeting of the North Sydney Board, and a resolution was framed to be placed before the Maritime Board in regard to a new boat line. There is great necessity for this line which I am about to ask for. We have no communication from the Magdalen Islands or with ports here, and I might include the ports on the Miramichi. I will read a resolution which I ask you to endorse."

Mr. Brennan then read as follows: "Whereas, owing to the great necessity existing for a weekly steam communication between the ports on the north side of Prince Edward Island, the Miramichi and the Magdalen Islands and the port of Sydney, and whereas traffic has increased to such an extent that efficient steam communication must be provided; therefore,

"Resolved, that this Maritime Board of Trade press upon the Federal Government the necessity of granting a sufficient subsidy to enable a company to place a suitable steamer on the aforesaid route."

Mr. Watt, in seconding the resolution, said that it spoke for itself and needed little to recommend it. The route would be a paying one.

Mr. N. Rattenbury, Charlottetown: "What is the nature of the traffic between North Sydney and the Magdalen Islands?"

Mr. Brennan: "A petition was sent from the Quebec Legislature on behalf of the Magdalen Islands, and I thought we could include a resolution from the Maritime Board of Trade. The people in the Magdalen Islands wanted a service to Sydney, but they also wanted it to go to Prince Edward Island."

Mr. Tidmarsh: "The export of the Magdalen Islands is entirely in fish, with the exception probably of two or three carloads of potatoes. It might be desirable to open a line to the islands, though two steamers ply there now, connecting with Cape Breton ports. I wouldn't think it possible to call at any north ports in Prince Edward Island, but perhaps Charlottetown and Souris might be touched at instead, for the bulk of the cargo would come from this island; from Sydney the traffic would be chiefly with the United States."

Mr. John Agnew, Alberton (West Prince Board): "Why should not such a line call at Alberton? Alberton is quite an exporting place. More produce goes from there than from Souris. I support this resolution. I think it would benefit the west end of the island."

Mr. McLean, Souris: "I agree with Mr. Tidmarsh in some of his remarks. I don't think, however, that the trade with the Magdalen Islands is of sufficient importance to call for a subsidy. The export trade from those islands is considerable, but it would not go by this route, not in the direction of Sydney. It must also be understood that to call at the different ports a steamer would have to make almost the round of the islands."

Mr. Foster: "The Board should be acquainted with all the facts before passing any resolution. It appears that there are two steamers going there now. It is no wonder the Dominion Government does not grant all our requests if we go to them knowing as little of what we want as in this case."

Capt. Read: "I am surprised that the gentlemen speaking overlook Summerside. Summerside is the second town in importance on this island, and has no direct communication with Sydney. If a steamer is to be put on between island ports and Sydney it should of course take in Alberton, New London and other ports. I don't think, though, that it would pay at first. I would suggest Mr. Brennan's motion if he would change it to a route from Sydney, through the lakes, the gut of Canso and taking in Charlottetown, Malpecque and other ports."

Mr. Logie: "The question as to a route between the Miramichi and the north side of Prince Edward Island has been discussed before. We don't realize the great amount of produce that goes from the north of the island to the Miramichi. If we let the southern ports pass for the present, for they are already well supplied, and give steam communication to the north side, Alberton, New London and Malpecque to the Magdalen Islands, making the return trips without calling at the ports on the south side, it would be a very satisfactory and paying route. There is already some communication by the Black Diamond Line. The duty of this Board is to assist the outlying ports, not only the most populous districts.

Hon. R. C. McLeod: "If we approach the Government on this subject we ought to know fully what we want. The Government would be glad to dispose of the matter by pointing out that we are not agreed. Some of the ports spoken of are now well served, and if we ask the Government for a subsidy we must be satisfied that there is no present communication over the proposed route. It seems to me that we are not now sufficiently well informed to make known our wishes to the Government. We must ask for such as will be of sufficient importance to be carried out."

Mr. Brennan: "It has been clearly explained what we want. We want a steamer that will touch at the Miramichi, the north side of Prince Edward Island, the Magdalen Islands and Sydney. It does not matter, anyway, what route we choose. The people of the Magdalen Islands have sent out a petition signed by nearly everyone on the islands and they are bound to have the communication they desire, not what we want. Dr. Delaney, their representative in the Quebec Legislature, is also going to take the matter up."

Mr. Tidmarsh: "The distance is very great. It must be a hundred odd miles from the Magdalen Islands to Alberton, and 150 to Miramichi."

Mr. Watt: "Eighty miles to the Magdalen Islands and 45 from Alberton to Miramichi. Any boat that can't do that in a week is a poor one, and there is a great trade to be done in oats, hay, pork and other produce. Miramichi ports are the largest customers of the north side of this island. I am not interested in the Magdalens, but I am in the northern ports of Prince Edward Island."

Mr. McLean: "I understand the great export trade of the Magdalen Islands is in mackerel, and that goes to the United States, and consequently wouldn't go by this route. Other lines of produce are shipped in their own vessels, owned in the islands. The trade between the Miramichi and the north side of this Island, however, might pay."

The President: "Do you take into account the draft of notes and the size of steamers needed? On the north of Prince Edward Island a boat would be required that would draw very little water. I am merely asking for information."

Mr. Brennan: "I was told there would be no trouble about that, if a subsidy is granted. The shipowners know all those waters thoroughly."

Mr. Tidmarsh: "I think the Magdalen Islands should be withdrawn from the resolution. The Government is already subsidizing steamers to those islands to the extent of $14,000 per year, and it would weaken the resolution to ask for another calling at the Magdalens."

Mr. Logie: "One of the strongest arguments is the desire of the people in the islands to connect with Sydney and it gives a stronger claim on the Government when the service proposed is to take in four different provinces."

Mr. Hughes moved in amendment that the resolution be referred to a committee to define a route and report as early as possible. He thought it would be a mistake to let the matter pass now. The Government were proposing to spend millions to bring the products of the northwest to the Atlantic, and now was the time to get their own products carried also.

Mr. Tidmarsh seconded the motion and the route was referred to a committee of Messrs. Brennan, Watt, McFadyen, Hughes and Dodge.

An adjournment was then made till 8 p.m.

The Evening Session.

Promply at 8 o'clock the assembly was called to order, and Mr. G. S. Inman, Montague (Southern King's Board), rose on behalf of his Board and submitted the following resolution: "Resolved, that in the opinion of this Board, the terminal facilities at Georgetown, P. E. I., should be enlarged and improved in order to meet the requirements of winter traffic between the mainland and Prince Edward Island."

"What concerns Prince Edward Island in this matter," said Mr. Inman, "also concerns the mainland. In the winter months we ship considerable goods from Georgetown to Halifax and Sydney, and shipments of smelts, eels, etc., in winter to Boston are also heavy. The terminal facilities in Georgetown for steamers will not for a moment compare with those in other ports and they are miserably inadequate to the requirements. The building in Pictou is 150 x 450 feet, and in that two lines of railway can load and unload. Georgetown has to handle almost the same amount of freight and the freight shed is only 200 by 22 feet. With such a narrow building, not only is much inconvenience caused, but

OPEN LETTER.

To the Retail Grocery Trade of Western Ontario:

DEAR SIRS,—We thank you for your past patronage, and wish to say that we are still doing business at the old stand, No. 156 Dundas street and 155 Carling street, and never were in better position to cater to your wants. In the last few years there have sprung up so many forms of Companies, Corporations, Associations and Combinations that it is difficult to foresee where these combinations are going to end. In fact the average Retail Grocer to-day does not know where he is at, or who he is dealing with. Now, to avoid any doubt on this matter, so far as we are concerned, we would respectfully ask you to send your orders to us, either through our travellers, by letter, telegraph or telephone, and by so doing we will be responsible to you, and you to us, and to no other person or persons. We will meet all legitimate competition, no matter from what source. We make a specialty of Black and Green Ceylon Teas, Japan and Indian Teas, Raw and Refined Sugars, New Orleans Syrups and Molasses, Canned Salmon, Japan and Fancy Rices, Currants and Raisins, Cereals, Cheese, Lard, etc., etc. We control for London certain leading brands of goods, such as the celebrated "Quaker Brand" of canned goods, Clover Leaf Salmon, and other lines for which we solicit your wants, and we will give your orders our best attention.

Yours very truly,

John Garvey,

damage is also done to the freight in some cases. Goods have to be piled up along the sides of the building and a great weight is often placed upon the goods at the bottom. Once there was plenty of room, but the traffic has now grown larger, and conditions are also different. It is not till winter now that many of the farm products are shipped. The warehouse should be so constructed that trains could load inside it. Last year a whole carload of smelts was destroyed by being left out in the sun; had there been a suitable shed they would have been saved. This resolution will not interfere with that in regard to a better route between the island and mainland. Until a better route is established the route by which freight now goes should have ample facilities for shipping."

Mr. McLean: "I have much pleasure in seconding this motion. There are two steamers now calling at Georgetown, where formerly only one was required, and a great part of the traffic that used to be carried on in summer is now done in winter. It is necessary that the freight should be unloaded into the sheds in readiness for the steamer, and the shed should be large enough to allow of the freight being assorted. When it is all thrown together in a small shed days of delay are caused before it can be assorted and sent to its destination. Even though the time should arrive when we should have another route from the island to the mainland, it is necessary now to improve the facilities at Georgetown."

The President: "I know from my own experience of innumerable delays of goods at Georgetown, necessitating telegrams and inquiries of all kinds. It is necessary that something should be provided against this."

After some further discussion, in which Hon. Mr. McLeod, Mr. DeWolfe, Mr. W. H. Aitken and Mr. McLean participated, the resolution introduced by Mr. Inman was adopted by the Board.

This question having been disposed of, the committee appointed to consider the route of a steamer plying between the island, the Magdalen Islands and Sydney brought in their report. It read as follows: "To the President and members of the Maritime Board of Trade: Your committee on the route of steamers between North Sydney, the Magdalen Islands and other ports respectfully recommend the following as a feasible route: Leaving North Sydney, calling at a safe port in the Magdalen Islands, thence to New London and Alberton, P.E.I., thence to Chatham, N.B., returning calling at Alberton and New London, thence to North Sydney, a round trip of 625 miles. Your committee consider a steamer can give a weekly service on this route." This report being adopted, Mr. Brennan's resolution, as above, was passed by the Board.

COMMUNICATION WITH P.E.I.

Subject No. 2 on the list, which had been left over from the morning, in the expectation of several other members arriving, was then taken up by Mr. F. C. Harris, Sackville, N.B., manager of the N. B. & P. E. I. Railway. He read the following resolution: "Resolved, that the Dominion Parliament be requested to put one of the winter steamers on the Summerside-Cape Tormentine route immediately on the close of summer navigation, with a view to keeping up regular communication with the western part of Prince Edward Island, including Charlottetown and New Brunswick, as long as practicable, and that the necessary steps be taken to provide safe terminal facilities at Cape Tormentine pier.

Speaking to this, Mr. Harris said: "I think this question is pretty well understood by the people of Prince Edward Island. For the last two winters trials have been made to see how the route could best be kept open. The first winter it was fairly successful; last winter it was also successful for a time, but owing to an accident to the 'Stanley' communication was terminated. It is not worth while to go into all the advantages that would accrue from this route being followed. The idea is to have a steamer leave this side (Prince Edward Island), say, at 7 a.m., taking two hours to Cape Tormentine and transporting the passengers to the N. B. & P. E. I. Railway. They would thus catch the noon trains, while by taking other routes they would have to take the evening trains. While the steamers were running on this route the passengers expressed themselves as very well satisfied with the service, and hoped that it would be maintained. The mails were also carried satisfactorily."

Mr. Hughes—"I would call the attention of the board to the list of subjects for discussion. According to the list, this should be a discussion of a route between Cape Traverse and Cape Tormentine, not between Summerside and Tormentine."

Capt. Read—"The test of a Summerside-Tormentine route is the same as a test of a Cape Traverse-Tormentine route. Unfortunately our people seem bound to work for the Georgetown-Pictou route without giving the western route a fair trial." Capt. Read went on to show that in the former trials between Summerside and the mainland there had been none made under fair conditions. Mr. Prefontaine had said he would come down and look over the route, and he (Mr. Read) was satisfied that, with the endorsement of the Maritime Board of Trade, the Minister would put the "Stanley" on the route as soon as the "Northumberland" was unable to perform the service.

Mr. Hughes moved, seconded by Mr. Watt, that the resolution now before the board be referred to the Committee on Resolutions.

The matter was left thus until the following morning.

Mr. E. B. Elderkin, President of the Maritime Stock Breeders' Association, asked to have the following subject discussed in the morning: "The Maritime Stock Breeders' Association for the development of trade with the West Indies and South America."

VOTE OF THANKS.

Before the adjournment Mr. Logie moved a vote of thanks to the Premier and Government of Prince Edward Island for the use of the Legislative Assembly rooms, and to the City Council of Charlottetown and the local Board of Trade for their kindness and hospitality to the visiting delegates. Mr. DeWolfe seconded this, and a hearty vote of thanks was passed.

An adjournment was made until 10 a.m. on the following morning (Thursday).

Thursday Morning Session.

The first business of the morning was the reading and adoption of the committee's report on the President's address, which was moved by Capt. Read, seconded by Mr. Longard, and unanimously approved of by those present. The report read: "To the President and members of the Maritime Board of Trade: Your committee beg leave to submit the following report in reference to the President's address: We recommend that the President's address and the proceedings of the board be published in pamphlet form for distribution as may be deemed advisable. It affords your committee much pleasure in recommending that the thanks of the Maritime Board of Trade be conveyed to President Hassard for his able, instructive and comprehensive address, which must have entailed a large amount of labor and research to prepare, embracing as it does such a vast range of subjects."

The President, in a brief reply, thanked the board for the manner in which his address had been received and for the compliments bestowed upon it by the committee.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT.

Secretary Creed then read the financial statement of the Board for the past year as follows:—

The Maritime Board of Trade.

In account with C. M. Creed, Permanent Secretary-Treasurer.

To expenses for 1903	$ 43.81
To Secretary's salary	125.00
	$168.81
Credit.
By balance from 1902	$140.11
By subscription for 1903	246.50	$386.61
Balance		$217.80

PROVINCIAL UNION.

Mr. DeWolfe then read his resolution re Provincial union. It read: "Whereas, at various times the union of the Maritime Provinces has been proposed, and as yet has not been discussed, and whereas it has been proposed by the Board for discussion at this meeting; be it resolved, therefore, that in our opinion it is desirable; that it would add to our revenue collectively, reduce greatly our expenses, and thereby add to our wealth commercially and financial standing."

The subject was left over for discussion at the next annual meeting of the Maritime Board of Trade.

WINTER COMMUNICATION AGAIN.

The subject of a winter route between Capes Traverse and Tormentine Seen Everywhere by Everybody!

Every Grocer, every Laundress, every Newspaper talks about Chinese Starch. They speak of its marvellous finish and of its economy. Neighbors take pride in showing their beautiful linen, so easily prepared that a child can do the ironing readily.

Chinese Starch is without a rival. It has lots of cheap imitators that cause only trouble for the laundress. Grocers selling these imitations only do so once. It does not pay. Sell the genuine Chinese Starch, prepared only by the was again brought up, and the resolution put in by the Summerside Board was cancelled.

Mr. Hughes: "Should not that be submitted to the Committee on Resolutions? The terms of Confederation in regard to winter communication with the mainland have not been carried out. The matter is wholly in the hands of the Dominion Government, and let them carry out the contract. It is not within our province to insist on any particular route. That would prejudice our claim."

Mr. Tidmarsh: "I think it would be very imprudent to experiment again on the route from Summerside. When the winter sets in all lines of communication are sometimes shut off in one night. If a steamer is put on that route this year it will still not be an established route, and there will be some uncertainty as to whether it is to be counted upon or not; consequently shippers would not use it. Both steamers should be put on the Charlottetown route as long as possible and then put on the Georgetown route. Give that a fair trial. It is too sectional a question, anyway, for the Maritime Board of Trade to define any route."

Capt. Read: "The speakers have gone beyond the resolution. All it calls for is that a steamer should take up the western route and keep it open as long as possible. I would also like to see the experiment made under more auspicious circumstances than prevailed last time."

Mr. Wm. Yould, Kentville Board, put in a resolution to take the place of that brought in by the Summerside Board and which was cancelled. His resolution read: "Resolved, that while this Maritime Board of Trade fully realize the very great importance of better winter communication between Prince Edward Island and the mainland, and urge upon the Government to use every means in their power to bring about that most desirable result, this Board do not feel that they have the information before them at present to define the route that should be adopted. And further resolved, that a copy of this resolution be sent to the Minister of Marine and the Prince Edward Island representatives at Ottawa."

The resolution was seconded by Mr. J. P. Longard.

Mr. MacDonald, East Point (Souris Board), thought that a delegation should be sent to Ottawa to show the Government how they had failed to carry out the terms of Confederation in this matter. Another boat, a more powerful one, should be put on the old route; then the other boat could be left at Summerside to ply there as long as possible.

After some further discussion Mr. Yould's resolution, as given above, was substituted for the original resolution, and adopted by the Board, Mr. Harris and Capt. Read consenting to withdraw their motion.

STOCK-BREEDING INDUSTRY.

Mr. Elderkin then introduced the subject of the Maritime Stock Breeders' Association. "Some members might wonder why such a subject is introduced in this meeting," he said. "To which I answer that the functions of the association are the same as those of the Maritime Board of Trade: to further the business interests of these provinces. The difference is merely that this is a particular line of work, and yours is general." After briefly sketching the history of the Stock Breeders' Association, and showing what it had accomplished, Mr. Elderkin continued: "Mexico and South America are large buyers of cattle and farm products, and we are on the direct route to them. There is no reason why this trade should not come to the Maritime Provinces. Then our stock-breeders would take their place among the leaders in the business in Canada. At the Buffalo Exposition we had a great many inquiries for cattle, horses and other animals, but we could give no information as to where and when to buy them. Now the association intends holding annual auction sales of pure-bred cattle. The first will be on February 5, 1904. We intend to advertise these sales in the West Indies and South America, so that buyers there will know just when and where to come to make purchases. If we can get these auction sales fairly established, and have it known in those southern countries that at a certain time and place each year the sales will be held, then the matter is settled. We don't want to have one sale and then drop out, but we intend to continue them year after year till they come to be a recognized institution. We ask the Maritime Board of Trade to endorse this idea, feeling sure that their influence will greatly tend to its success. There are at present few pure-bred animals of the kind wanted here at present, but there is no spot in Canada where live stock can be more successfully grown than here. The agricultural prosperity of the country is the basis of all commercial prosperity, and this will have some results in improving it. I therefore ask you to endorse this resolution:

"Whereas the Maritime Stock Breeders' Association are conducting an educational institution in the interests of the farmers of the Maritime Provinces, and whereas, with this object in view, they have already held two fat stock shows, and purpose holding a third from December 14 to 17, at which, through the kindness of Mr. F. W. Hodson, Dominion Live Stock Commissioner, men of national reputation, as well as some from the mother land, will give addresses on animal husbandry, using living animals for illustration, and whereas they purpose holding an auction sale of pure-bred cattle on February 5, 1904, having for its object the bringing together of buyers and sellers—to their mutual advantage; therefore, resolved, that this Maritime Board of Trade in Charlottetown convened heartily endorse the aims and objects of the said association, and commend it to the favorable consideration of the Federal Government, and ask for its generous financial support. Further, resolved, that the clerk be instructed to forward a copy of this to Hon. Sydney Fisher, Minister of Agriculture, at Ottawa, and the several Maritime Governments."

The resolution, which was seconded by Mr. DeWolfe, was unanimously adopted.

THE ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The convention then proceeded with the election of officers for the ensuing year, the results of which were as follows:

President.—Hon. Senator Wood, Sackville, N.B.

1st Vice-President. — Mr. John McLean, Souris, P.E.I.

2nd Vice-President. — Mr. J. R. Wyman Yarmouth, N.S.

Permanent Secretary-Treasurer.—Mr. C. M. Creed, Halifax.

Corresponding Secretary. — Mr. Chas. D. Stewart, Sackville, N.B.

Auditor.—Mr. M. G. DeWolfe, Kentville, N.S.

The next place of meeting was decided upon as Moncton, N.B.

THANKS TO THE PRESS.

Mr. M. G. DeWolfe moved a vote of thanks to the MacLean Publishing Company for their annual report of the proceedings. "There are no papers that we could wish to have our meetings reported in better than these," said Mr. DeWolfe. "There are four or five of them, and they not only circulate all over the Dominion from coast to coast, but go to the old country as well. The greatest possible publicity is thus given to our proceedings. With this vote I would like also to couple with it a vote of thanks to the local press, who are so ably reporting our meetings. If it were not for the press I don't know what we should do to have our influence extended beyond this board."

In seconding this Mr. Elderkin said: "We don't appreciate the local press as much as we should. They circulate all over the Maritime Provinces and reach all our people, showing them what we are doing, and in some degree moulding their opinions along the lines we are following ourselves. We owe a great debt of gratitude to the papers. They are even going beyond what we might expect them to do for us. I want to say before I sit down that in going through every part of Canada I have found MacLean's trade newspapers everywhere, in the stores and on the tables in the hotels, where they are eagerly read."

PRESIDENT APPRECIATED.

A vote of thanks was passed to the President for the efficient manner in which he had conducted the duties of his office.

The national anthem closed the convention of 1903.

Notes.

On Thursday afternoon the delegates and many prominent gentlemen of Charlottetown, with their wives and daughters, enjoyed a trip on the Government steamer "Minto," the invitations coming from the Charlottetown Board of Trade. Luncheon was served on board and a very pleasant afternoon was spent. The band of the 4th Regiment was in attendance and rendered a programme much appreciated by all.

A very pleasing feature of the visit to Charlottetown was an informal reception given by the new First Vice-President, Mr. John MacLean, to the delegates in the parlors of the Davies Hotel on Thursday evening. It lasted from about 11 o'clock p.m. to 1 a.m., and speeches were made by all the delegates on various important subjects, the remarks proving as interesting as any delivered during the meetings. Refreshments were served.

Returning home, a number of the delegates, including Messrs. DeWolfe, Dodge, Ward, Simpson and Yould, visited the large biscuit and confectionery factory of Messrs. G. J. Hamilton & Son, Pictou. They were accompanied by Mr. Storey of the Intercolonial Railway and Mr. Hilliard of the Grand Trunk. Messrs. Hamilton have found their business increasing so rapidly that they have purchased another factory at Halifax, where they intend to manufacture also. The Newfoundland trade will perhaps be supplied from there.

Before their departure from Charlottetown each delegate found a package of the famous "Brahmin" tea waiting for him at his hotel. This was the gift of Mr. Horace Hassard, President of the Board, who has made a great success of this tea.

A number of the delegates took a pleasant trip into the country on Thursday and admired the beautiful Prince Edward Island scenery.

It is expected that the meeting at Moncton next year will be a very large one.

The delegates took the opportunity of inspecting the new market being erected in Charlottetown. It is to cost about $50,000.

The Hillsborough bridge came in for a good deal of attention.

"Parva sub ingenti" is Prince Edward Island's motto. An enthusiastic delegate translated it, "Little, but Great Caesar!"

The Maritime Board of Trade can boast of some pretty forceful speakers, and a host of level-headed thinkers.

ABOUT BUSINESS MEN.

Park & Hodgins, of Sutton, Ont., have opened a branch at Belhaven.

Mr. Albert Hebert, of Hudon, Hebert & Cie., Montreal, is taking a week's holiday with his family at Riviere du Loup.

S. H. & A. S. Ewing, Montreal, are increasing their coffee roasting plant by the addition of a new roaster and a coffee granulator.

J. Jeffers, late of Brampton, has bought the store premises just erected by Mr. Mould, on Royce Ave., Toronto, and installed a complete stock.

R. J. Clare, formerly of Queen street west, Toronto, has purchased the McLellan grocery business on Sussex avenue, and is putting in a much larger stock.

Mr. Shaw T. Nishimura, representative at Montreal of the Japan Tea Growers' Association, is leaving for a trip to the Maritime Provinces, visiting St. John, Halifax and other principal centres in the interests of his association.

Mr. J. J. Speirs, western representative of Messrs. Chase & Sanborn, is visiting Montreal this week. Mr. Speirs has just returned from a trip to the Soo, Port Arthur and Fort William, and reports that trade has been exceptionally good with him this season.

C. J. Halliday, general merchant, Chesley, Ont., is rapidly getting into working order again his store, which was burned out recently. He is making some improvements in the rear part of the store and also in the show windows. These improvements will make an already very fine store more up-to-date.

Mr. C. J. Williams, who has been representing Hunt & Co. at Montreal since the late A. E. Tren went to Chicago, is, after October 1st, to devote his whole attention to the interests of Crossfield, Lampard, Clarke & Co. He is to be succeeded by Mr. Barnard, of Hamilton, formerly representative of Bernard & Co., Japan

Mr. H. Bell-Irving, of The A. B. C. Canning Co., Vancouver, was seen in reference to the salmon situation at the Coast. He confirms the report in last week's GROCER as regards the shortage in this season's pack. He states that the season's run will be the most disappointing in his recollection, that is, taking one river with another.

A visitor to Montreal this week is Mr. David Greig, representing D. McDougall & Co., Glasgow, Scotland, manufacturers of pipes. Mr. Greig's massive form and genial countenance is well known to Canadian grocery jobbers, as he has for many years crossed the seas to supply the trade with the "T. D." Mr. Greig goes west this week and will visit all the leading jobbing centres as far as Chicago.

Mr. I. C. Stewart, of The Maritime Merchant, was in Toronto on Tuesday on his way home from a holiday trip in Western Ontario. Speaking of the trade conditions in the Maritime Provinces, Mr. Stewart said they were, compared with four or five years ago, exceedingly good, although perhaps there was not so much bustle as a year ago. The apple crop, he said, was exceptionally good, and the yield of hay large. The fishermen, too, were doing fairly well.

Mr. Chas. Sutherland, manager of the Detroit branch of The "Salada" Ceylon Tea Co., was in town last week. He reports that the "Salada" business in Detroit for the first seven months of this year has increased 73 per cent. over the seven corresponding months of last year. He states that every wholesale grocer, and practically every retailer in the state of Michigan sells "Salada" tea. He is now pushing his way into the state of Minnesota, having opened up St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth.

At a recent meeting of the provisional directors of Provincial Grocers Limited the following officers were elected: Pres., W. B. Rogers; 1st vice-pres., Wm. Scott; 2nd vice-pres., John Medland; mgr., M. M. Clancy; sec.-treas., John L. Davidson.

You buy the best butter, why not the best Salt? Do you forget that it is the little things that count? A woman doesn't tell all she knows. Perhaps she has been trading at some other store just because she can't buy Windsor Salt of you. She doesn't say this to you, but there are a good many chances that she tells her friends.

Windsor Salt is pure, white, dry, crystalline—it is nothing but Salt. There is no dirt, no impurities in it. It is the highest quality there is or can be. Think it over—perhaps the woman who is trading elsewhere will trade with you if you sell Windsor Salt.

TO OUR FRIENDS.

DURING the next two weeks a large number of our readers will doubtless visit the Dominion Exposition. "The Grocer" extends a cordial invitation to all such to call and make our Toronto office their headquarters during their stay. Our office is centrally located at 10 Front street east, just around the corner from Yonge and right in the midst of the wholesale warehouses. Visitors may find it convenient to have their mail forwarded in our care and every accommodation will be afforded those having correspondence to attend to. It is always a pleasure to make or renew the personal acquaintance of our subscribers and we are looking forward to meeting a large number of them during the next two weeks.

WINDOW DRESSING COMPETITION.

ATTENTION is directed to the extension of the time set for closing our window dressing competition. It is desired that our subscribers enter heartily into the spirit of this competition and be not content with one entry. The opening Fall trade should bring to the front some bright ideas in window dressing. Send photos and brief description to "The Grocer" as according to directions elsewhere. Call the attention of your employes to this competition and see what your store can accomplish in the way of up-to-date window dressing.

CIVIC ENTERPRISE.

CANADA is experiencing a wonderful era of prosperity. Nature has been prodigal in her gifts and the agricultural classes have enjoyed a series of bountiful harvests. The trade and commerce reports overflow with evidences of our industrial progress. With an unexampled immigration record no man need be idle who is able and willing to work. The opening of the Great West, which has now fairly begun, will, so far as Canada is concerned at least, guarantee the continuance of the present good times.

The larger industrial centres are pledging their faith in the future of Canada by large expenditure on capital account. Everywhere plants are being increased and branches established. The demands of our population, growing at once in numbers and wealth, must be met.

This is indeed "a tide in the affairs of men which taken at the flood leads on to fortune." But what are our smaller towns doing to secure their share of the general prosperity?

It is a fact that a number of our smaller Canadian towns are making a name for themselves as manufacturing centres. They have their canning factories, their beet sugar factories, furniture works, knitting works, piano factories, brush factories, or cereal companies, and the proposal of a new industry is hailed with acclamations. Every assistance is given a new project; it is talked up, taken hold of, pushed along, achieves success. The citizens of such towns are full of enthusiasm and faith; they are good townsmen, admirable Canadians.

Unfortunately all our towns are not of this kind. Too many have no enterprise. The articulate voice seems vested in a class of retired farmers whose only interest is in keeping down the tax rate and the maintenance of the status quo ante. Their money invested in farm mortgages, directly or through the local loan company, they would no more think of subscribing to the stock list of a local industrial enterprise than of flying. The proposal to exempt from taxation a prospective local industry which would give employment to surplus labor always found in a small city or large town is met with a storm of protests. So the town continues to vegetate. Funds accumulate and are deposited in the local branch of a chartered bank to be devoted to financing the industrial ventures of a neighboring town that is alive to its opportunities.

Possibly the funds which should be productively employed in the town, weary of idleness, are inveigled into playing the stock markets. And indeed the stock broker finds his easiest marks in just such localities.

In either case the town is bled, while the citizens wonder at the prosperity of its rival, which, very possibly, is not nearly so favorably situated.

Success demands alertness and energy in the town as in the individual. It is time that the boards of trade of some Canadian towns called a special meeting to find out what ails them.

Now is the time, during a period of prosperity, to lay the foundations of a permanent industrial importance.

A BOUNTIFUL HARVEST.

A PERUSAL of the August crop report issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture should be very gratifying to the business man who is anticipating a large Fall trade. The high average excellence of the crops and the firm prices the farmers are getting for their produce of every sort should make money free this Autumn, and it is ready money in the pockets of the farmers in this young country of ours that sets in motion the wheels of prosperity. Nor is Ontario alone blessed with a bountiful harvest. Reports from the east are all of an encouraging nature and the latest from the west would indicate that the yield is showing better in threshing than was anticipated. A few weeks will see the western crops safely secured, when Canada may begin to prepare for Thanksgiving for the most prosperous year in her history.

DESPICABLE IMITATION.

A NUMBER of manufacturers, wholesale grocers, spice and coffee houses and kindred trades to the grocery, have lately called the attention of THE CANADIAN GROCER to the subject of substitution by dealers of their respective lines of manufacture.

The question is an important one and worthy of consideration by the trade. It is a serious matter to any concern when it has spent probably thousands of dollars, months and years of time and labor to perfect and place on the market a really intrinsic article, to learn that certain dealers are continually substituting inferior goods, and if not exactly inferior, still not what is called for by the consumer. It is regrettable that so little is thought of the wrong act on the part of the trade, and it is only when a case is brought home to the perpetrator that the injustice is acknowledged, and an argument in favor of its abolition can be made bear fruit.

A leading Canadian manufacturer only lately had occasion to notice a case of substitution of his goods by a dealer. He has made it a point for many years past to put up a line of pure goods—we'll say cream of tartar—and to guarantee against his package being used for any other grade of these goods, had it stamped for use only by the grocer for his special line. One of his travellers, in looking up his orders from the retailer, found that he had not bought either from him or direct from the mill any of these pure goods. He bought a quarter pound out of the package and had it tested and analyzed, with the result that the goods were found to be not only not pure, but indifferently compounded. He could, of course, not bring the grocer to task without risking the loss of the trade. This is not an extreme case, as we learn from inquiry among manufacturers that the custom is all too prevalent.

Fair dealing should be the ruling principle on all sides, and the grocer who acts upon that principle will, in the end, reap his reward in steady and profitable custom. Is it fair to the consumer who has used a certain line of baking powder that has given satisfactory results, to substitute another brand? Is it fair to the manufacturer who has spent his time, labor and good money to place a good article on the market, to deprive him of his reward?

It is admitted that the tastes and customs of the consuming public are continually changing, and the modern mode of living calls for "something new" all the time, but this fact should not be considered a license for deliberate substitution. The grocer, more than anyone else, is continually on the lookout for something new to tickle the palates of his customers and hold their trade. This is quite right and as it should be, but is it right to sell a pure pepper to a customer when it is known for a fact that, judging from the price of whole pepper, it is impossible (looking to a profit) to sell the ground pepper at the price charged? Does the merchant not know when the traveller offers him the goods at a price the market will not warrant, that something is wrong about the goods? If not, it is a bad commentary on his knowledge of the market; if he is aware of it, is it fair to his customer, the consumer, to sell the article for pure goods knowing it to be otherwise?

Manufacturers, too, are, we have had occasion to learn, given to imitating in design, shape, color and other characteristics the output of rivals who have at great expense secured a trade on their products to such an extent as to bring themselves within the infringement of Copyright and Patent Act. In many instances the imitation is so positively close as to deceive the ordinary consumer, and this is, to our mind, nothing less than a palpable steal and should be discouraged by the merchant wherever and whenever the attempt is made to pass the article on him. Originality is possessed to a certain extent by everyone, and it is a reflection on a manufacturer's ability when he has to copy or fall back on the ideas of a rival.

Fair competition is commendable and worthy of every encouragement, but deliberate infringement is despicable.

FRANKNESS IN BUSINESS.

THE confidence of one's customers is the most valuable asset a business man can possess. Having deservedly won that confidence, a merchant can smile at unfair competition and fake schemes for seducing his trade into alien channels.

The assurance that reliable goods may always be had for a fair price is what the best people in any community want. These are the people whose custom is most desirable, who give a firm a standing, who make business a pleasure.

The basis of this confidence is perfect frankness upon the part of the seller. It is poor policy to please a customer for the moment with the price when he is certain shortly to be dissatisfied with the quality. A few frank words of explanation would point out the advantage of taking a better quality at, in the long run, a more favorable price, and a friend would be made.

A case in point: Two salesmen representing rival houses approached a business man with a view to booking his order for an expensive piece of machinery. The business man, for his own reasons, was disposed to give the preference to one of the houses. But the representative of this house, instead of making it a point to satisfy the buyer, not alone with the price, but with the quality, thought only of quoting a figure which would shut out his rival. He got the order, but to come within the price he supplied an inferior article. There was trouble. In the long run he was compelled to supply what he should have offered in the first place. He lost the profit on the sale, and, what was of vastly more importance, the confidence of the customer.

At best it is a sorry business selling inferior goods, but when customers will have them the facts should be clearly set before them. They will return sadder, perhaps, but wiser.

People constitutionally suspicious are disarmed by frankness. In a run on the bank people only want their money because they fear they cannot get it. People are always more satisfied with a purchase when they know they can get their money back if they want it.

Be frank with your customers. Consult their interests. Advise with them. Educate them into taking you for their "guide, philosopher and friend." It will pay you—and them. Try it.

A FIRM TEA MARKET.

THE tea situation appears to be steadily and surely strengthening itself, and a reference to the latest advices from London is both instructive and interesting, and should be of great use to our readers in influencing their conduct regarding buying. The existing stock in London has been so materially reduced since the end of July as to leave barely sufficient to meet a two-months' consumption, whilst the arrivals from primal markets are upwards of 2,000,000 below the average of similar date last year. The demand at the same time maintains a steadily increasing character. A relief to the situation is found in the general belief that the diminished arrivals may to a large extent be accounted for by the fact that a quality of tea which generally found its way through the London markets to Canada and to the States has recently been exported direct from primal markets to those countries.

Whether or not this is likely to become a fixed rule is still open to question. At the same time the advance of 1 to 1½d. per lb. is fully maintained.

THE BEAN CROP.

THE bean crop in the counties of Kent and Elgin, the home of the bean in Canada, has reached an interesting stage. "The Grocer" is advised by Messrs. D. McKillop & Son, grain dealers, West Lorne, Ont., that the crop is very large, indeed the largest acreage in years, but fully three weeks late. Many beans will never be harvested unless fine, warm weather is experienced. The crop all depends on the weather now. Usually the bulk of the beans are already harvested, but it has been so wet and cold that the beans are not showing any signs of ripening. The old crop has all been shipped out. Enquiries are quite numerous and indications point to a fair export trade, which has not been experienced in the last four years.

SATURDAY MORNING CHATS.

THE GROCER called upon a number of the Toronto travellers Saturday morning and found them pretty generally satisfied with the first trip after the holidays. The opinion was unanimous that a bumper business would be met this Fall. The strikes, which have been a serious detrement to business in the cities, are practically over and a bountiful harvest promises to stimulate trade both in the country and city.

A few line interviews with representative travellers are given below :

W. Anderson—Prospects in the east are very good. Farmers are getting their crops in in good shape and money should be free.

J. W. Shouldice—Feeling is good for the Fall. If money will not be plentiful this Fall with such magnificent crops, when will it ?

J. A. Milne—Last week along the north shore was just between seasons, but next month will be strong.

W. B. Dack—A very fair trade in the Niagara district. Fruits are very plentiful, particularly plums.

Jas. B. Mayled—The holidays were a great success. Every one is found in good humor.

F. Anderson—The city trade is pulling up. Had it not been for the strikes this would have been the best year we have ever had.

Chas. Rishor—The outlook is good for a real nice trade this Fall.

J. B. Gouinlock—Unless there is a set back, the prospects north, east and west are grand.

T. L. Willis—Trade is showing improvement, a very satisfactory week.

FLORIDA ORANGE OUTLOOK.

According to advices from Florida orange sections the crop of oranges this season gives promise of being considerably larger than that of last year, says The N. Y. Journal of Commerce. John S. Arnold, of the firm of John S. Anold & Sons, who has completed a trip of the several orange sections of the state, is quoted as making the following estimate of the crop by counties :

	Boxes.
De Soto	600,000
Hillsboro	375,000
Manatee	300,000
Polk	125,000
Osceola	100,000
Lake	150,000
Lee	125,000
Orange	150,000
Marion	50,000
Volusia	50,000
Brevard	50,000
Alachua	35,000
Putnam	25,000
Dade	10,000
Pasco	15,000
Scattered	50,000
Total	2,165,000

Others who have studied the conditions claim that the estimate is entirely too high, and that it exceeds by 500,000 boxes what a fair estimate would be of the crop. In some of the countries where the groves are being reclaimed the situation is difficult to define. There are a great many new trees coming into bearing, and in some groves the crop this year will be double what it was last.

"In the lower counties," says The Times-Union, "the promise for a yield is not as good as it was early in the Spring, when the trees first bloomed. There is a great growth of leaves, and some of the trees in that part of the state have been putting on a remarkable growth at the expense of preventing the yield of fruit, which was expected early in the year."

NEW BRUNSWICK CANNERIES.

Canning operations have begun at the blueberry canning factory of The W. S. Loggie Co., Limited, on the St. Croix, says The St. John Globe; the berries for the most part coming from the eastern part of New Brunswick. The crop is very light in Washington and Charlotte counties and most of the berries canned this year by the firm will be brought from eastern New Brunswick. Henry Burbridge, of Chatham, N.B., an experienced man in the canning business, is in charge.

FAILURE OF JAPAN RICE CROP.

The Japanese Consul-General, Y. Nosse, writes the Department of Agriculture that owing to cloudbursts and floods the crop of rice in Japan this year will be much lighter than usual. It is suggested that the time is opportune to push the sale of Canadian flour.

EXHIBITION BRANCH IMPERIAL BANK.

The Imperial Bank, with a very commendable spirit of enterprise, has established a branch on the grounds of the Dominion Exhibition. The office is handsomely equipped, and, with a full staff of clerks, will be in a position to handle banking business of any description. In the matte of deposits, issuing and cashing of drafts, cheques, etc., both the public and exhibition authorities will find the branch a great convenience. We are glad to learn that it is the intention of the bank to make this a permanent institution so far as the exhibition season is concerned.

GOLDEN TIPS.

At the tea sale at the Chamber of Commerce sales room to-day, says the last number of The Times of Ceylon, a box of golden tips was offered for sale by Messrs. Somerville & Co., and was bought by Mr. W. Mitchell, of Messrs. Carson & Co., at the rate of R5.25 per lb.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

GROCERIES.

Toronto, August 27, 1903.

TRADE reports coming to hand all denote a healthy state of activity, a decided advance over previous seasons being manifest. Along the street there appears to be considerably more caution in buying than would appear warranted by state of trade, jobbers showing disposition to hold back somewhat. In canned goods trade has been good, and prices rule firm. In coffee more interest has been taken and sales have advanced accordingly. Sugar is moving slowly, with prices ruling firm, and dealers are expecting a large increase in sales at an early date. In spices, trade is uninteresting and quotations firm. Rice and tapioca have been in fair demand, with primal market denoting delay in harvesting and slightly firmer prices. Syrups and molasses have been moving a little, and prices are ruling firm. Tea reports are all denoting great firmness, with statistical position considered firmly secured. Sales are moving at firm and slightly higher rates. Foreign dried fruits are moving freely, with stocks falling very short. New season crops are, consequently, eagerly looked for, whilst reports from primal markets are denoting weakness.

CANNED GOODS.

The steadily maintained run on the goods has very materially reduced spot stocks, with the result that prices are remaining firm. In corn and tomatoes there are practically no stocks on hand. Information to hand points to extremely firm position with regard to these two lines, canners having withdrawn their quotations and accepting only limited orders. We quote :

COFFEES.

There appears to be more interest in coffee recently, and trade is pointing toward an increase. Home prices are remaining firm at previous quotations. The foreign markets are all reporting dulness, the crop movements continue heavy and offerings at New York from primal markets were at prices which failed to attract buyers. European markets report better situation. We quote :

SUGAR.

The firmness noted in our last issue has been fully maintained and we have to record a further advance in raws of 1-32 to 3-32. Purchases of Javas, referred to last week, were made at 9s. 9d., c. & f. New York, which was equal to 3 13-16, about 15,000 tons being purchased on this basis. At same time there were heavy purchases of West-Indian sugars on equivalent basis, including about 10,000 tons Cuba centrifugals at 2 3-32, c. & f. New York basis, 95 per cent. for prompt shipment from Cuba, as well as further lots of same description, and 1,000 tons Trinidad centrifugals, ex store, at 3 13-16, duty paid, for basis 96 per cent. There were also sales of Muscovado at 3 5-16, duty paid, basis 89 per cent. Since then the market has developed further firmness and there have been sales made ex warehouse New York on basis of 3 7-8, duty paid, for 96 per cent. test, thus establishing quotations at 3-32 above closing prices of last week. Europe remains unchanged at 8s. 6d. f.o.b. Hamburg, for 88 per cent. August and September shipment. Receipts at United States four ports for week ending August 19, were 53,817 tons, with meltings same as previous week—45,000 tons. Total stocks in four ports were 278,149 tons, an increase of 8,817 tons over previous week. Combined stocks of Europe and America at latest uneven dates were 1,960,649 tons, or 56,020 tons less than same period last year. The whole appearance of market is strong, and, from what we have indicated, it will be inferred that United States refineries, in spite of their present heavy holdings, which on August 19 were 207,721 tons, or about five weeks' supply on present basis of meltings, have considerable faith in the future of the market. Holders are strong in their views and disposed to ask still higher prices. New business in refined for the week has been light, but withdrawals have been fairly large, whilst prices and general conditions remain unchanged. The same applies to the Canadian situation, but, with the near adjunct of the large fruit crops, dealers look for a considerable increase in the distribution. Prices locally are firmly held, and we understand that refiners have difficulty in covering on present basis of values. We quote :

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

Business continues steady in rice, with firm prices. Primal market reports denote delay in harvesting new crops on account of unfavorable weather. Tapioca reports are interesting as showing a steadier situation and better demand. We quote :

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Trade in these lines is more interesting as pointing to increased demand, with prices continuing firm. New York reports offerings of molasses as small on account of light stocks and prices more steady. Difficulty has been experienced in obtaining centrifugal grades, the market being comparatively bare. We quote :

TEAS.

The home tea trade has been moving somewhat slowly, little interest being manifest beyond mere present requirements. The latest London market reports denote good general inquiry with prices ruling firm at about 1d. advance on same time last year. The stock of all tea in London at present time is less than at any period since June 1900. It is estimated to be only about sufficient for two months' consumption. Exports from India and Ceylon both continue on a moderate scale, the latter being considerably below last year, hence the industry is now in a sound position, and if coarse plucking can be avoided, prices may be on a more renumerative scale. The early invoices to hand are giving general satisfaction and it is expected the Autumn season will start a good market. The statistical position is considered now a fixed one for present season and prices are consequently ruling firm, with indications of greater stiffening. We quote :

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

Home trade continues very good and spot stocks are now well reduced, all denoting a ready market for new arrivals. The first shipment of Valencia raisins is reported and expected to arrive during September. Currants are opening somewhat weak, but there are better indications ahead. We quote :

GREEN FRUITS.

All kinds of fruits are coming in in very large quantities, indeed the supply is in excess of the demand. On Tuesday the late boats and trains aggravated the congestion. Bananas have become an intesesting feature, owing to the storm in the West Indies. Small bunches are almost impossible to get and large bunches have advanced considerably. Tomatoes were almost a drug on Tuesday and California fruits have been temporarily displaced by Canadian peaches, plums and pears, which are of excellent quality and ample quantity. The first Canadian grapes are offered at 2½ to 3c. per pound, in 10-lb. baskets. We quote :

GRAIN, FLOUR AND BREAKFAST FOODS.

GRAIN.—Since quoting last week Manitoba wheat has gone up and declined. No. 1. hard was above the dollar mark, but is now down to 96½c., 2½c. less than last week at this time. The fluctuations in Northern have been as great and it is now quoted 3c. below last week's price. Ontario wheat remains firm at last week's quotations. Oats are slightly firmer this week. Otherwise quotations remain unchanged. We quote :

QUEBEC MARKETS.

GROCERIES.

Montreal, August 27, 1903.

BUSINESS, on the whole, is reported fairly good by jobbers. Sugars are moving a little more freely and indications are said to point to higher prices, as raw and beet are strong. Teas are dull, no feature in Japans being noted except a demand for low grades, about 16 to 18c. obtaining business. China blacks and greens are very quiet and little doing. Ceylon greens continue scarce and are much sought after. In canned goods the report that the Canadian Canned Goods Association would not take any more orders for corn, tomatoes or beans has firmed up jobbers in their prices. Peas will most likely receive firm prices on account of the booking of an order for South Africa of 50,000 cases. Canadian sardines are higher and almost unprocurable. Green fruits are active, Canadian peaches being the principal line selling. California peaches are dropping off some owing to arrival of Canadian goods. Spices are dull. Pepper and pimento are strong, other lines also being firm. Cheese is easier, country boards having declined ½c. during the week and the large production throughout the country will tend to ease off prices more shortly. Eggs are quiet. Butter is dull, though the demand is steady. In fish little is doing. Dried fruits are steady. It is thought that owing to earlier maturing of currants the Greek Government is permitting shipments on August 24, four days earlier than usual. Rice and tapioca are quiet. Syrups are quiet. Molasses is high, particularly in Barbados, jobbers having firmed up their prices 2c. per gallon. Coffee is very quiet. The provision market is dull, hams and bacon being slightly stronger. Flour and grain are steady.

SUGAR.

Though the outside markets are reported strong, locally there is no change to report. The Cuban market is reported particularly strong. The outlook is considered promising for good business during the next two months as a fair average canning season is expected. According to contracts now outstanding on refiners' books a large quantity of sugar is due to be delivered to the trade during the next 60 days. A factor that is being discussed to some extent is the prospective competition of domestic beet sugar. The outlook is for the largest crop thus far grown in this country, reports The New York Journal of Commerce, and Commercial Bulletin. Local quotations as under :

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The situation in molasses is unchanged though from reports received from the islands another advance may be looked for. There is very little old Barbados held here and holders, owing to shortage in new season's crop, are stiffening up their prices. It is also stated that the old stock does not show well in color and body. Syrups are, if anything, in slightly better demand, owing no doubt to high price of molasses. We quote :

TEAS.

Japan teas continue firm in lower grades. It has been difficult to obtain acceptance in Japan of cable offers, for in most cases limits have had to be advanced, but with the advances of 3½ to 4 per cent. they have been enabled to execute orders via Suez. There has been little or no enquiry for teas from 19 to 23c. In China greens there is no change. Market is about the same. China blacks are quiet. Ceylon greens are salable all the time and still scarce. Ceylon blacks have been rather slow during the past week on account of the easier feeling at primary markets. Market is firm and shows no indication of easier prices for some time. Formosa Oolongs are still realizing high prices for high grade goods. There is also a little more demand for Foochow Oolongs and several parcels of sweet liquoring teas have been sold during the past week at 10 to 12c. We quote :

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

The demand for rice is only fair. The market is featureless. Reports from Japan speak favorably as to crop, but indications show continued interest from buyers of the Japanese Government for commissariat purposes.

Tapioca is dull and no change to report. We quote :

CANNED GOODS.

Business this week has shown better. The demand is good. Canned apples, 3s, are quoted stronger, 82½ to 85c being price of the Canners' Association. It is reported that advices have been received from the association that they will not take any more orders for corn, tomaties and beans, even at open prices. The weather conditions are so unpropitious that quotations must be held back. Prices on spot canned apples, 3s, have been advanced to 80 and 90c., and gallons to $2. Pears and peaches are reported as likely to rule higher this Fall though the Canners' Association has not given out prices. As regards canned peas, the fact that 50,000 cases have been booked for South Africa by the Packers' Association will have a tendency to put up the price on these goods. Canadian sardines are very high and scarce, and scarcely procurable. The price ruling here is $3.80 to $4, the inside price of $3.80 being exceptional. Gooseberries, 2s, are given as being sold out of this year's pack. We quote :

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

Early Valencia raisins are afloat and expected here about September 14. The currant market is steady in Patras. Shipments have been authorized by the Greek Government about August 24, four days earlier than customary. This is attributable to early maturity of crops. In figs and dates nothing is noticeable and sultana raisins, though easier than for some time, are little called for. Prunes are receiving some attention. We quote :

GREEN FRUITS.

Trade during the week has been very good. Very heavy receipts of Canadian fruits are reported, increasing from 4 to 6 cars per day, most of them being peaches. California fruits are coming in less freely. It is no doubt largely due to the good prices ruling in United States markets, and, of course, the larger receipts of Canadian fruits are responsible for the dropping off of Californian goods. Canadian tomatoes are arriving in good lots and prices are easing up considerably ; the demand at early part of the week left prices at 75c., but now 40 to 50c. are the ruling figures. We quote :

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, August 24, 1903.

THE wholesale grocery business of the city continues remarkably good and dealers are satisfied that the volume is quite up to the average of former years. The general conditions prevailing are good and denote that business throughout the balance of the Summer and the Autumn will be good. The retail trade at this season is also good and an exceptionally large amount of imported fruits is being handled. Work is plentiful in the city and the retail grocers find little difficulty in collecting bills. The retailers in the country, where a month or two ago money was very short, now report a more healthy condition and a more hopeful prospect generally, since it is found that the crops are turning out much better than expected.

Molasses and sugar remain firm and there is an advancing tendency in both. Small cargoes of molasses are still arriving, but there will be a great shortage in Porto Rico before the season is over. Orders for nearly all canned stocks have now been placed and the prices are found to be a little stronger than a year ago, the reason given being a shortage in the crop of peas, corn, tomatoes, etc., in the western districts where these goods are principally put up. Canned salmon is expected to be high, as the British Columbia pack is said to be showing a great shortage.

WHOLESALE GROCERS,

MONTREAL.

The White Pass Road has notified wholesalers and other shippers that the through commodity rates on bills of lading which are given during the Summer months will not be extended beyond August 31. This has had the effect of increasing materially the activity in northern shipments and every inch of cargo space is in demand on every boat sailing from here for Skagway. The effect of the notice has an important bearing in that the efforts to bring up river from St. Michaels to Dawson the enormous quantities of staples of foodstuffs sent in by that route for next Winter's stocks have been unsuccessful except in very small degree. Hundreds of tons shipped from this port and Seattle during the Summer by the big commercial companies are hung up away down the river, and the companies are re-ordering to duplicate the stocks, as it is important to get in supplies within the next six weeks. There is bound to be the biggest rush of goods on record before the freeze-up on the Yukon.

The receipt of fresh California fruit in bad order has moved local merchants to ask The Pacific Coast Steamship Co., which carries all goods from Frisco to these ports, to improve conditions of handling. Crates of delicate fruit, such as peaches, are upset and tumbled in handling, and the depreciation is very marked. Another feature which can be improved is in the storing of fruit on shipboard. It is put on deck and covered closely with a tarpaulin fastened down. Little or no cool air can circulate round the goods, and it ripens up very quickly in the heat, so that it reaches the market often in overripe condition. The shippers in California are also taking the matter up with a view to inaugurating better methods. The methods of handling in cars contrast most favorably. Special fruit cars are supplied. The goods are piled up in tiers, with plenty of space for proper circulation of air while in transit. Every tier or section is firmly fastened by cleats, so that no motion is possible and the crates are in the same position when the car is opened at destination as when the car was closed up.

Receipts of California fruits are liberal still, and features are scarce this week. Local tomatoes, ripened under glass, are received from Victoria, where the industry is made a specialty with considerable success. In fact it is all round of better quality than the California stock. Local fruit supplies are confined to apples and plums. The latter, while being marketed liberally, do not pass through the hands of the jobbers to any extent, the larger growers up country having a big market in the Northwest to which they are shipping almost exclusively. The plums being marketed here are from small growers and delivered direct to retail trade in most instances. The Okanagan district is shipping apples and plums heavily to Alberta and as far east as Winnipeg. The advance orders for apples cover the whole crop of the district, sales having been contracted months in advance. The quality of the apples from Okanagan orchards has been proven so well that northwestern dealers are willing to take futures. All through the fruit districts the crop promises well.

In dairy circles, there has been but slight alteration in conditions during the week. Eggs are, if anything, scarcer and firmer. The supply of strictly fresh local eggs is limited, and jobbing quotations as high as 35c. have been heard of. This is in very limited trading however. The bulk of the supply is from Calgary and Winnipeg. Small stocks of eastern eggs are also in hand. Prices are quotable at 21 and 22c.

Butter stocks are only fair, there being no great surplus, though the market has had sufficient for demands. Prices are firm, but about the same range as last quotations.

The local potato crop promises to be a very large one this year. Prices for the new crop, which is all that is now in the market, have gone down to 60c. in a jobbing way for the 100-lb. sack. Other vegetables are plentiful and all of local origin now.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Contributors are requested to send news only, not puffs of goods they handle, or the arrival of standard goods that everyone has in stock, or that they are offering goods at close figures, or that they have had an unusually large sale this season.

Hudon, Hebert & Cie., Montreal, report arrival into store of Hickmott's "Signature", brand green turtle soup, quart tins, also white asparagus tips. These are said to be the finest and most expensive goods packed in California.

S. J. Major, Ottawa, reports arrival into store of carload of French brandy, Dubois Frere & Cagnion, which they are offering to dealers at especially attractive prices.

A shipment of 650 half-chests Japan siftings are offered to the trade by Hudon, Hebert & Cie., Montreal, this week at interesting prices, also 500 matted caddies gunpowder tea.

A consignment of Jacques Nicot & Co.'s (Cognac, Fr.) brandies is in store with B. O. Beland. 1858 vintage. They are reported very fine and thoroughly aged.

W. H. Gillard & Co., Hamilton, report a splendid range of spices for pickling and sauce-making that would well repay a retailer to investigate.

The attention of dealers is called to Mr. B. O. Beland's ad. in this week's issue. The high-grade Scotch whiskies of Macleay, Duff & Co. advertised are controlled in Canada by Mr. Beland. Mr. Newcamps, of the firm of Macleay, Duff & Co., will in a short time pay a personal visit to the Canadian market in the interests of his house.

Dixon's Carburet of Iron stove polish, a shipment just at hand with W. H. Gillard & Co., Hamilton.

The Twentieth Century broom, a new article offered by W. H. Gillard & Co.'s travellers, shows such merit that a large sale is anticipated.

B. O. Beland, Montreal, reports arrival into stock of shipment of 120 casks Labouis' red and white clarets, 18 to 21½ dg., absolutely pure, at prices 80 to 90c. per imperial gallon, and cases $3.25 to $3.75 f.o.b. Montreal. For blending purposes this wine is claimed to be unexcelled.

CANADIAN BEET SUGAR.

MR. A. E. SHUTTLEWORTH, superintendent of The Ontario Sugar Beet Co., Limited, Berlin, Ont., writes as follows: Being quite aware of the fact that many retailers object to Canadian granulated beet sugar, believing that it will not keep fruit, I thought it might be well, and perhaps interesting, to drop you a line informing you that in Berlin many of our best housekeepers are using Canadian-made beet sugar, obtained from The Ontario Sugar Co., for preserving and canning fruits. I know from personal observation of fruits, strawberries, raspberries, etc., which have been canned and preserved here at Berlin, that these fruits will keep and are keeping perfectly. Further, I may say to you that wherever our domestic sugar is used it is giving great satisfaction.

A good many reliable parties who have used it inform me that they like it well, in fact, prefer it to the sugar which they have been using, for the reason that it is of a uniform transparent grain, free from large opaque crystals and from sugar dust, and that it goes readily into solution.

From a chemical standpoint, I suppose you are quite aware of the fact that beet sugar is the same chemical compound as cane sugar, and that the extra standard granulated made from sugar beets is, chemically speaking, the same substance as extra granulated Redpath's. The impression that extra granulated beet sugar cannot be used in fruits, etc., as the above mentioned, is entirely an erroneous one.

Every Canadian should be proud to encourage this new industry by asking for Canadian made sugar. Why should prejudice stand in the way of the general use of the home-made article when the manufacture of that article in this country is so beneficial, not only to agriculture, but also to all classes of people directly or indirectly dependent upon the success of agricultural industries.

CONSOLIDATED STORES COMPANY, LIMITED.

The Consolidated Stores Company, Limited, Toronto, has been incorporated with a share capital of $50,000, to manufacture and deal in all goods and merchandise handled by wholesale and retail grocers, and to carry on a cold storage and warehouse business. The provisional directors are Wm. Eacrett, Malcolm Ferguson, H. J. Jones, E. L. Liddicott and W. J. Smith, all of Toronto.

NEW MONTREAL CANNING COMPANY.

E. Mackay Edgar, Wm. J. Bellingham, J. Lorne Edgar and C. Franklin Hibbert, of Montreal, with C. H. Cahan, of Halifax, have been chartered as the Regal Packing Company to deal in condensed, canned, and evaporated fruits and vegetables, with headquarters in Montreal, and a capital of $20,000.

TEA REPORTS.

Wm., Jas. & Hy. Thompson's Tea Circular, dated London, August 13th, quotes figures to show that the amount of tea in bond is no larger than it was in the last normal year, 1900, viz. : Stocks in bond on 31st July, 1903, 62,987,000 lbs. ; 1902, 76,073,000 ; 1901, 71,079,000 ; 1900, 63,482,000 ; 1899, 65,291,000. This position has reflected itself in the sales which have been held this week, where there was generally a strong demand, especially accentuated in the lower grades of leaf teas, which may be quoted rather dearer. The few fine invoices as yet offered from India were keenly competed for, but few transactions have taken place for export.

Gow, Wilson & Stanton, in their Indian, Ceylon and Java Tea Report of August 14th, say : The stock of all tea in London was less at the end of July than at any time since June 1900. Telegrams show that exports from India and Ceylon both continue on a moderate scale, the latter being considerably below last year. Hence the industry is now in a sound position and if coarse plucking can be avoided prices may be on a more remunerative scale.

JAPAN TEA MARKET REPORT.

THE suspension of tea-picking on and after 1st September, as suggested by the Native Tea Conference, has more or less stiffened the home market. Consequently, purchasers to fill orders on which limits were given have been compelled to pay higher prices in spite of the expected decline for which buyers were holding off. For Canadian market it might be anticipated that teas ranging 15 to 16c. for good common or medium may be obtainable, the quality probably being a little coarser than last year's. Fine quality of all descriptions now evidently being off the market in Japan, holders here look for a good trade on such when business resumes activity, which is likely now the holiday season is over. "Tea for price" having been the demand for some years past, the flat flavored Ceylon imitation of Japan teas had been in demand; whereas with the expectation of Japans now reaching 15 to 16c., with fair quality of cup, the desire of consumers will be to obtain Japan tea, which is unsurpassed for its flavor and pungency.

The early and keen demand for high grade in the United States resulted in more attention to make such teas, and same giving great satisfaction, the natural sequence eventually would be the preference of higher standard Japans all over the country.

New fannings are very scarce, and this market takes them at 8 to 8½c., while new siftings are quoted 6c. or over, according to quality.

TRADE WITH SOUTH AFRICA.

Mr. Jardine, Canadian commercial agent in South Africa, writes from Cape Town under date of July 10, among other things, that having agreed to the Bloemfontein conference tariff, which gives a preference to Great Britain, the South African colonies are inquiring what Canada proposes to do and are quite willing to negotiate a reciprocal preference.

Mr. Jardine finds that many lines of Canadian goods are finding a market in South Africa, but urges that our firms combine to send across travellers to hunt for orders, as that is the method that has brought business to American and German firms.

Markets for Agricultural Products.

THE following bulletin just issued by the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, will be of interest to readers of THE GROCER who are engaged in our growing export trade: For a number of years the Department of Agriculture has paid particular attention to the development of our export trade in agricultural products. During the South African war the Department undertook to fill a number of very large orders from the War Office, and as a result hay, flour, oats, meats, jam, etc., to the value of over $8,000,000 was purchased in Canada for the maintenance of the army in the field. This work was carried on under the direct supervision of Prof. Robertson, Commissioner of Agriculture and Dairying, but, at the beginning of the present year, it was decided to create a distinct extension of markets division, and to place at the head of it Mr. W. W. Moore, who was in South Africa for the Department in 1900, and who has been intimately connected with all the efforts made to increase Canadian trade with that country. It need scarcely be added that Mr. Moore will always be found ready to afford inquirers any information in his power regarding the markets for Canadian agricultural products.

FRUIT PULP. — During the past few weeks considerable correspondence has reached the market division from Great Britain, with especial reference to fruit pulps, particularly raspberry. The fruit crop in the United Kingdom and on the continent is very poor, and consequently there is a considerable demand for foreign, or rather colonial, fruit pulp. The market is now bare of supplies, and as new Australian will not arrive before March next, an excellent opportunity is offered Canadian canners, if they have the goods to fill orders. Unfortunately it appears that the Canadian raspberry crop was also short this season. The canners have, however, been placed in possession of all the information at Mr. Moore's disposal, and considerable business has already resulted. All the pulp available will doubtless be disposed of at once at good prices.

CIDER APPLES.— In view of the short fruit crop there is likely to be a good demand in Britain for boiling and cider-making apples. The Department has received advices from the Canadian High Commissioner in London to the effect that one firm would take 5,000 tons of each of the above sorts. Mr. Moore is now in communication with the leading fruit shippers to ascertain whether they can fill the order. The possibility of shipping cider is also being investigated. A trade of this sort would afford facilities for selling to advantage the immense quantities of cull apples which now go to waste in this country.

FOODSTUFFS FOR SOUTH AFRICA.—Recent letters received at the Department indicate that on account of drought the grain crops in the Transvaal will be short this season, and that in consequence there is likely to be a good demand for Canadian food products in the sister colony.

The Care of Smoked Meats.

There are very few grocery stores in the country that do not handle smoked meats, and though the handling of meats in cities has been largely taken over by the specialty meat stores, there are a great many city grocers handling ham, bacon and other cured meats. Every merchant handling this class of goods has had more or less trouble at times, particularly during the warm weather, with his meats, and complaints to the packers and wholesalers are frequently made. These complaints often could be avoided if a few simple rules regarding the care of meats were followed. As the consumption during the Summer months is very great, it may not be out of place to give a few hints as to the care of smoked meats. A complaint that is made as to canvassed hams and bacon is that it turns mouldy, and often the appearance of mould is judged to be a sign of poor quality or deterioration, and the goods so reported to the jobber and returned to him as unfit for use. The presence of mould is a sure indication of the sugar curing process having been followed in preparing the goods for the market, and does not brand the goods as unfit for consumption. On receipt of the canvassed hams or bacon the canvass should be immediately removed, and if any mould appears on the meat, it is easily removed by rubbing with a damp cloth. A slight application of sweet oil or lard rubbed on the surface of the skin will give the meats a fresh appearance and prevent the formation of mould. When the meats are received they should be hung in a cool, dry place. A little care will amply repay the dealer and save making complaints to jobbers, many of whom have found it necessary to refuse entertaining claims from merchants who have not taken ordinary care in handling this class of goods.

Curing Cheese in Cold Storage.

With regard to the curing of cheese in cold storage the only comparison of quality made so far turned out decidedly in favour of the cheese ripened in cold storage, says Cold Storage. As well as being milder and cleaner in flavour, it proved to be firmer in body and suitable for a better class of trade. Messrs. Wood, Dunn & Co. reported on the quality as follows:— "On careful examination of every cheese, we are certainly of the opinion that those matured under freezing conditions are fully ½d. to 1d. per lb. better in quality than those kept under ordinary conditions." In other words, £4 16s. 8d. to £9 13s. 4d. per ton better.

French Bacon Type of Pigs.

The pig market at Coretans, France, is most curious of all, says a writer in the Breeders' Gazette. One sees the great lean, long, tall swine, immense of frame, looking ideal grassers, feeding in truth on clover and greens of all sorts. The swine are strangely docile, and are led about by grass ropes around their necks. A man will hold half a dozen big shotes; it is like dancing the Maypole dance the way they twine about a pig's legs when stirred up, but such a slow, quiet, gentlemanly lot of swine I never saw before. At this market nearly all the hogs are sows. They are mostly to go back to farms again. There is but one breed, the Normandies, I think, they are called. I think they would be an improvement in bacon type on some that we have in America; they are taller, thinner, longer and more ungainly looking.

Green Cheese Not Wanted in Britain.

The Dairy Division, Ottawa, has received advices from Mr. A. W. Grindley, agent of the Department of Agriculture, in Britain, to the effect that the reputation of Canadian cheese has been injured by the large amount that has been sent from Canada this year in a "green" or uncured condition. Dealers state that the great bulk of Canadian cheese has been too immature when shipped, and Canadians will have only themselves to blame if the British demand falls off from such causes as these. It need not be pointed out that a falling off in demand means a lower price. It is simply another case of "killing the goose that lays the golden egg."

When a salesman notes that the tendency of the cheese market is downward, he is naturally anxious to get rid of the stock he has on hand; at other times he thinks that he will save the amount of the shrinkage in curing by selling as soon as possible. The exporter, on the other hand, looking to his own immediate profit on the transaction, buys cheese that should be left in the curing-room to ripen. The salesman is disposed to blame the exporter for the present condition of things, and vice versa, but it takes two to make a bargain and it is safe to assume that both parties are to blame in this case. It is greatly to be regretted that, for the sake of a little temporary advantage both factory men and exporters should be willing to endanger a trade which has required so many yenrs to reach its present high standard, and which means so many millions of dollars to the farmers of Canada. The patrons of factories would be consulting their own interests by insisting that their cheese should be held in the curing-room until it is in the best condition to please the British consumer.

Pork Factory for Charlottetown.

Davis & Fraser, pork packers, Halifax, are opening a branch of their packing establishment at Charlottetown, where they have leased the large brick factory of Mark Wright & Co. The firm are beginning on a modest scale, but hope to enlarge it with the increase of business. For the present part of the hogs bought on P. E. I. will be packed in Halifax. The building is being refitted and the necessary machinery installed along with a cold storage plant. The number of hogs being fed on the Island is reported to be about the same as last year. If feed had not brought such high prices in the Spring the number would probably have been larger. Lean hogs will be bought at a very decided discount. The demand is for well fed hogs from 130 to 200 lbs.

THE PROVISION MARKETS.

TORONTO.

THERE have been no changes in the provision markets since last week. The demand for cured meats remains good and with the low stocks at present held values are well maintained. Lard is holding its own. No change has taken place in barreled pork since the slump reported last week as no further movement is reported in American. We quote:

MONTREAL.

CHEESE.—The cheese market is much lower. The tendency of the country boards shows prices ruling from 10 to 10½ cents. We are advised of the sale of 1,000 boxes of finest Eastern, half white and half colored at 10⅜, and a lot of 500 boxes of finest Eastern white at 10¼. The report from the country boards is of very large make, and it is expected that easier prices will rule.

EGGS.—No change from last week's prices is quoted. There is a little more enquiry for export, but at such prices that Canadian dealers cannot afford to handle. Prices ruling locally are 15 to 16 cents for prime, and 17 to 18 for selected. Quality is coming forward much better this week.

BUTTER.—There is no change of any consequence to report. The demand continues fair. The forward movement during the last two weeks has aggregated 40,000 packages, a large proportion being for English account. Locally, very finest goods 19 to 19½ is noted, and dairy 15 to 16 cents.

FOREST CITY GOSSIP.

Office of THE CANADIAN GROCER.
365 Richmond street,
London, Ont., August 26, 1903.

GROCERIES are beginning to move more freely, the travellers having resumed their regular trips. Their orders are already telling on the size of the heavy loads leaving the shipping rooms. The prospects for continuation of prompt payments are splendid. The crops in the London section and over Western Ontario are abundant and are now almost all gathered in. Corn is the only grain that can be called poor, but roots of every description will be above the average. Farmers are receiving good paying prices for everything they can raise, and they will have more money with which to pay storekeepers' bills than ever before.

Mr. Steele, of London, wholesale dealer in fruits, has returned from a trip to the Canadian peach districts of Essex county, and also the district between Hamilton and Queenston. Mr. Steele says the supply of the early varieties will be very good, but that late peaches, such as Crawfords and the Elbertas, which are the standards, will not amount to very much.

The recent hurricane at Jamaica has caused the price of bananas to go up with leaps and bounds. The damage done to banana plantations has not been exagerated, and many will have to be replanted. Higher prices are looked for yet for this popular and important article of commerce.

B. S. Murray, of London, route agent of the western division of the Candian Express Company, is looking after the interests of his company and the fruit trade of Ontario west. Many complaints of bad handling have been made by growers west of London which are being looked into. Mr. Murray proposes to have fruit cars placed at Ruthven and Kingsville and take them to Leamington where they will be attached to the express. Better service, with more care in transit, is likely to be the result of his investigations.

A considerable quantity of grain was marketed here last week, oats being the principal cereal offered. The prices paid were as follows: Wheat, 72 to 75c. per bushel; oats, 26½ to 30½c.; corn, 60 to 65c.; peas, 84 to 90c.; buckwheat, 51 to 55c.; barley, 38½ to 41¼c.; rye, 53 to 56c. per bushel.

Offerings of butter and eggs are large and trade quite active in both lines, but there is little change in prices since last week. Rolls, 18 to 19c.; crocks, 16 to to 18c.; creamery, 21 to 23c.; eggs retailed at 14 to 15c. and by the basket to storekeepers 12½ to 13c per dozen.

J. R. Minhinnick has returned from his attendance at the meeting of the Congress of Chambers of Commerce in Montreal, where he represented this city as chairman of the Board of Trade. Mr. Minhinnick considered the most important resolution passed was that favoring a British preferential tariff for Canadian produce of the soil, and also recommending a preferential policy for industrial products other than those manufactured in Britain.

The London Cold Storage and Warehousing Company are the defendants in an action brought at Toronto by The M. Doyle Fish Company to recover $630, the value of a shipment of smelts which were lost through their alleged negligence.

Window and Interior Displays

Timely Hints and Suggestions.

Limit of Competition Postponed.

THE limit of the window display competition which THE CANADIAN GROCER has opened for the benefit of its subscribers has been extended from Sept. 1st to Oct. 1st. The reason for this is that on account of the holiday season, through which the competition extended, many merchants have been prevented from entering who would like to do so. By this month's extension everyone who intends competing will be enabled to do so, and, September being a good month for business, good window displays will be a feature of every store. Next week in these columns will be given full directions as to the taking of the picture.

One thing to be remembered by all competitors is that, with each picture, a description of how the window was dressed, and of the detailed arrangement, is desired, as with the publication of each picture in these columns a description will be necessary. In many of the best windows some detail may be missed, or the idea aimed at not fully understood by the judges, and the sender of the picture can improve his chances and assist the judges by a detailed account of the plans and arrangement.

An unnecessary expense is incurred by competitors in mounting the prints on expensive mounts. These mounts will cost from five to ten cents apiece, and the picture is just as suitable for publication when pasted on a smooth piece of pasteboard. Solio prints, too, are both cheaper and better adapted for making cuts from, than the more expensive aristo or other soft finishes.

It Draws Better Custom.

ONE fact which often escapes the attention of the merchant when considering the advisability of a good window display is that the type of trade attracted by it is of a higher class than would deal in a store that makes no efforts in its windows.

The poorer trade pays less attention to neatness and visible attention to detail, but this is not the class of trade the store is most anxious for; they buy less, and a very much cheaper grade of goods, in which there is less profit, and the handling of which builds up no reputation for a merchant.

The richer class, however, appreciate well-trimmed windows and clean, tidy interiors. They never patronize the loosely run, dirty store if there is one in the town that keeps things tasty and attractive. It is this trade that not only buys larger quantities, but what it buys is of the best, and money is spent in luxuries that bring far greater profit to the merchant, and establish a name for him that will stand him in good stead with all kinds of people.

A cheap window, a carelessly arranged interior, bespeaks a cheap and badly bought stock to every customer whose trade amounts to anything. It is the merchant who pays close attention to the appearance of his store that impresses all who pass or enter with the feeling that a like attention must be paid to the stock.

The store that is content with a haphazard window and an interior where no order is kept must also be content with the trade of the class that brings but little into his pockets, and with only a small part of that. There are very few who do not appreciate a well-dressed window, and the many will always feel safe in patronizing such a store.

There are men who still entertain the idea that what was good enough for their fathers is good enough for them and for the present generation. But times have changed. It is not many years since the ox did all the work, but the farmer who trusts to the ox in these times to do his teaming and other work will surely be left behind in the race for success. So it is in commercial life. Time was when the coal oil barrel, the sugar barrel, the molasses barrel, the biscuit box, the tea box, all reposed side by side around the centre aisle, but no store dare attempt such stock keeping in this day. The present generation, influenced by the advancement of all life, social and commercial, makes demands which a merchant must cater to or go out of business.

Study Classes and Times.

THE store that appreciates the selling value of a good window display has not overcome all the difficulties in the way of making the best use of the window. Every merchant worth remarking has become alive to the importance of displays, but after that point is arrived at, there is still the natural carelessness of the average trimmer to combat; and this is a fault that crops up with the best of trimmers at times; as well as appearing in the efforts of many trimmers all the time.

The decorator often simply grasps the idea that the window needs some special arrangement of goods that will attract the eye of those on the street, but there is far more than that to be considered if a successful window is desired. First of all the season must be taken into account. There are certain lines that would raise a laugh if displayed in September, but there are many others which are peculiarly adapted to that month, and these should be carefully discovered and a note made

A Window Display Competition.

THE CANADIAN GROCER, for the encouragement of tasty window displays, has decided to open a competition for its subscribers. Prizes will be awarded for photos or drawings of window displays and accompanying descriptions of the same. The prizes will consist of:

First Prize - - -	$10
Second Prize -	$7

and $2 for every picture and description which is considered worthy of publication.

The competition, which closes on Oct. 1, will admit of photographs, pen and ink or wash drawings, with good ideas counting more than the picture itself, although, of course, all pictures in order to receive a prize, must be of sufficient distinctness and good workmanship to admit of their publication.

There is no progressive merchant but has at least one window a month that is worthy of entering this competition, and the prizes are so arranged that, even if a window does not win the $10, $7 or $5 prize, it may be awarded a $2 prize, provided only that it is of sufficient merit to publish in the columns of this paper. This award will cover the cost of the photograph and there is no reason why any merchant should not obtain it. The number of photographs or drawings submitted by each store is not limited, nor is the number of $2 prizes; a merchant may win a dozen if his pictures merit them.

Should any intending competitor not know how to take a window picture, this paper will be glad to furnish him with instructions. In general terms, it may be stated that the early morning, when the light is clear, when few people are abroad and when there is the least reflection, is the best time to photograph the display. A good photograph can also be taken at night by the aid of an electric or flash light.

Mark all manuscripts and photographs intended for this department with the words "Window Dressing Competition."

of them as soon as they are thought of. With four or five good September sellers, a display can be arranged for each week. Again, there are well-known celebrations, or events, that have happened recently that can be illustrated or referred to in the window, and such are sure to attract attention and draw words of praise for the thoughtfulness of the trimmer in taking advantage of that day or event.

There are also times when certain towns or cities have a certain class of visitors in sufficient numbers to take cognizance of. Their nationality or the cause of their visit to the town can be used to affect the style of display, and it is from these outsiders that greater profit can be made than from the regular customers. By this is meant that things that will not sell to the regular customers will disappear rapidly to the outsider if his vanity or sensibilities are touched in a way that pleases him.

Of course in the trimming of the window great attention must be paid to the class of customers desired, or the class represented in the largest numbers in the town. If the town is a factory town, with nine-tenths of the inhabitants of the poorer class, great displays of expensive goods will only deter the workingman or his wife from entering the store, although that style of goods should not be neglected in the stock and demand some attention in the window. A luxury in such a town should be surrounded with cheaper lines to show its value.

TILLSON'S OATS AT THE EXHIBITION.

The manufacturers of Ontario are taking a lively interest in the Toronto Industrial Exhibition and are going to a great deal of trouble and expense in the building and decorating of their booths. One of the prettiest exhibits in the new Main Building will undoubtedly be that of The Tillson Company, who are this week preparing an elaborate display of their pan-dried oats. The booth was designed and built by one of the best of Toronto firms and will be arranged by a professional New York decorator. Their now famous Scotchman will hold a prominent place and will be an interesting feature. The life-size figure was modelled by an Italian sculptor and dressed by Catto, which fact by itself is a guarantee of correct costume. The company intend to demonstrate the superior qualities of "Tillson's Oats" by serving it "hot, not cold—a food, not a fad," Mr. W. A. Strowger, known all over the province as the former manager of The Ireland National Food Company, will have charge of the exhibit and will no doubt extend the glad hand to many of his old business friends.

COFFEE AND SPICES

Option Coffee Prices.

SURPRISE is often expressed that there seems to be so little harmony between the option coffee market and the prices at which the ordinary merchant is able to purchase his supply, and the impression often prevails that someone is getting an immense profit, while quite the contrary is often the case. Take for instance, a quotation of five cents or less for option coffee when the larger merchant pays about ten cents for his lowest grade.

It is really surprising on what very small margins these goods are sold among the coffee men, who often turn over large invoices of coffee that show a margin of only 1 or 2 per cent., while perhaps 3 per cent. would be considered a very large profit, although less than a quarter of a cent per pound. The feature about the option market not always understood is that any kind of coffee may be delivered on an option at its corresponding trade value as listed on the exchange, and the exchange standard takes no account of roasting merit or cup quality. For instance, a man may have an option on No. 7 (low ordinary) coffee at 5 cents and he may receive on it No. 3 (fair coffee) at 2 cents per pound more, and as his expense of the exchange will be about one quarter of a cent, the coffee will cost him 7¼ cents, then he will probably receive a coffee that looks well green but makes a bad roast, and after standing shrinks, amounting to 1¼ cents in roasting. He would find it hard to get 8½ cents for the roasted coffee. Much of this coffee delivered on options is mere trading stock, and lies in warehouses for years, changing hands hundreds of times.

In view of this condition, the legitimate trader does not go to the option market, but will buy where he can get a fair selection of coffee, based on the roasting merits of the goods and the cup quality, and for such goods he pays much more than options are quoted.

Nutmegs.

Nutmegs, which are the only nuts not used for eating raw, are the kernel of the fruit of the nutmeg tree, a native of the Molucca Islands, but are cultivated elsewhere in the tropics. It is the Jamaica and the Brazilian variety, however, which we get here. Its chief characteristic is its very aromatic flavor. Its greenish kernel grated by hand, or ground by machinery, is much used in cooking, while the outside covering, called mace, forms another article of commerce familiar to grocery clerks.

New Coffee Tablet.

R. C. ANDERSON, a watchmaker of El Paso, Texas, has invented a coffee tablet, says The Spice Mill. He has been experimenting for some months, and claims that he has a perfect tablet made from the pure coffee berry. No foreign substance is used in the tablet, and the inventor says that he has accomplished something which has baffled chemists for years.

He asserts that by the use of his tablet a month's supply of Mocha and Java coffee can be carried in one's vest pocket, and the aroma and strength of the compound is never lost. He claims, also, that he removes the tannic acid of the berry, which causes nervous people much trouble and is one of the objections raised to coffee drinking.

A trial of a tablet showed that each makes two cups of fairly strong coffee, or one cup of strong coffee. The process of coffee making is simplified by dropping a tablet into a cup of hot water. A patent has been applied for, and Mr. Anderson expects to net a fortune from it. Others who put like compounds on the market also had great expectations; still, Mr. Anderson may have just hit it right.

A Good Cup of Coffee.

The secret of making palatable, non injurious coffee, says Planting Opinion, lies in the two words: quick infusion.

In the first place, have the coffee ground to the finest powder, so that its full virtue may be quickly extracted. Allow a dessert-spoonful for each person, mix it with just enough cold water to make it thick paste, and let it stand until five minutes before the time to serve. Have fresh water boiling. Pour on a cupful for each person, and two more for the persons who are likely to (but should not) wish a second cup. Put the cup over the fire and let the infusion come to a boil, settle with a dash of cold water, or a clean egg shell, and serve immediately. This is a cup of coffee and not a cup of tannin. Coffee made in this way may be taken morning, noon and night without injury, but the quantity drunk at one time should not be greater than one cupful.

Coffee that has boiled, or stood more than five minutes, should be thrown away.

The Spice Outlook

The latest number of The Spice Mill sizes up conditions as follows:

The market has been active, with the bulk of the trade in cassias, many grades of which have advanced sharply. Supplies have decreased greatly, as indicated in my last report, both here and in China and the East Indies. Case China and mat China are almost out of stock.

Peppers are strong; the advances abroad have not yet been equalled here. The shipments of the past ten weeks have been exceedingly small. The indications are that much higher prices will prevail. Changes are likely to be sudden and acute.

Cloves are very strong and higher abroad, and are liable to further advances.

Cayennes continue scarce and firm.

Nutmegs and mace exhibit no special features. Demand is again becoming visible.

Pimento is strangely dull. Stocks and demand are alike small in extent.

Gingers have fallen by the wayside; dulness and apathy are the features.

Generally speaking, pepper, cassias, cloves, cayennes, nutmegs, and mace are likely to be higher and scarcer. Pimento and gingers will drag a while.

Notes.

The value of cocoa imported by the United States during the past 12 months was $7,820,087.

Total exports from Singapore and Penang to the United States since January 1 to date of black pepper has been 2,485 tons; nutmegs, 263 tons, and tapioca, 4,265 tons.

The statistics of the fiscal year 1902-3 for the United States show large gains in the importations of tea, spices, cocoa, sugar and chicory, but a falling off in coffee of more than 150 million pounds. Notwithstanding this decline the United States still consumes over a billion pounds of coffee annually.

Canada's Great Exhibit.

REPORTS from Osaka, Japan, show that the Canadian exhibit has caused an immense impression there, and that considerable trade may be established between Canada and Japan.

The Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, in a letter to the Commissioner of Exhibitions, says :—"We have received a number of inquiries from buyers in this market and have succeeded in placing some fairly good sized orders with the different firms. Indications point to a considerable increase in the near future. The great benefit to the milling industry of Canada is daily becoming more apparent as these additional inquiries are brought to our notice."

U. S. Consul S. S. Lyon reports to his Government as follows from Kobe : "The Oregon exhibits have no state building, but are housed in the foreign samples building, alongside the Canada building, which, with its contents, is reflecting no small degree of credit upon Canada. It is said that the Dominion has expended the sum of $70,000 upon this enterprise, and its efforts to make a good show stand in marked contrast to the inactivity shown by the United States."

"One of the principal features inside the Canadian Exhibition building is the great rush by the Japanese each day at 4 p. m. to purchase biscuits and loaves of bread baked in full view inside the building. Hundreds of these people then stand with their arms over the railing and money in their hands, ready to purchase, all clamoring loudly to be waited upon. The bread is made of hop yeast and is in much greater demand than the supply. It is expected that in future Canadian flour will be in great demand, as the bread made from it is of most excellent quality. Had some one of our northwestern states been in evidence at the Osaka exhibition with their hard wheat flours the fact could have been demonstrated that our flours are just as good and can make as much bread as the Canadian flour on exhibition."

Secretary Burns writes to the Minister of Agriculture to say that the Exhibition will be closed by August 15. The intense interest shown by the Japanese shows no signs of abatement. They actually believe that Canada is the "Jerusalem the golden, with milk and honey blest" of which the missionaries talk, and if our immigration laws would permit one-half the population would move to Canada. While Japan is a large market for flour at the present time, Mr. Burns is of the opinion that it will greatly diminish in the matter of flour imports and become a market for wheat. Several inquiries for prices have been sent to wheat exporters at Winnipeg.

Millers and Advertising.

THE millers of the country, says The Inland Grocer, have awakened to the powerful influence which advertising has in selling goods. They have been looking enviously upon the success of the prepared cereal food, but heretofore have contented themselves with making sarcastic and bitter remarks about the breakfast food manufacturers. At the recent national convention of millers at Detroit the following resolutions were adopted.

Resolved, that the executive officers of the Millers' National Federation is requested and empowered to employ Professor H. M Snyder to immediately prepare for the federation an article to be issued under its auspices, which shall set forth, in such manner as to be an object lesson to the world, the true value of white flour, refuting the absolutely false statements and charges made in regard to patent flour and giving in a condensed, but thoroughly comprehensive, form the results of investigations, showing the comparative cost of flour and the various cereals and breakfast foods and their nutritive value.

Resolved, that the Millers' National Federation recommend and urge that millers everywhere throughout the United States make use of this article by putting a copy of the same in every package of flour, securing its publication in the local papers, and, if possible, having it taught in the public schools, and otherwise making use of it as largely as possible in an earnest endeavor to demonstrate the truth in regard to white flour as thoroughly and exhaustively as its merits warrant and present conditions demand.

This is good as far as it goes, but we do not imagine that publishers will tumble over themselves to give very wide publicity to this "eye opener" which the millers have authorized their expert to prepare.

In other words, the millers are only about half awake. They are awake enough to know that the cereal people have beaten them to a standstill, but their peepers are not open quite wide enough for them to see that a more vigorous advertising campaign will be necessary than a few circulars requesting all newspapers to publish their refutation free.

Milling in Russia.

IN out-of-the-way parts of the country, in the west and south-west, the peasants still grind their corn with a rude sort of handmill fitted up in their cottages. The corn is not cleaned beforehand and the flour is coarse and grey in color. Large land proprietors as a rule have a flour mill worked by horses, which grinds all the flour required on the estate, and frequently satisfies all the requirements of the neighboring peasantry. Windmills are numerous, and where millet is consumed the groats are, as a rule, produced by this type of mill. Flour mills are also to be found in all parts. Steam mills are now very numerous, many of them, especially in the region of the Upper Volga, being equipped with the most modern machinery. According to the official statistics there were in Russia in the year 1899 eighteen flour mills milling more than 1,500 centals in the 24 hours, 69 producing from 1,000 to 1,500 centals, 320 with an output ranging from 640 to 1,000 centals, 1,126 producing from 240 to 400 centals, while the total number of mills in the empire with an output exceeding 30 centals per day was 23,099. Smaller mills are not included in the statistics. Many of the largest installations have been erected by the milling engineers of Switzerland, Austria, Germany and England. The plansifter is being extensively adopted.

The present prosperity and importance of the milling industry is not attributed by the natives to the introduction of the roller mill, but rather to the fostering care of his excellency S. J. White, Minister of Finance. This enlightened statesman instituted a separate department to attend to the needs of the Russian corn trade. The programme was to study and adopt such measures as would contribute to the development of the commerce in cereals and flour. Corn exchanges, arbitration boards and institutes for the technical training of milling operatives have been founded. Trade usages have been codified and rendered uniform. Depots have been erected, and special trade journals have been called into existence. Current quotations for grain, freight rates, etc., are regularly published, together with official reports as to the state of the markets at home and abroad. At Moscow a millers' school has been founded, which is a great success, and the scholars readily obtain employment. In the army their time of service is spent n the Government flour mills. In order to encourage exportation of milling products exceptionally favorable rates of freight are charged by the state railway for flour, semolina and bran.

It is estimated that the 129,000,000 inhabitants of this vast Russian empire consume annualy 320,000,000 centals of grain. Except in the south and the most easterly parts of Russia, where wheat is principally consumed, rye bread is the staff of life. In Bessarabia maize constitutes the chief article of food. Buckwheat, millet, oats and barley are also consumed. The groats—especially prepared from the first two—are much liked by the people, who eat them in the form of porridge.—The Miller, London.

U. S. Crop Conditions.

IN spite of the fact that the monthly crop report of the Department of Agriculture for August shows a general decline in conditions, the report indicates that there will be large harvests of both Spring wheat and corn. The Winter wheat is all in, and the Government estimate of that crop is 410,000,000 bushels, as compared with a harvest of 411,788,666 bushels last year.

The condition of Spring wheat declined from 82.5 per cent. on July 1 to 77.1 on August 1. Basing his computations upon this average, and the acreage, the statistician of the New York Produce Exchange estimates that the yield will be 239,872,000 bushels, as compared with 258,274,342 bushels last year. Although a large loss is indicated, it is interesting to note that in 1902, 1901, 1899 and 1898 were the harvests of Spring wheat greater than the prospective harvest of this year. A production of 239,872,000 bushels of Spring wheat, with the 410,000,000 bushels of Winter, will make the total wheat output this season 649,872,000 bushels, as compared with 670,063,008 bushels last year. It is thus seen that the farmers will have very little cause for complaint if the total wheat crop turns out as is now expected.—Buffalo Express.

Hurts Canadian Trade.

J. Edgar Tripp, commercial agent at Trinidad, complains to the Department at Ottawa that the growing trade in Canadian flour has received somewhat of a check owing to the receipt of a few old and inferior lots. Incalculable harm, he points out, must result from this frequent failure to maintain quality. He also complains that unreasonable delay is shown in the shipments of grain and flour from Canada.

The Oat Crop.

The harvest of the oat crop has been in evidence for the past three weeks. The yield will be very large and the quality of the grain good. As in the case of Fall wheat and barley, some individual yields will be immense.

The first wheat of the 1903 Manitoba harvest arrived in Winnipeg from Winkler, Southern Manitoba, and was consigned to The Lake of the Woods Milling Co.

The Wm. McCann Milling Co., Toronto, report a very brisk enquiry for cereals of every description, their "Peerless" brand of bulk goods being in specially good demand this season.

The Department of Agriculture issued a circular letter to the farmers of the North-West a few days ago, advising them to send delegates to Winnipeg to secure men from the ranks of the harvest-excursionists.

The new colors on the Tillson Oat cartons are very bright, and add greatly to the appearance of the package. Although there is no change in the design, the looks of our old Scotch friend have been very much improved.

Over 6,000 men went to the Northwest on the three-days' harvester excursions of l ast week. The ingenuity of C. P. R. and G. T. R. officials was taxed to its utmost capacity to provide accommodation for the excursionists.

It was the intention of The "Force" Food Co. to make an exhibit and distribution of 100,000 sample packages of their products at the Dominion Exhibition, but press of orders will prevent their doing this, and the distribution will have to be made in another shape.

The death is announced of Wm. Forrest, flour merchant of Dundas, Ont., which occured last week. He bore an excellent reputation as a business man and was a prominent citizen of the town, being at the time of his death a member of the Town Council and of the Board of Education.

Tobacco at the World's Fair.

By W. C. McCarty.

TOBACCO, an ocean of it, bearing a ship constructed wholly of the cheering weed, perched high on a massive globe, also built of tobacco, on the top of an ornate pagoda formed of tobacco, is intended to be the crowning feature of the universal tobacco exhibit at St. Louis, which will occupy a space 300 feet long and 52 feet wide.

When one approaches the special exhibit of tobacco the great central pagoda, octagonal in form, with its summit 52 feet in air, reaching almost to the roof of the great Agricultural Palace, will command one's attention and force admiration. The pagoda will be 40 feet across. Built of wood, it is to be entirely covered with tobacco. Columns and walls of tobacco will rise 15 feet to the cornice line, leaving four main entrances gracefully arched. This will be surmounted by a cornice made of glass six feet wide, entirely enclosing the pagoda, on which are to be photographed actual scenes from the world's most famous tobacco fields. Behind this glass cornice will be placed electric lamps, the light of which brings the photographs into plain view.

Above the cornice will be a flat roof, and on the roof will stand heroic figures of Indians, the first users of tobacco. Tobacco plants will also be growing on the top. From the centre of the roof will rise a huge globe, 75 feet in circumference. The globe will be entirely covered with tobacco. The land is to be shown by the darker colored tobacco, while the waters will be represented by the bright types. The great river systems of the world are shown by threads of golden leaf running through the dark brown.

Attached to the top of the globe, and sailing in a golden sea of leaf tobacco will be a graceful ship, with its hull of dark brown tobacco nestling in its yellow bed, and the sails and ropes of other shades. This ship represents the return to England of Sir Walter Raleigh with the first cargo of tobacco from the new world.

Surrounding the pagoda are four large exhibit spaces. In one of these all the machinery used in the manufacture of plug tobacco is to be shown. Some of the machinery will be in operation, and the finished product is to be made in full view of the visitor. Diagonally across the pagoda space is to be another machinery exhibit, and here will be manufactured the granular and plug-cut smoking tobaccos, fine cuts and snuffs. Two spaces are given over to the manufacture of cigarettes, both by hand and machinery.

Four large plots are given over to the actual cultivation of tobacco. Soil adapted to the various tobaccos has been spread and real fields of real tobacco will be seen growing. In one section is to be shown the "burley" types. Another plot will form a field for the growing of the bright types of tobaccos. Another plot will grow nothing but Sumatra tobacco. The final plot is to be given over to Havana tobacco. The young plants will be transplanted from Cuba and will be handled so that they will retain all of their native characteristics.

In a central space created by these four growing fields of tobacco will be erected a curing barn. This barn, like all the other structures within the universal tobacco exhibit will be constructed entirely of tobacco. Fires will burn in them and he heat in all parts of the barn will be perfectly regulated.

In this curing barn the tobacco leaves fashioned into "hands" will be suspended on sticks and placed in the section where the temperature is regulated for the proper curing.

In the next section to be entered the main thing sought is to show how the product is handled in warehouses. A large warehouse will be built; on the floors are to be shown hogsheads of tobacco and great piles of the leaf spread out in tempting array. On these floors the sales will be made, the auctioneer and buyers going from one pile to another and inspecting the various grades. So also will be shown the most approved apparatus for quickly handling the raw material.

At either end of the warehouse will be constructed two large seed beds, showing how the plants must be started. New ground is best for this—ground that has never been broken. In this rich soil thus prepared the seeds are sown and the young plants carefully tended. They are placed in cold frames and covered with canvas. When all danger from frost is past, and the young plants are thrifty and have attained the size of young cabbages ready for the transplanting, they are taken up and set out in the open field. Transplanting is also absolutely essential to obtain the best results in the cultivation of tobacco.

After the warehouses and the seeding beds are observed, the visitor may enter the pagoda. In the centre will be built a pyramid with an octagonal base. This is to be composed entirely of the various outputs of the tobacco factory, arranged in an artistic manner. Inside the walls of the pagoda, in glass cases will be arranged further exhibits of the finished product.

The final section of the great exhibit space is to be occupied by the cigarmakers. On the right the Havana cigarmakers will hold forth. In order to make the exhibit realistic the Cubans will wear their native costumes. But few of their number will be able to speak the English language. However, the exhibit will be in charge of an American, and the attendants who speak English fluently will explain the exhibit to visitors, and one may watch the Havana cigarmakers manufacture their famous cigars, may see them placed in their original packages, and on the payment of the stipulated price may carry away with him the quantity he desires.

The Golden Age of Tobacco.

Elizabeth's reign has been called "the golden age of tobacco." The affluent smoker had his silver pipe and tongs, priming irons, and other articles which the smoker of to-day would regard with amazement and amusement. We are told that amidst clouds of tobacco smoke the plays of Shakspeare, Jonson, Dekker, Marlowe and Beaumont and Fletcher were produced. In the Globe, Shakspeare's own theatre, smoking was freely indulged in, yet, strange to relate, the works of this dramatist do not contain any references to the subject. The gilded youths of the period smoked in the theatre. It is recorded that stools were placed for them on the stage, and that they smoked incessantly during the whole of the performance.

Respecting our greatest dramatist's silence on the theme, the circumstance is accounted for by one of the critics, thus: "Shakspeare being the favorite playwright of James I., whose hatred of smoking is well known, it is not surprising in the days of that monarch," but that the companion of Raleigh and Bacon at the Mermaid should have nothing to say upon the subject is an enigma which some future Shakspearian scholar may perhaps unravel.

Smoking Contests.

The Germans like smoking contests, and they probably hold the records for these contests, even if they are profitless when won.

Under the heading of "Eccentric Records" The Figaro gives the following account of a smoking competition in Germany: Like others, smokers have their classic performances in official competitions, and the cigar smokers' world's championship has been smoked for at Berlin. The victor was the one who, in a period of two hours, without eating or drinking, smoked the largest number of Havanas. The cigars were of the same length and thickness for all the competitors. Twenty-seven devotees of la nicotine took part in this tournament. Herr Ruthal, a Silesian, was the victor, he having consumed 11 cigars in the two hours. The second and third were a long way behind, with but seven and six Havanas respectively to their credit. While on the subject of smoking competitions, mention may be made of the record for slowness of smoking, set up at Gand in March, 1900. In a competition Meinherr Van Ecke took two hours and seven minutes to smoke his pipe, without having had to relight it. But Dutchmen's pipes, like their breeches, are pretty capacious.

Big Shipment of Tobacco for Inspection.

About 10,000 hogsheads of tobacco from North Carolina and Virginia are now being shipped to Richmond, Va., for inspection by representatives of the Austrian and Italian Governments. Large quantities of American tobacco are bought each year by these governments, which hold a monopoly of the tobacco trade in their respective domains. — Cigar and Tobacco World.

Tobacco Notes.

I. L. Pexito, for some years president of the Cigarmakers' Union, Winnipeg, has opened a new cigar factory in that city.

W. T. Rutherford, of The Rutherford Cigar Co., Winnipeg, was a quest at the Bellevue, Portage la Prairie, last week.

Some discussion has been made in England about lowering the duty on tobacco to 25 or 37½c., instead of 75c., as at present, but it is not at all likely to be done.

Tobacco has been grown very successfully under cheesecloth in the state of Connecticut, and an effort is now being made to raise it at the Experimental Farm at Ottawa.

A tobacco storage warehouse, to hold 25,000 hogsheads, is being built at Bristol, Eng. It looks as if that point was looming up as the leading port for tobacco in England.

The tobacco factory of Pitts, Wigle & Co., Kingsville, is now employing 50 women and girls. The public offices are being built adjoining the sumptuous private office of Mr. Darius Wigle, and when the building is completed the factory will be fully equal to anything of its kind in Canada.

BROCKVILLE TRAVELLERS ORGANIZE.

A MEETING of the Brockville commercial travellers was held a week ago Saturday night for the purpose of forming a local association to be known as The Associated Travellers of the Electorial District of Brockville.

A representative gathering was present, considering the fact that many were away on their holidays.

The association starts off with a membership of some 34 members, and is composed of active members who are actively engaged on the road selling goods and associate members who at one time could have qualified for active members but who are either retired or engaged in business for themselves and still live in Brockville.

The organization bids fair to become an important one in many ways, not only to the local travellers themselves but also to the commercial travellers in general.

Its objects are: 1st, To assist in the promotion and protection of the interests of commercial travellers in general and of the members of this organization in particular. 2nd, To cultivate a closer relationship between travellers who are already living in Brockville with a view of improving their social and material welfare; also to draw the attention of non-resident travellers to the very many advantages such as location, facilities of transportation, inexpensive living, etc., the beautiful town of Brockville offers as a place of residence.

The election of officers took place for the current year and resulted as follows:

President, J. N. Young; vice-president, J. L. Upham; sec.-treas., F. E. Fairbairn; directors, J. N. Mann, G. R. Burney, M. Moore, W. Canning, J. Carley, E. J. Peters, G. Pulfer.

A committee was appointed to draw up a constitution for submission to the next meeting which will be at the call of the president.

DEPARTMENT OF ADVERTISING SUGGESTION AND CRITICISM

Edited by

W. Arthur Lydiatt,

TORONTO.

NOTE—Herein are discussed the principles and practice of advertising. Subscribers are invited to send Mr. Lydiatt specimens of their newspaper and other advertising, for the purpose of review in this department. Address care of Department of Advertising, THE CANADIAN GROCER.

Regarding Advertising Schools.

I HAVE had several inquiries recently from readers of this department asking my opinion as to how they could obtain the best course of instruction in advertising.

I have answered each one personally, but for the information of other readers who may think of taking some instruction in the preparation of advertising matter—a desire which is doubtless awakened by the extended and most promising advertisements of numerous advertising schools — I want to say that I have been thinking of forming a class among CANADIAN GROCER readers to take up the study of advertising methods and practices with a view to better fitting each member to advertise intelligently and profitably.

The prospectuses of the advertising schools—some of them at least—are very inviting, and the persistent way in which they follow each inquirer up, making one offer after another in a desperate effort to "land" each of their possibles, has a tendency to dazzle one, with their rosy promises and bundles of "proofs."

There are a great many retailers who feel their inability to prepare effective advertising copy, and a great many more are continually on the hunt for some new schemes which they can use in an endeavor to promote trade.

It is for the benefit of such CANADIAN GROCER readers as have a desire to learn how to prepare good advertising copy for themselves and who are anxious to "get next" to all the schemes and methods which are practicable and profitable in extending business, that I propose forming this class.

The number of members will be limited to a dozen, so that I can give each the individual attention which is absolutely necessary.

The course of instruction will not be a cut-and-dried lot of lessons, but will rather be in the nature of personal letters between myself and each member how to best advertise his particular store, than to teach the theories of advertising as applied to other businesses.

The practical side of the instruction is demonstrated in the fact that I will virtually prepare all the advertising copy for each member, though, in this way, members of the class will be asked to prepare copy for what they want to advertise next week, for instance. I will re-write this and then explain to each member the different points which are brought out in that particular ad. In many cases I will prepare copy for the members of the class to carry out some special plan of campaign, such, for instance, as special Christmas advertising, etc.

I am not going to run an advertising school in any sense of the word. It has occurred to me that the formation of such a class to study advertising methods as applied directly to grocery stores—and to each individual member's grocery store—would be appreciated by a number of my readers, and we will study together the best ways to get business for the members of the class.

The instruction will be very comprehensive, and yet will not take up a great deal of time, probably no more than is now spent in preparing copy for your ads. It will cover a period of six or eight months, and I calculate that at the end of that time each member of my class will be as good a retail advertiser as is to be found in the country.

The cost to each member will not be much. I will be glad to hear from any CANADIAN GROCER readers who think they might be interested in joining such a class, and it might be advisable to communicate with me at once, for, as previously stated, the size of the class is limited, and, of course, first come will have first call.

THIS WEEK'S REVIEW.

Bradley & Son, of St. Catharines, have sent me a few more of their ads. accompanied by the following letter:

St. Catharines, August 8th, 1903.

W. ARTHUR LYDIATT,
Toronto, Ont.

Dear Sir.—The accompanying advertisements appeared in our daily paper here on Friday. We advertise every day and change copy daily.

What do you think of these specimens? Are they an improvement on those previously submitted?

You asked in regard to our advertising, if it paid. Of course it does.

In four and a half years this firm has worked from the bottom to almost the top of the list of grocers in St. Catharines.

We read your Department of Advertising in THE CANADIAN GROCER carefully, also Printers' Ink, Philadelphia Record, Advertising World and Impressions. Also any newspaper that has advertisements in it.

Yours truly,
BRADLEY & SON.

The ads. which are before me are certainly an improvement over those previously submitted. In fact, they are about the best that have come to my notice from GROCER readers.

The substitution of "Bradley's" for the expression "this store" which was used quite frequently in the ads. previously submitted, makes a marked improvement. The difference will be noticed by comparing the extracts which are reproduced herewith, with any of those published in this department a few weeks ago, from "Bradley's."

I can offer one good suggestion this time. It is that the address be placed directly underneath the name at the bottom of the ad. in a type about half as big as the name, the telephone number following within the border just a little lower than it is now.

Some of the short introductions and "talks" included in the ads. are so good that I reprint the matter for the benefit of other readers.

A Short Grocery List for To-morrow.

Each item represents an important saving.

Try the Bradley Store with your order to-morrow.

We deliver your order promptly to any part of the city.

Food Stuffs.

These special Saturday grocery sales are characteristic of the Bradley store. Some term it price-cutting, Bradley's look upon it as up-to-date retailing.

The benefits will be mutual if you bring your order to this store to-morrow.

Read our special Saturday offerings:

P. S.—Bradley's store keeps at your elbow all year, whether you reside in Merritton or Thorold. No matter what is needed, we serve you every Tuesday and Friday.

We've doubled our wagon delivery service—and that makes it very prompt.

Just as handy as the store around the corner—and, as you know, sells better goods at fair prices.

Leave your order to-morrow for Tuesday's delivery.

I don't like the expression, "Profit is lost sight of in our endeavor to save money for our patrons" found in one ad. You're not in business "to save money for patrons" and they know it.

I am waiting to hear from some other readers who would like some suggestions as to how their ads. might be improved.

THE SUCCULENT BLUEBERRY.

THE rise of the huckleberry to dignity and position in the world is one of the features of the times. Time was when this luscious berry was localized, circumscribed in its orbit, and sternly excluded from the fruit exchange and the society of berries of established position. But that is now all passed. Modest worth and the canning factory have at last gained the world's attention for the juicy little fruit which, discarding the frivolous appellation of "huckle," blossoms forth as the "blueberry" of the fruit market.

The marshes of western Ontario used to yield prolific crops of huckleberries, but these have now been replaced by waving wheat fields and the huckleberry is no longer to be found. Muskoka, and indeed all of northern Ontario, produces the huckleberry in abundance, but perhaps the Miramichi district of New Brunswick is the most famous huckleberry or rather blueberry district in Canada, over 450,000 tins being the annual output of the canneries in that district.

The adjoining state of Maine which divides with Michigan the blueberry honors of the United States, inspires The Boston Herald to an enthusiastic appreciation. Here, says The Herald, speaking of the prohibition state, the succulent berries are at their best, covering vast plains in a veritable blaze of azure in their season. Twelve townships, situated in Washington county, in the extreme easterly portion of the Pine Tree state, covering an area of 1,296 square miles, are literally buried each year beneath the crop of indigenous berries. On this vast extent of territory is annually carried on the most extensive blueberry canning industry in the wide world.

The tract is controlled by several men, who have built canneries at Cherryfield and Columbia Falls. The remoteness of the territory makes the marketing of the berries in a fresh state impossible, and as the immense crop is gathered, they are hauled to the factories, and put up in tins to furnish berry pies and tasty sauce for the country during the days when blueberries are no more. The output of these factories encircles the globe.

In the height of the season 1,000 men, women and children are engaged in harvesting a crop of between 50,000 and 60,000 bushels each year, and over 100 teams are employed hauling the berries from their native heath to the canneries. The pristine method of gathering the berries by hand is a thing of the past in the blueberry plains of Maine. In its place has come the steel blueberry rake, a simple yet effective device, by the use of which in skilful hands fifteen or more bushels of berries may be gathered in a single day.

EXODUS TO THE PLAINS.

About the first week in August is the time for the exodus of the pickers to the plains. For days previous the farmers are busy with the last touches of farm work. The women folk, with sleeves rolled up, are working early and late, and pantry shelves are soon piled high with good things to eat during the pilgrimage. The memorable day dawns and the door-yards of the many farmhouses present a scene of activity. Buckboards and hay-racks are loaded with bedding, tents, cook stoves, berry boxes, the family pets—such as cats, etc.—toys for the children, a number of cows are tied to the rear of the wagons, and all is ready. The unique procession starts on its way over the old, dusty turnpike that leads far up on to the plains.

On reaching a high elevation a scene of magnificent splendor opens to view. The plains are dotted here and there with tents and cabins, groves of Norway pines, deep ravines, groups of slender gray birches, a low range of distant mountains lit up with the clear sky of early morn, all blend in harmony of color composing a picture of rare beauty.

On a barren spot some five miles from Columbia is a shanty stocked with canned goods, candy and tobacco, and an interesting character stands behind a rudely constructed counter waiting for customers.

PICKING WITH A RAKE.

Each picker starts off with his rake and a 10-quart tin pail, and when this is filled it is carried to the winnowing machine.

The winnowing machine is constructed on a plan similar to that of the wind machine used in the theatres. As the berries pass through this machine the wind blows out the small green berries, leaves and all particles that the rake takes up with the ripe berries. The old hand method of winnowing is still used to a very large extent, and it is a common sight to see the pickers standing on an elevation, where there is a good breeze, holding aloft the 10-quart pail, pouring the berries into their boxes on the ground, to be winnowed in their fall. As the boxes are filled they are headed up, and the day's work is piled together and ready for the buckboard, which makes the rounds every day.

The pickers have no regular hours of work, but usually work 10 hours a day. They are paid 2c. a quart. Some families make as high as $200 for the season of five weeks. At sundown the pickers are seen coming from all directions, and the cabin village, that has been deserted all day, is full of life. Fires are kindled in the old cook stoves, and a wholesome meal prepared by the women. Then come the pipes and boastful stories of the day's work.

It is the ambition among the pickers for one to outdo the other, and tabs are kept on the work, so at the close of the season it is soon learned among that small army of pickers who has the distinction of picking the largest number of bushels in one day.

While the berries are indigenous and grow in almost prodigal abundance, their growth must be stimulated from time to time by burning. A small portion of the plains is burned over annually and by nature's process of sowing and reproduction the burned district after two years is in its prime once more.

PUTTING UP THE BERRIES.

The process of putting berries up in cans is extremely simple. The berries are poured into a hopper which connects directly with a steamer in which the berries are cooked. The juice of the berries is liquid enough and it takes perhaps 15 minutes for this to come to a boil. During the cooking process, the berries are forced through a long boiler and at the other end they come out steaming hot to be sealed in the tins.

Practically the entire populace in the vicinity of the canneries shares in the harvesting of the berries. The season is short, but the pay is good, and the berries ripen at a season when there is little or nothing to do on the farms.

INQUIRIES ABOUT CANADIAN TRADE.

The following were among the inquiries relating to Canadian trade received at the Canadian Government Office in London during the week ending 7th August, 1903:

1. A London firm ask to be referred to large importers in Canada of rags for paper making.

2. A business man in London, offering good references, is willing to undertake the representation of Canadian houses requiring such services.

3. The names of parties in Canada able to ship ore for German steel works are asked for.

4. A Swiss importer wishes to get into communication with Canadian exporters of food products at the different ports of shipment.

5. A correspondent in Malta has asked that he may be placed in touch with Canadian cattle shippers.

6. A firm of merchants and agents at Calcutta being desirous of interesting themselves in Canadian trade, are anxious to correspond with parties in the Dominion with a view to business.

Interested parties may obtain the addresses of the above inquirers by communicating with the editor of THE CANADIAN GROCER.

They Cost Something, Of Course.

But enough Allison Coupon Books to last a year won't cost as much as the amount you will lose by thecarelessness of your clerks in forgetting to "charge up" numerous small purchases; and disputed pass-book entries, where you have to allow your customer's kick, or lose him.

IF A MAN WANTS CREDIT

for $10, give him a $10 Allison Coupon Book, charge him with $10, and there you are. No trouble at all. If he buys a plug of tobacco for ten cents, just tear off a ten-cent coupon—that's all. MERCHANTS

Why do you not give 13 eggs for a dozen? Simply because you can conveniently count out 12 eggs which are the standard dozen. Why do you give 17 ounces or more for 1 lb? Simply because on the scales you are using you have to guess and are never sure whether you have just 16 ounces or not. The Toledo Scale Counts the ounces and shows them to both buyer and seller, just as plainly as you count the eggs, so you may give 1 lb. 1 oz. for a pound if you wish, but there is no necessity for your so doing if you use a Toledo Scale, as there is absolutely no such thing as down or overweight on a Toledo Scale.

Subjects Being Discussed at Ottawa

Written for The Canadian Grocer by a Member of Parliament

IF members of Parliament have to be content with a little less than nectar and ambrosia for drink and food, they at least enjoy a great variety of intellectual fodder. The bill of fare of the week just ended has surely been varied enough to satisfy the most exacting. For a heavy dish the Transcontinental Railway has continued to be served up with great regularity, but, judging from the much slimmer attendance in the House, the political palate has become somewhat dulled to it. Then there has been the revival of the question of provincial rights in the Railway Committee in connection with the Toronto and Hamilton Electric Road, but the greatest change from the piece de resistance, of which we first spoke, was provided by the order paper in connection with a question placed thereon by an honorable member whose soul thirsts for information as to the food provided for the officers of the Dominion Government steamer Quadra, and the amount charged them therefor. The fourth question of the series propounded is this: "Is the following the bill of fare for the officers' mess on the Quadra?" Then follows a whole page of recital of toothsome dainties, ranging from pork and beans to plum pudding, given with great detail, for every day in the week, and for each of the three meals of the day, and question six is: "Has the Government taken steps to ascertain whether the meals can be furnished at 11c.?" We wonder which one of the members of the Government should charge himself with this task. Had the question been as to the results upon the bodies of the officers who partake of these seasoned dishes, the duty would very properly have been upon the Minister of the Interior. As the question is in part one of expense, we fancy that Mr. Fielding should drop the financial aspect of the G.T.P. contract for the present and devote his attention to this important matter. Since, however, good food well served conduces very much to the dignity of any great political function—as witness the Lord Mayor's banquet, the dinner to Mr. Gamey in Manitoulin, and the lunch to Mr. Stratton in Peterborough—it may be argued that the Secretary of State should take a strong hand in the subject matter of this case. Now, the amount eaten by each officer will have much to do with the ability to furnish his rations at 11c., and, so, the Minister of Inland Revenue will certainly have to invoke the aid of his weights and measures department, while the Minister of Marine and Fisheries cannot escape the duty of furnishing an expert opinion as to the primary cost of "salt cod, fish patties, salt herring, and fresh fish," all of which appear upon the bill of fare. In a word, we may say that nothing likely to involve so many members of the Cabinet has for a long time appeared in the political arena at Ottawa, and there is a chance of recovering that lost prestige in the interest of the country which seemed so hopelessly to have passed to the Ontario House during the session that has just closed there.

It is an undoubted fact that the debate on the new transcontinental line has been an extremely good one from the standpoint of the quality of the speeches made. Each member who took the floor realized that he was going on record in connection with a matter which marks another epoch in Canadian affairs, and careful preparation, with the good fruit it usually bears, was the result. In spite of the good average sustained, however, it was only natural that interest should flag. Each speaker no doubt produced some original idea or other, but the chief features were early pointed out by the leaders, and those who followed were doomed to repetition or the promulgation of minor points. This being the case, it is no wonder that interest veered from affairs at the political capital to the doings of the congress of the chambers of commerce in the commercial metropolis, and, while these were, it is true, concluded last week, there has been more talk and discussion of the events which happened there during the week just ended than when they were actually in progress. The reason is not far to seek:—Digestion has been going on.

We shall not attempt to discuss the various trade resolutions up for consideration in Montreal. The daily papers have kept us excellently supplied, both in news and editorial comment, with regard to them, but a few lines as to the impression created by the speeches at the great banquet, with which the sessions closed, may not be without interest. Naturally most attention was paid, so far as Ottawa criticism went, to the utterances of those gentlemen with whom we are familiar here, and it is with them we propose to deal.

The effort of Lord Minto has been very highly spoken of. We feel that our Governor-General has not been sufficiently appreciated as a public speaker. Of retiring disposition, he has perhaps made less use of his abilities in this direction than we could have wished, but, where he takes time to prepare, he rises to the occasion in a most creditable manner. The writer of these lines had the pleasure of hearing him in London, England, at the Dominion Day banquet at the Hotel Cecil during the Coronation festivities, and though he spoke in "fast company," to use a sporting phrase, he was not far behind the best upon that great occasion. In reading his Montreal speech, one notes that while he is full of enthusiasm for Canada—so full, that he states he would be proud to be called a Canadian (a long step surely for a Scotchman)—he is keen for the closest possible connection with Britain, consistent with the continued independence of our political institutions. That manliness of sentiment, so distinguishing a characteristic of Canadians today, is freely expressed by His Excellency when he says: "My opinion is that the days of colonies have gone by. We have reached the day of young nations." We can, after all, readily understand this warm Canadian feeling in Lord Minto. He came to this country as a young man some 20 years ago, and almost immediately bore a part in preserving our great heritage, serving gallantly with the Canadian volunteers in the Riel Rebellion. His experiences thereafter in the Canada of that day are very well described by himself in his speech. After a few years of absence he came back as our Governor-General, and, as such, he has had splendid opportunities of viewing the Dominion in all parts—opportunities of which he has well availed himself.

His peroration is well worthy of verbatim quotation. It is as follows: "What is to be our choice? A mighty empire—a brilliant constellation of nations—united in common interests; disseminating throughout the world the spirit of free institutions and liberal ideas; proud of a glorious history and confident in the promises of the future—or gradual estrangement of that empire's component parts and its ultimate disintegration."

Probably the most interesting figure at the banquet was that venerable statesman Lord Strathcona. While not a Canadian by birth, and, like so many more in Canada, claiming the Land o' the Heather for his origin, he can surely be claimed by us, since he came to this country 65 years ago, and his history and prosperity are indissolubly bound up in that of the Dominion. It must have been absorbingly interesting to hear this old man, with faculties all alert, telling from his personal experience of the things that had been before most of those present had seen the light of day; and the way in which he wound up his statement as to his lifelong faith in Canada, "Depend upon it, you will make more out of anything by thinking well of it than by thinking ill of it," evinces a homely but wonderfully wise philosophy of life.

Even upon such an occasion as this Lord Strathcona did not forget to say a good word for Canada along commercial lines, and his pointed remark to the British guests: "You will see that this is a good country in which to invest your money; much better than in foreign countries," is one which should be productive of good results, and upon which his auditors will do well to ponder.

Thus far we have been speaking of the speeches of gentlemen who are Canadians in sentiment; now we come to those who, to use Kipling's phrase, are the "native born," and, first, of the Prime Minister. It is generally conceded that Sir Wilfrid was at his best, and almost every one in Canada now knows what that means. It is matter for congratulation that his health is now so fully restored that there seems no further cause of anxiety for it, and so we may feel assured that for years to come on all great occasions such as this we will have one who will be unexcelled as an orator, be the others present who they may. We know that Englishmen are by no means effusive; in fact, we often think they are over-cold in all except what pertains to their own country, so we may take it that Sir William Holland meant what he said when he remarked "I beg to say that we are deeply grateful to you, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, for the magnificent oration in which you proposed the toast," and, again, "I count it an honor to be allowed to respond to a toast which has been proposed by a statesman whose influence in the Mother Country is only less than his influence in Canada."

The position taken by the Prime Minister was in no way different from that assumed by him on the occasion of the colonial conference last Summer, and that it is the true one, past cavil, must be apparent to those who read the speech of Mr. R. L. Borden, in which he generously endorsed the attitude of Sir Wilfrid. He spoke with no uncertain sound, and it was necessary that he should do so, for we cannot afford to have our English guests go away with any false ideas of Canadian sentiment in this regard. We can summarize the matter no better than by taking a clipping from the speech itself, as follows: "If we are to obtain from the people of Great Britain a concession for which we would be expected to give an equivalent, and if we are to obtain it also at the expense of the sacrifice of some of our political rights, for my part, I would simply say, let us go no further, for already we have come to the parting of the ways. Canada values too highly the system which has made her what she is to consent willingly to part with any part of it for whatever consideration, and, even, Sir, for the maintenance of the British Empire, I think it would be a most evil thing if any of the colonies were to consent to part with any of their legislative independence."

Mr. R. L. Borden spoke in his usual manly, temperate way, and the manner in which he endorsed the sentiments of the leader of the Government as to local autonomy clearly proves that so far as this goes there is but the one feeling in the country. His statement as to his trip in the West last Summer was most graphic. He said of it: "Last year I travelled more than 10,000 miles in the western part of Canada, and I don't know one-third of that great country yet. You will go through the country on Pullman cars, and you will come back, but do not for one moment imagine that you know the enormous splendor of the resources which we have in Canada, and how great an inheritance this is to its own inhabitants and to the Empire." Mr. Borden devoted more attention than did Sir Wilfrid to the necessity of independent action with regard to our manufactures, and, in this respect, his speech was the complement of Sir Wilfrid's as to legislative independence, the two speeches taken together covering the ground so admirably, that one might almost think the rival leaders had been in friendly conference before the banquet. The Montreal Star well expresses the general feeling toward Mr. Borden when it says in the letter of a correspondent, "His striking personality and thoughtful words gave the impression of vast reserve power and forceful purpose."

Canada is indeed fortunate in her great resources, in her climate, and in her people; but, perhaps, there is nothing about which we have more cause for thankfulness than the men who lead her two great parties to-day. Both are true Canadians. Both are honest beyond the breath of suspicion, and whichever rules the destinies of the northern half of this continent, will bring to his task a lofty patriotism and a breadth of view that are indispensably necessary at a time when we will be called upon to build the foundation of a future national greatness which will be excelled by no nation of ancient or modern times.

LIME JUICE ISLAND.

Editor "Canadian Grocer:"—Referring to your statement on page 51 of your last issue of "The Canadian Grocer," this reminds us of a statement made in a French trade journal some time ago, that Missouri was the largest olive oil producing country in the world. When you say that this tiny island,—designated by you: "Lime Juice Island," produces nearly all the lime juice in the world, we want to say that it does not produce one-tenth. Our own plantation, which is not on "Lime Juice Island," produces more than 70,000 gallons, and is but one of several. We are not writing an advt. on lime juice, but as we are the largest refiners of lime juice in America, and know whereof we speak, we could not allow your statement to pass unchallenged: unless it is a paid advt., and as such it does not appear.

DAIRY PRODUCE AND PROVISIONS

and Cold Storage News.

Colonial Butter in Britain.

THE SCOTTISH TRADER in a recent editorial remarks that the protectionist proposals of Mr. Chamberlain are at least having the effect of educating the British people as to the source of their food supplies. Statistics, so dearly loved by the Briton, have shown conclusively the important place taken by Canada and New Zealand in supplying the Motherland with dairy products.

"Formerly," says The Trader, "'Our Lady of the Snows,' as people were wont to call Canada in their unenlightened days, devoted her dairying mainly to the production of cheese, and the makers paid such heed to quality that they became our chief source of foreign supplies. Other things, such as cooked meats, have ousted cheese from the prominent position which it previously occupied in households, and the Canadian dairy farmers wisely turned their attention largely to buttermaking. Here perseverance and careful study have also brought the quality up to a high standard, how high can only be fully appreciated by those who recall the fiery-flavored, often rancid, stuff which came here as butter from the United States a quarter of a century or so ago. The result of the Dominion's enterprise is shown by the fact that whereas only 2,197 tons of butter were exported to the United Kingdom in 1894, no fewer than 13,238 tons were exported during the year which ended in June last. New Zealand, which possesses many advantages as a dairying colony, also occupies a foremost place as regards the quality of butter; her exports to the United Kingdom have, however, only increased from 2,305 to 8,534 tons during the period mentioned—that is to say, less than fourfold against Canada's sixfold. So far as the consumer is concerned, this competition from various parts of the globe has had the very satisfactory result of keeping the price of the finest grade of butter several pence below the figures it used to reach in the days when we were almost entirely dependent upon Denmark for choicest qualities. There is one point in connection with our butter supply which is worthy of serious consideration. Last year 22,924 tons of butter were imported from Canada, New Zealand, and Australia. Under what name is that butter sold? Danish and Irish are familiar labels in provision shop windows, but what about Dutch, Russian, Swedish, Canadian, New Zealand, and Australian butter? None of the exporters from these countries have reason to be ashamed of their butter, and they ought to insist that it be sold under its real name. Consumers, too, have an interest in the matter; they should have opportunity for judging of the relative merits of these butters. Surely this is a case for putting the provisions of the Merchandise Marks Act into operation, and our colonial governments ought to compel the authorities at home to do so. Every country's produce should be sold under its real name, and stand or fall on its own merits."

Our Export Provision Trade.

CANADA'S export trade in all lines of provisions is advancing at a most gratifying rate, as may be gathered from the trade returns for the last fiscal year.

Of butter, we in 1901 exported a value of $3,295,663, produced in this country; in 1902, $5,660,541; and in the last fiscal year, $6,954,618.

Our exports of cheese manufactured in Canada in 1901 amounted to $20,696,951; in 1902, to $19,686,291, and in 1903, to $24,712,943.

We sent abroad bacon and hams to the value of $11,778,116 in 1901; $12,103,793 in 1902, and $15,906,334 in 1903.

In each case Great Britain was our largest customer, the amount for last year in the respective classes being: butter, $6,551,014; cheese, $21,620,004; bacon and hams, $15,873,739.

Canada's Cattle Exports.

The arrivals of Canadian cattle at Liverpool to date so far this season have been 91,000, together with 30,000 sheep. This is double the supply for the corresponding period of last year. Agitation is being renewed by the chambers of commerce of the United Kingdom for the removal of the embargo at least in the case of Canada.

Making of Fancy Cheese.

Mr. D. Ramsun, a Norwegian, is at Ottawa making inquiries as to Canadian dairy conditions. Mr. Ramsun has been connected with dairying in Norway and Denmark, and proposes to introduce the systems in vogue in those countries into Canada. He will bring a staff of professors from Denmark, who will conduct dairying schools in different parts of Canada and teach Canadians the art of buttermaking and fancy cheeses as they are made in the countries where he has been engaged during his career as a dairyman. This should prove a most important innovation in Canadian dairy circles.

Siberian Pickled Beef.

A despatch from Berlin says that ten tons of pickled beef have arrived in Berlin from Siberia, being the first consignment from German butchers who went there some time ago to establish slaughtering houses to supply the German trade. Advantageous arrangements are reported to have been made with the Russian Government regarding the transportation of the meat, which is said to average in cost a fraction less than 5c. a pound. It is expected that enormous quantities will be received when the plans are fully carried out.

The Cheese Markets.

Belleville, August 29.—At the meeting of the Cheese Board held here to-day, 2,700 boxes of cheese were registered. McGrath offered 10⅜c. on board, and got 1,860.

Cowansville, August 29.—To-day 42 factories offered 2,241 cheese, 18 creameries offered 1,240 boxes of butter. Duckett bought 416 boxes at 10⅝c., 64 at 10 5-16c., and 27 at 10¼c.; Fowler, 259 boxes at 10 5-16c., and 59 boxes at 10 5-16c.; Allan, 87 boxes at 10⅜c.; McPherson, 53 at 10 5-16c. and 207 at 10⅜c.; Willer, 216 at 10 5-16c.; Brice, 110 at 10 7-16c.; Alexander, 303 at 10 5-16c.; all sold. Dalrymple bought 57 boxes butter at 19c.; Brice, 913 boxes at 19½c., 60 at 19¼c., and 30 at 19⅜c.; Hodgson, 43 at 19¼c.; Hugh Allan, 37 at 19¼c.; and Willer, 70 at 19⅜c.; 30 boxes unsold.

Cornwall, August 29.—At the Cornwall Board 1,077 white, 1,065 colored, and 50 American were boarded; white at 10½c. and 10⅝c., and colored at 10 9-16c. and 10⅝c.; American, 10½c. Sales were—Hodgson Bros., 1,114; Jas. Alexander, 796; A. W. Grant, 91; T. S. Williamson, 28; unsold, 163.

Alexandria, August 29.—At the Cheese Board this evening 1,296 cheese were boarded; 759 white and 538 colored; all were sold to Welsh at 10⅝c.

THE PROVISION MARKETS.

TORONTO.

THERE have been no particular features to the provision markets this week. The demand for cured meats has been well maintained and prices generally have been firm. Roll bacon was a little easier, but shoulder mess has strengthened with the depletion of stocks. Lard is weak, but no break in quotations has occurred. Purchasers are buying from hand to mouth. A good volume of business in hog products is reported this week. As will be noted, Canadian short-cut mess pork is a little lower. For lard there has been a very fair inquiry this week, and the demand for smoked meats is excellent, chiefly for hams and bacon. Canadian bacon is still in good demand on the English market, and the export trade continues steady. We quote:

ST. JOHN, N.B.

In barreled pork prices are rather firmer, one reason being that the cheaper grades are getting out of the market; there is a better demand. Barreled beef also moves more freely. Prices show little change, but the market is quite firm. Pure lard is very low; there is a fair business and quite full stocks are held. Refined lard is finding an improved sale; the price of this grade is held rather firmer than pure. In smoked meats a light sale is reported. Sausages are now offered. We quote:

EGGS.—Deliveries are commencing to come forward more freely. There is a decided improvement in the quality, which should increase consumption. Local trade continues good. The export inquiry has not been very free during the past week, therefore the buying price in the country has remained about as it was. Locally, 15 to 16c. is being obtained for straight stock; 17 to 18c. for selected.

BUTTER.—During the past week there has been a decidedly firmer feeling at the country boards, at Cowansville and St. Hyacinthe on Saturday a marked advance being shown; but so far this week it has been impossible to obtain any advance over the cable. The local trade still continues to take its usual quantity, but the absence of an export demand makes the buyers uneasy. So far this season the market has been a most remarkable one: never, at any time, has the English importer shown any disposition to buy. Although in previous years the importer has expressed the opinion that he would not be a buyer, still, before the season was barely commenced, he was found operating freely. This year, however, has been an exception; any business which is being done is in a hand-to-mouth way. Weekly reports from England offer no encouragement for speculators. Local demand for finest goods is unchanged: 19 to 19½c. Dairy butter is lower, 14½c. being the highest price obtainable in large lots.

CHEESE.—In our last report we noted a decline in the market, but, contrary to the expectations of the trade generally, there has been a reaction, and this week shows sales at the factories at from 10¾ to 10⅞c. It is impossible to know what the outcome will be. The English importers have followed the advance up until the last, but whether they will continue to take cheese is another question. If the demand ceases there will be in all probability a break in the market. Against this, however, is the fact that the season is now well advanced, and practically the only cheese left unsold is the current make, which for the next six weeks will be the best of the season. The jobbing trade is being done on the basis of 10½ to 11c.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

BUTTER.—Prices keep low. There has been a rather better demand, but receipts are quite large, and considerable stock is offered. Quality must be extra to bring best price quickly. There has been more creamery than usual made this Summer in New Brunswick, but the market is dull.

EGGS.—Little change in price is noted; the market is perhaps rather firmer. The supply is received chiefly from Prince Edward Island.

CHEESE.—The make of cheese in New Brunswick this year has been larger than usual. Good prices have been obtained. At present the market is rather higher. Factories have largely shipped their early cheese. There is a difficulty in getting box stuff. We quote:

A PEN SKETCH OF THE CANDID MR. GOURLEY.

By H. F. Gadsby.

SEYMOUR GOURLEY, member of Parliament for Colchester, N.S., is the most prominent meteor we have in Canadian politics. His advent was entirely unexpected, and to this day no one presumes to gauge his orbit.

The story runs that when Gourley decided to contest Colchester in 1900, Sir Charles Tupper politely asked him to "go away back and sit down." Gourley replied that he knew whom his country needed better than Sir Charles did, and the event really seemed to prove that Gourley knew what he was talking about. The Conservative organization in the county reasoned with him, also counseling the mute, inglorious life of a private citizen. They pointed out how hopeless was the prospect of wresting the seat from Freeman McClure, the Liberal candidate. They threw all the cold water they could on his fire. But the meteor soul of Gourley burned on. He told them that he scorned Tupper, and snapped his fingers at their fears, and said that if the machine didn't work for him he would do without it. Both by conviction and by tradition he was a Conservative. The people knew that. If his party put up another candidate, he would bite his way in on his own account and detach enough votes from the nominee of the convention to let the Liberal slip in. At this juncture everybody surrendered to Gourley. Like Caesar, he came, he saw, he conquered, he was elected. All of which goes to show that Gourley is a great man because he can take opportunity and choke it till it's black in the face. Your truly great man moulds circumstance; he does not wait to be moulded by circumstance. In the way he dealt with the Conservative party in Colchester, he appears to have been actuated by the same spirit as that famous Roman general Sertorius, who never shirked a battle because the omens were bad. He simply invented new ones that would do the business, and won out every time.

When Gourley came to Ottawa he behaved exactly like a man of destiny. There was a certain aloofness about him which showed that his was a superior nature. He could not bear the sordid details of politics. Having trodden the Colchester clique under foot he hastened to forget the stepping stone on which he had raised himself. He did not blaze forth in the House. He was biding his time. But privately he would discuss nothing less than continents and world movements. It was evident that his was a master intellect, handling everything in the large. One of his most godlike attributes was a pervading absent-mindedness. He would take soup twice, being under the impression that he had not had it once. He would place his cigar carefully in the soap-dish and throw the soap out of the window. Once, indeed, he went to church on Saturday, which indicates that his thoughts are generally twenty-four hours ahead of the rest of the world. It was only when the verger admonished him that he had jumped a day that he would consent to retire. Up to that moment he had wondered why Ottawa was so tardy in its devotions. The incident was a trifling one, but it demonstrated to all and sundry that here was a fine, impetuous, proleptic personality that was going to make itself felt.

It also came to be known that Gourley was highly original. It had been noticed that he insisted on viewing the world from his own corner—which is, of course, what originality comprises,—but the pivotal episode occurred in No. 6, the Conservative smoking room, when Gourley was conversing with some of his friends. Gourley's seven-year-old son was with him, and Gourley's theory of education is that the legitimate curiosity of every child should be satisfied as far as the resources of the parent or instructor will allow. The topic under discussion was independence and independents in Parliament.

"Father," said this little pitcher, which had the usual amount of ears, "What is an Independent?"

"An Independent, my son," here the fond father beamed on his precocious offspring, "An Independent is generally a blankety blank scoundrel."

Anecdotes like these soon made Gourley a marked man. It was apparent that presently he would say something brilliant and startling like a Catherine wheel. In short, this meteor was bound to coruscate. Meanwhile Gourley showed that he was an immortal by his indifference to costume. Emancipated intellects have always flouted the rules of the toilet. Socrates didn't trim his beard often enough; Diogenes dressed to suit his tub; Gourley dressed to suit himself. The daily newspapers have printed pictures of Gourley as he first impinged on the horizon of the capital. It being the depth of winter, the member for Colchester wore Arctics, which reached half way to his knees, striped trousers, a frock coat, over that a pea jacket, and perched on three hairs a Persian lamb cap at the proper military angle. What the critics seized on was the fact that the tails of this frock coat protruded some two feet beyond the limits of the pea jacket. It was only when Gourley, in the House of Commons, expressed his eternal readiness to step into the trenches against the hated Yankees that the scoffers realized what an ingenious compromise between comfort and occasion this costume of his was. Take off the cap and the pea jacket and there was the statesman en grande tenue, frock coat, cravat and all the rest of it! Take off the frock coat and the stand up collar; put on the pea jacket and the cap, and there was the soldier ready for hard work in the trenches. No doubt Gourley had figured out exactly how he could slip from one role to another by a few trifling alterations. His conduct in this regard reminds one of Napoleon, who used to bewilder his courtiers by his lightning changes of costume. One minute he would be in the throne room, slippers with gold buckles, silk stockings, white knickerbockers, and a flowered coat, the king; five minutes later he would be on the street, mounted, boots, spurs, chapeau bras, hand in his bosom, a scowl on his brow, the great hero and commander. The secret was that always ready in the next room was a pair of top boots, satin lined, which Napoleon exchanged for the slippers. The boots hid the silk stockings and disguised the knickers, which were of the regulation military color. The civilian thus became the soldier in a minute and a half if the boots went on easily and the groom had the horse at the door. Gourley's costume was built on the same principles.

As Summer waxes Gourley relaxes. That is to say, the military idea does not show so plainly in his clothing. It is natural in a being so original as Gourley that his martial ardors should burn more briskly when the weather is cold. As the mercury falls the flame of his spirit mounts and the soldier is revealed, the Yankee hater, the eagle snatcher. Gourley is more combative in winter because he believes that the Yankees will make a winter campaign of it. Consequently he must be ready to do trench-work at any minute. In Summer he can sink the soldier and let the statesman come forward. But statesman or no statesman, he must not be cribbed, cabined and confined in uncomfortable garments. When the days grow warm Gourley sheds his vest—as sure a sign of Spring as the first robin. June comes and the suspenders give way to the belt. July enters and the bowler hat surrenders to a linen slouch. But all this time Gourley has not parted with his morning coat, a tailed and sombre thing quite as impressive as a Prince Albert. Button this coat up and you forget the neglige. Unbutton it and you are arrayed for the dog days. The simple, almost Spartan utility of this arrangement is admirable. And if Gourley should be charged with eccentricity in these matters he can reply that Jabel Robinson, being invited to

A DOUBLE PROFIT

Royal Baking Powder yields a greater profit to the grocer in proportion to the number of cans sold than cheaper and inferior powders.

The profit per cent per can on cheap baking powders may look big—but if you will stop a minute to estimate the total profits on an equal number of cans of Royal, you will sell Royal every time.

Royal Baking Powder gives greater satisfaction to the housekeeper because it is pure and healthful and always sure in results.

You seldom have complaints about the flour, eggs, butter, etc., from a housekeeper who uses Royal Baking Powder. Why is this?

When you sell Royal you not only please your customers but maintain your reputation for selling only reliable goods.

This increases trade and swells your profits.

You profit doubly when you sell Royal Baking Powder.

dinner at the Speaker's, makes a practice of wearing top boots with his evening dress, hidden, of course, but unmistakably there as the bulge near the knee reveals. Indeed Ottawa encourages these daring incongruities. In really hot weather the aides at Government House affect silk hats, frock coats and duck trousers. At any time of the year almost you may see a Cabinet Minister attired in sack coat, silk hat, the other etceteras and tan shoes. The sergeant-at-arms and the usher of the Black Rod take their afternoon strolls in light tweed coats and black broadcloth trousers. Other exceptions are numerous. Perhaps Gourley is not so original as we at first imagined.

Gourley has been promoted rapidly since he came to the capital. After his first speech he was breveted Major; after his second he became Colonel; after his third he was General, where he sticks. He can't go any further unless Lord Dundonald moves out. Gourley is a doughty fighter. Samson himself could hardly kill more Philistines with his peculiar weapon than Gourley does. Gourley is by profession a Conservative. Only the other night he spoke scathingly of the dastardly Liberals who had approached the sacred shrine of the National Policy, stabbed it to the heart with sacrilegious hands and seized its cloak which was far too large, to conceal their faults. It will be seen from this that Gourley does not hesitate for words. On the contrary he suffers from an embarrassment of riches. But Conservatism represents only a small part of his politics. Gourley's outlook is continental, imperial, universal. He calls on geography to prove that if anybody is to be absorbed in North America it will be the United States. He believes resolutely in an Anglo-Saxon confederacy, in which the monarchy will prevail. We are to be the people under an emperor. Gourley is a United Empire Loyalist in the largest sense of the term. Until all the English-speaking nations are gathered under the aegis of Great Britain Gourley would have Canada vie with the United States in everything, tariffs, railroad building, naval and military defence, anything in fact that will put the Yankee nose out of joint. The republic is destined to be our enemy until the Empire swallows it. The curious part of Gourley's creed is that while he has a tremendous, almost sanguinary, enthusiasm for the cause of empire, he thinks very poorly of the fellows who are bungling matters in Downing Street. He says that Great Britain no longer breeds statesmen. Chamberlain is a ward politician. Balfour has no spine. Rosebery stands by with his hands in his pockets. What the Empire wants is new blood from the colonies, men, let us say, like Gourley, who will rise up in the British House of Commons, trample on their insular pride, take the conceit out of the hereditary peerage, flout their obsolete and lethargic institutions, and tell them how to manage the Empire in a truly imperial manner.

Towards the United States, which is meanwhile our hated rival, Gourley expresses the most bloodthirsty sentiments. Gourley has a soft voice and a mild brown eye. These prickly speeches of his are quite as surprising as honey in a lion's mouth.

ORANGE CULTURE IN CALIFORNIA.

THE fruit industry of California was founded at the time of the establishment of the missions of the Franciscan monks, says Scientific American. As early as 1792 there were about 5,000 trees growing at the different missions. Apples, pears, oranges, lemons, limes, and olives constituted the greater portion of these trees. As they nearly all did well, they proved the possibility of fruit culture in California. The fruit era did not begin until about the time of the great gold excitement of 1849. Most of the emigrants to the state thought of nothing but gold; but a few of the more far-seeing obtained possession of some of the old orchards, and reaped a handsome profit by selling their fruit at the exorbitant prices that then prevailed.

Much of the land in California is especially adapted to the cultivation of citrous fruit. While by far the greater portion of the commercial crop of the state is at present grown in Southern California, the citrous fruit can be safely and profitably grown along the foothills of the Sierra Madre Mountains from San Diego to Tehama Counties, a distance of over 700 miles.

The method of propagating citrous trees such as the orange does not materially differ from that employed in the propagation of other fruit trees. One of the most difficult questions which the prospective orange grower must decide, is whether to use seedling or budded trees. The pros and cons of the question cannot be discussed here. The general tendency of progressive growers is to use only trees budded with thoroughly tested and approved varieties. Practically all the advance that has been made in improving citrous fruits by propagating and selecting seedlings, hybrids, and the like which produce superior or peculiar fruits, depends upon propagation by budding and grafting. The centre of orange culture in California is Oroville, in Butte County, about 450 miles north of Los Angeles. The climate is especially adapted for the cultivation of citrous fruits, and is so mild that the frost never injures the trees.

Throughout the Sacramento and San Joachim valleys orange trees are planted in bluffs or foothills in soil of a deep, gravelly, porous nature. So boundless is the market that, although thousands of young trees are yearly planted there is still room for more.

In preparing the land for orange cultivation, plowing and harrowing both ways is necessary in order to fit the soil for the orange tree. Irrigation is also necessary, because of the scant Summer rains. Water is piped to the lands in a common ditch with a gentle slope, and a regular flow of irrigating water is obtained. Since orange growing exhausts the soil in time, fertilizers, both natural and artifical, must be freely used. February, March, and April are the months when the ground is plowed and cross-plowed; afterward it is harrowed each way to within three feet of the trunks. The soil under the trees is cultivated by gangs of men. Trees are planted 25 feet apart, or 70 to the acre. Year-old seedlings are procured from the nurseries, which seedlings in three years attain a strong growth. When the trees are ready to bud they are pruned, all the upper branches being cut off, so that nothing but the forked stump, some three or four feet high, is left. Two T-like incisions are made in the bark, into which incisions the new bud is inserted. About two buds are inserted in each trunk. All superfluous growth is checked, and every atom of nourishment directed toward the development of the new graft. February and march is the time for pruning; September and October the time of budding. May, June, July, August and September are devoted to cultivation and general oversight. In November the fruit begins to mature, and all else is dropped in order to gather the crop. The gathering season is in full operation by the middle of the month; every man, woman, and child must work to pick, pack, and ship the ripe fruit.

Three years after budding, or six from planting the seedlings, the trees begin to bear. The first crop is 280, the second 420, the third still greater, and that of each succeeding year slightly more than its predecessor, if cultivation be never neglected. Neglect is promptly indicated by shrinking and discolored foliage and diminutive fruit.

The oranges cultivated are Washington navel and tangarines. Co-operation among the neighboring orchards provides for handling and shipping the riue fruit. A central packing house receives the fruit from the orchards. The highest grade is 80 to the box, diminishing to 96, 112, 126, 140, 150, 176, and 200 to the box. A hopper is employed, into which the fruit is dumped, the sizes being separated in passing down the incline, the fruit dropping in its proper opening.

OPEN LETTER.

To the Retail Grocery Trade of Western Ontario:

DEAR SIRS,—We thank you for your past patronage, and wish to say that we are still doing business at the old stand, No. 156 Dundas street and 155 Carling street, and never were in better position to cater to your wants. In the last few years there have sprung up so many forms of Companies, Corporations, Associations and Combinations that it is difficult to foresee where these combinations are going to end. In fact the average Retail Grocer to-day does not know where he is at, or who he is dealing with. Now, to avoid any doubt on this matter, so far as we are concerned, we would respectfully ask you to send your orders to us, either through our travellers, by letter, telegraph or telephone, and by so doing we will be responsible to you, and you to us, and to no other person or persons. We will meet all legitimate competition, no matter from what source. We make a specialty of Black and Green Ceylon Teas, Japan and Indian Teas, Raw and Refined Sugars, New Orleans Syrups and Molasses, Canned Salmon, Japan and Fancy Rices, Currants and Raisins, Cereals, Cheese, Lard, etc., etc. We control for London certain leading brands of goods, such as the celebrated "Quaker Brand" of canned goods, Clover Leaf Salmon, and other lines for which we solicit your wants, and we will give your orders our best attention.

Yours very truly,

John Garvey,

Wholesale Grocer, 156 Dundas Street and 155 Carling Street, LONDON, ONT.

Features of the Dominion Exhibition

THE Dominion Exhibition was auspiciously opened Saturday afternoon by Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, for despite the threatening and drizzling skies a large crowd braved the rain to be present on opening day. The occasion was a memorable one. It was a happy idea in pursuance of which our High Commissioner to London was invited to open this, the first Dominion Exhibition. His life has been a great Canadian epic. In sixty-five years the Scottish youth passed through all the gradations from Hudson Bay Company clerk to factor, director, president, member of Parliament, High Commissioner to London and Peer of the British Empire. In sixty five years the little straggling band of discontented and rebellious provinces have passed through all the gradations from poverty and dependence to our present proud position of local autonomy and universal prosperity. It was eminently fitting that this man should open an exhibition the object of which is to show to ourselves and to the world the advancement we have made in all the arts.

Great things have been expected of the Exhibition this year. The fact that it was to be not a provincial, but a Dominion affair, that the Dominion Government had made a liberal grant to assist in making it a success, that His Majesty King Edward had been graciously pleased to loan the jubilee presents, all contributed to heighten the usual interest taken in this great annual exhibition.

The directors have made great efforts to meet these expectations, as the numerous new buildings and improvements show. Of course the fine new steel and brick Manufacturers' building overtops all others. Overlooking the lake, and surrounded by the Departmental buildings, it is the centre of attraction for all visitors.

Hither through a pelting rainstorm a representative of "The Grocer" wended his way Monday afternoon, bent on the everlasting search for something new. He found it. Monday was Children's Day. The rain had driven them to cover, and they were driving their elders—to distraction. Thinking he had come to the Machinery Hall by mistake, the scribe was for turning back into the rain, when he discovered the cause of the tumult. At length the weather faired up, some of the children got out, and the scribe was able to get in.

The building is even more imposing inside than out. The great arched roof gives a splendidly clear space in the centre, but, unfortunately, the great steel supports seriously mar the appearance of many of the stalls around the outer aisles.

The new building was, needless to say, filled to its capacity, and the ensemble was one of which a Canadian might well be proud. Nine-tenths of the exhibits were, of course, of Canadian manufacture, a fact which the sight-seer was unable to overlook, for the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, with commendable enterprise, had made a lavish distribution of handsomely embossed cards bearing a maple leaf and the pregnant words MADE IN CANADA. No matter where one might look, he was confronted by this device.

Turning to the right, "The Grocer" representative edged his way through a crowd of surging Young Canada to a booth festooned with red and white bunting, where a young man with a winning smile and two or three white-aproned lady assistants were explaining to an inquiring public the virtues of Libby's canned meats. Further on the crowd were making frantic efforts to reach a pretty girl, who was distributing samples of potted cheese on a buttered cracker. The scribe joined the crowd. "MacLaren's," she said, as he sampled the miniature lunch. Carling's were next, but, unfortunately, they were not giving samples; nor, indeed, were Labatt's, across the way. After the cheese—but that's another matter. Jones, who accompanied the scribe, was meanwhile examining the jellies and fruit extracts displayed by The Greig Manufacturing Co.

The next street might be called Cereal Lane, for here are located most of the breakfast foods. There they were, Swiss Food, Tillson's Pan-dried Oats, Shredded Wheat, all in a row; across the way Malta-Vita, and around the corner Quaker Oats. Jim Dumps was through stress of circumstances unable to be present. As samples were given out by all these booths a varied menu was available for any man or woman of first-class elbow power; Jones shone. The scribe meanwhile gazed meditatively at the imposing pyramid in which Christie's biscuits were arranged and tried to calculate the number of varieties.

He grew hungry while he gazed and made his way down the aisle to where The Horton-Cato Manufacturing Co. were entertaining to an Exhibition lunch garnished with their Royal salad dressing.

Transportation Building.

Royal baking powder occupied a prominent place in the neighboring stand of Leeming, Miles & Co., who were also selling samples of chocolate.

Pushed hither and thither by the crowd and tripped up by small boys, the "Grocer" representative was still able to note

IT TAKES MORE THAN MERIT TO SELL GOODS.

Merit is a mighty good thing to have as a foundation, but a foundation isn't a house-top, and the house-top is the thing that sticks up.

Your goods may possess the most merit and your ads the least—perhaps they don't balance.

Your announcements should be as far superior to the announcements of your competitors as your goods and methods are superior to theirs. Nowadays "a man is known by his advertisements."

Trade paper space is like good land. Of itself alone it will produce something, but properly worked it yields abundantly.

If you'd like to accomplish more with your advertising expenditure—if you'd like your advertising to become conspicuous for its merits—to be, above all, resultful—make use of our Department of Advertising Service.

We can be your advertising-manager if you say so, originating and executing plans for the extension of business—or working with you simply to the extent of preparing good ads, booklets, mailing cards, catalogues, etc.

We devise plans, write copy, design, illustrate and supervise the printing of high-class advertising literature. All or any part of this assistance is available at reasonable charges.

Consultation as to methods and samples of work done will illustrate our usefulness. Free, of course.

an attractive exhibit, bearing the words, "Pure Gold." Around the corner he was confronted by the words, "Quick O," and hastened to obey the injunction. But after all he was too late; all the samples had been given out. Across the way St. Lawrence starch confronted the passer-by, who, in many cases, having just come in out of the rain, was sadly in need of it.

In the next stall, prettily decorated with blue and white bunting, The Blue Ribbon Tea Co. were dispensing the cup that cheers but inebriates not. As the kettle was on the hob, we chatted with the attendant till the expiration of the seven minutes she said Blue Ribbon tea must stand while brewing. "I add the boiling water, but never put the pot on the stove," said she. After enjoying the fragrant beverage we concluded the directions were sound.

Refreshed, we again set out on our expedition of discovery, and soon descried another potted cheese stand. On closer examination it proved to be Millar's, with Mr. Millman in charge. We joined the crowd and finally were rewarded with the regulation taste on a cracker. Jones doubled and got two samples. Things were becoming interesting. With Cowan's cocoa just ahead, our steps were being guided into pleasant places. "Would we like to try a cup of cocoa?"

Well, rather! When it is raining outside there is much virtue in a cup of cocoa inside. We departed in a happy frame of mind to divide our attention between the fine exhibit of The Edwardsburg Starch Co. and the Highland laddie who stood guard over The E. W. Gillett Co., Limited, striking display of Magic baking powder.

A few steps brought us face to face with the very interesting exhibit of the Sunlight Soap people, while down the aisle the Comfort Soap exhibit was built up behind a huge cake of their specialty.

A turn down a cross aisle brought us up before The Crown Manufacturing Co.'s display of jams, fruit extracts and hard boiled candies. The mysteries of the trade were being explained, when Jones, observing a stone jug in the corner, discovered a dryness in his throat. His discovery was effective, and we were able to add unfermented wine to our list of things sampled. The Ontario Grape Growing and Wine Producing Co., whose stall was immediately opposite, were exhibiting another kind of wine, which was not available for sampling purposes.

The McGregor-Harris Co. next attracted attention with the red and black plaid boxes of butter-scotch, which overshadowed their equally attractive display of soft-boiled goods.

The familiar giant coffee pot which surmounts Eby, Blain's exhibit was an invitation to partake of a steaming cup of coffee not to be passed by.

At the next corner The Armour Co. were inviting all and sundry to refresh themselves with a cup of Vigoral. We were refreshed and passed on to conclude a continuous lunch with the inevitable cracker, this time charged with Bow Park Cream Cheese.

We were beginning to realize that we had dined, so were glad to find the next exhibit in our line to be a very creditable one by The John Taylor Soap Co.

In close proximity we found an attractively gotten up stall in which were displayed the fruit flavors and Hygeia Waters of The J. J. McLaughlin Co. There was a crush so we passed on to examine an exhibit of Social tea which was very tastefully arranged.

Near at hand The City Dairy Co. were making an exhibit of condensed milk, while a little further on was located the booth of the Tobler Swiss chocolate people.

We had completed the circuit of the great building, but there were yet very creditable exhibits which are passed unnoticed while turning a corner to avoid a howling mob of small boys frantically reaching for a souvenir which is of no use to them and which in half an hour will be of no interest, its glory having paled before the dawn of some new wonder.

On a more leisurely stroll the interesting display of The Dominion Brewery Co. came in for notice, and comfortably located near the cereal goods was a sight to delight the eye of the smoker, as he found displayed for his edification the soothing weed in all stages from the verdant plant to the tin-tag plug. T. J. Horrocks was responsible for this exhibit.

On the opposite side of the great hall near the northern entrance was found a pyramid of pickles. The effect was tempting in the extreme, and on a huge green cucumber hanging over all, appeared the word "Heinz."

The rain had ceased and we went out in the open air to ponder on what had been seen. The exhibits as a whole were indeed creditable and worthy to have been "made in Canada." But, for the absence of that competitive element which adds such zest to some other departments, such, for instance, as the dairy and live stock, the exhibits we have outlined in brief might be pronounced unexceptionable.

Manufacturers' and Liberal Arts Building.

As will be gathered from what has been said above, the practice of inviting visitors to sample the various foods on exhibition has become very general, indeed, adopted wherever possible. The sight of a surging crowd of well-dressed people eagerly pressing around a booth and jostling each other in their efforts to get a morsel of cheese on a cracker, has a ludicrous aspect, but in a crowd people forget to stand on their dignity. In any event the sample food counters are well patronized.

THE DAIRY SECTION.

Last year the Dairy building was too small to accommodate all who wished to witness the competitions and hear the lectures; so, to overcome this difficulty, the building this year has been enlarged by the addition of a lecture theatre capable of seating comfortably 1,200 people. It is in the shape of an amphitheatre, and the arena is utilized for the exhibition of up-to-date methods of making butter and cheese. Professor Dean, of the Guelph Agricultural College, is in charge of the building. The most interesting feature of the dairy exhibit is the daily programme in this theatre. Daily lectures started on Wednesday afternoon, and they will continue until Friday, September 11. During the lectures the actual process of buttermaking or cheesemaking is being carried on. Wednesday, September 2, George Publow lectured on "The System of Factory Instruction in Eastern Ontario." On Thursday the subject was "The Exhibits of Cheese and Butter at the Industrial Fair," by J. A. Ruddick. The following is a programme of lectures from Friday: Friday, September 4, "The System of Factory Instruction in Western Ontario," by Geo. H. Barr; Saturday, September 5, "What the Farmers' Institutes are Doing for Dairying in Ontario," by G. C. Creelman; Monday, September 7, "What the Ontario Agricultural College is Doing for Dairying and the Ontario Farmer," by Dr. Jas. Mills; Tuesday, September 8, "How Eastern Ontario is Maintaining the Reputation for Fancy Canadian Cheese," by D. Derbyshire, Brockville; Wednesday, September 9, "What the Ontario Provincial Department of Agriculture is Doing and Going to Do for Dairying," by Hon. John Dryden; Thursday, September 10, a subject to be selected by Prof. C. C. James; and Friday, September 11, "The Manufacturer's Side of Co-operative Dairying," by J. N. Paget, Canboro', and Jas. Connolly, Porter Hill.

The tea dealer who buys any old tea, mixes it up until it don't taste like tea at all, more like Cocoa, had better make hay while the sun shines.

A very interesting feature is the cheese exhibit. George Publow, who is in charge, says that it is much larger and more comprehensive than ever before. One thing that he has noticed particularly in this year's exhibit is the uniformity in quality and size of the cheese. The quality is not quite up to the standard of former years on account of some peculiarity of this season. Eastern Ontario has a fine exhibit and the majority of the prize cheese are from that section.

The Dominion Department of Agriculture has an interesting exhibit, demonstrating the superiority of cool cured cheese over ordinary cured, and of waxed over unwaxed cheese. The following is a table showing the relative shrinkage of cheese made from the same milk but cured at different temperatures:

	Ordinary Temperature 60 to 80 degs.		Cool cured 58 degrees.
	lb.	oz.	lb.	oz.
Green weight, July 8.....	85	1	84	9
" " " 21.....	83	12	84	4
" " Aug. 26.....	82		83	8
Loss in weight.....	3	1	1	1

The butter exhibit is very good this year, both as regards quantity and quality. For the most part the prizes have been captured by Quebec. Ontario can be credited with only one first prize, that being for the best tub or box of butter of not less than 50 pounds.

The exhibit of cream separators is large and varied. The method of separating cream from the milk by the centrifugal separator is demonstrated every afternoon.

The Linde patent refrigerator machine attracts a good deal of attention. It is manufactured by The Linde British Refrigerator Co., Montreal, and it supplies the different refrigerators in the Dairy building with cold air led from the engine to all parts of the building by ice-encased pipes.

THE WEST INDIAN EXHIBIT.

A feature of the Exhibition especially interesting to the grocery trade, is the exhibit made by our West-Indian sister colonies. This department, which is in charge of Mr. Charles Pickford, is much larger and better than last year, and well repays a visit. The products of these tropical islands are most tastefully arranged and are teeming with suggestions for the increase of our trade in that direction.

THE HONEY SECTION.

The Apiary building this year is filled to overflowing with the product of the busy little bee. The exhibits are of a most interesting nature. There is clover and basswood honey there as clear as amber, and the buckwheat product, that might be mistaken for dark maple syrup. The comb honey on exhibition was remarkably good, and the little beeswax on exhibition was unexceptionable. A hive of bees at work was an interesting sight for more than children.

THE JUBILEE PRESENTS.

The special attraction of most interest at the Exhibition this year is no doubt the collection of presents made her late Majesty, Queen Victoria, on the occasion of the Diamond Jubilee, which was graciously loaned for the occasion by His Majesty, King Edward VII. The collection is on exhibition underneath the grandstand and is guarded by a strong squad of policemen and a detachment of soldiers, who are on guard with fixed bayonets. The collection is a remarkable one, and the Eastern decorative work in gold, silver and ivory is a revelation to the western mind. Barbaric pearl and gold were indeed showered at the feet of her late Majesty. Interesting as the collection is, it by no means comprises all the presents received on that memorable occasion. The presents from other members of the royal family and from private persons, many of them of exceeding interest, have not been included in the collection. The Dufferin presents are on exhibition along with those loaned by His Majesty.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. W. F. Haygarth, general merchant, Canfield, Ont., was in Toronto this week, combining business with pleasure.

Mr. W. H. Halford, representing S. H. Ewing & Sons' tea and spice house, of Montreal, is taking a short business trip to the Toronto market this week.

Mr. R. S. Herron, of R. Herron & Co., Montreal, is down in the Maritime Provinces for a few weeks. Mr. Herron's trip is but a flying one this time, the interests of "Red Cross" jelly powder, extracts, etc., requiring his attention.

Mr. E. T. Carter, Toronto, is having some large shipments of wool from the Northwest this season. He was in Owen Sound one day last week and forwarded a train load of 22 cars. His total purchase for this season of Northwest wool will amount to over 500,000 lb.

M. Armand Chaput, of L. Chaput, Fils & Cie, Montreal, is enjoying a few weeks holiday up in the fishing district around Labelle. As the sport is said to be good, and M. Chaput an active lover of the game, it is to be expected that a nice string will result, as well as a beneficial trip physically for M. Chaput.

Mr. A. Chouinard, representative of Ocean Mills (Chinese Starch), Montreal, has returned from his eastern trip, taking in Quebec through to the Gaspe coast. The publicity that has lately been given to the merits of Chinese Starch, through the columns of THE CANADIAN GROCER and the French press, has given a great impetus to his sales.

Mr. Donald Stalker, of Moses Risk & Son, Limited, Glasgow, Scotland, is visiting the Canadian market, and is at present looking up the Montreal trade in company with Mr. I. S. Wotherspoon, their Canadian representative. Though only introduced to the Canadian market a short time ago, the Risk 3 Star Scotch whisky has met with satisfactory acceptation by the trade, the leading hotels, clubs and saloons having it on sale.

Mr. D. J. Byrne, of Leonard Bros., Montreal, has just returned from a trip to the Maritime Provinces. Mr. Byrne visited the principal fishing stations of his firm in Cape Breton and Nova Scotia. His investigations led him to the conclusion that owing to the unfavorable results obtained by fishermen so far, prices will advance, particularly in dried fish. Fish oils also indicate higher figures. A very good trade is looked for, and fishermen anticipate profitable figures.

PAPER BAGS.

American paper bags have been received into store by the jobbing trade in Montreal, both stationery and grocery trades. Prices are considerably lower than Canadian manufacturers are offering. It is claimed that these importations are the result of independent action of the Canadian paper manufacturers' combine. The shipments to hand are so far only an experiment, but if satisfactory business results larger orders may be looked for.

ALIMENTARY PRODUCTS.

Mr. B. O. Beland, 26 Lemoine street, Montreal, calls the attention of the trade to his stock of fine fresh products, such as pates de foies gras, asparagus, spinach, sardines in oil, tomato and cayenne sauce, haricots verts, legumbres, artichokes, French peas, petit pois, (fins, extra fins, choix and extra choix). Mr. Beland is sole Canadian agent for the following French houses: Bouvais-Flon (Ville-en-Bois), Nantes; G. Barbier, Succr., Paris, and G. Chauveau, sr., Paris. The quality of these goods is of the highest, and epicures are assured of keen satisfaction. Mr. Beland solicits inquiries for prices, and guarantees prompt and careful attention to all orders. His address is 26 Lemoine street, Montreal. [Advt.]

OBITUARY

Death of Mrs. J. Bruce Payne.

MRS. BRUCE PAYNE, wife of Mr. J. Bruce Payne, the well-known cigar manufacturer of Granby, P. Q., died on Thursday morning last, August 27. Mrs. Payne, who was but 34 years old, some time ago contracted tuberculosis and in spite of every effort to check the disease she succumbed. Mrs. Payne was a daughter of Mr. C. M. Hoodley, Granby, and was much esteemed in the community in which she lived for her lovely disposition and truly Christian character. She was married to Mr. J. Bruce Payne in 1890. By her death one young son and two daughters are left motherless. Mr. Payne, who is one of Granby's most prominent and popular citizens, has the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community. THE CANADIAN GROCER extends its sincere sympathy to the bereaved husband and father in the heavy loss he has sustained.

Died in Halifax.

News comes from Halifax of the death on Monday last of John Hunter, a well-known Toronto commercial traveller. Mr. Hunter had been taken sick at the Halifax Hotel three weeks ago and was removed to the infirmary, where death occurred. He had travelled for years, principally in the Maritime Provinces.

Owen Sound Traveller Dead.

The death occurred at Owen Sound on Monday last of William M. Barclay, travelling representative in the Muskoka territory and in Northern Ontario for The McLauchlan and Sons Co., Limited, wholesale grocers and biscuit manufacturers, Owen Sound. On the previous Wednesday Mr. Barclay came home from Bracebridge, suffering from constipation. Intestinal trouble developed, and an operation was performed, but too late to save his life. Mr. Barclay had been on the road for the above company for 14 years.

INVITATION TO SEE TEA PACKED.

The Salada Tea Co. are inviting their friends in the trade visiting Toronto during the Dominion Exposition to visit their warehouse, 32 Yonge street, to see them packing "Salada" Ceylon tea in sealed lead packets. They have blending, packing, labeling, nailing and electric weighing machines in operation, and it will certainly well repay you, if you visit Toronto during next week, to give 'Salada" a call.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Contributors are requested to send news only, not puffs of goods they handle, or the arrival of standard goods that everyone has in stock, or that they are offering goods at close figures, or that they have had an unusually large sale this season.

The Eby, Blain Co. have just passed into stock a new line of olives stuffed with capers, and capers and pimento, in several very attractive, different style bottle.

Parke's catsup flavor may be had from Lucas, Steele & Bristol.

Columbia Spring salmon, packed by J. H. Todd & Son, are offered by Dearborn & Co., St. John.

A. L. Goodwin, St. John, is now receiving full car shipments of Ontario fruits, chiefly plums and peaches.

A second consignment of Japan teas, "F.C." brand, are expected shortly by Hudon, Hebert & Cie. The first lot of 550 half-chests were sold out promptly. Prices are very attractive.

The Eby, Blain Co. are quoting low prices on a new shipment of Shell and La Verge brands of French castile soap, bars and tablets, 100 and 200s.

Lucas, Steele & Bristol offer Patterson's preserved fruits (Lorne) in glass, quality extra.

The R. & J. H. Simpson Co., Guelph, have a snap to offer in green Rio coffees.

E. E. McMichael, St. John, N.B., has just received a large shipment of Upton's jams.

Enamel washboards, brass washboards, nickel washboards and glass washboards are offered by Lucas, Steele & Bristol.

The Eby, Blain Co. report a very active demand for the Doolittle gem jars. Grocers whose stocks are running low would do well to send in their orders before their stock is depleted.

Lucas, Steele & Bristol have received another lot of that fine boned and skinned codfish.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. have received a shipment of Phonograph pineapple, packed in the Bahamas, the quality of which is unexcelled.

The new warehouse for Red Rose tea, built by T. H. Estabrooks, St. John, is now nearing completion. It is one of the largest buildings in the city.

The R. & J. H. Simpson Co., wholesale grocers, Guelph, report the arrival of a very fine line of new crop Japan tea in half-chests which they are offering at special prices.

McMechen's "Nail City" tomato catsup in glass and gallon jars, also "Old Virginia" salad dressing are selling well with Lucas, Steele & Bristol.

The A. F. MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Limited, are now taking their Fall orders for Jamieson's Loch Fyne herrings in kegs to arrive in October. Orders should be in early in order to insure prompt delivery.

Hudon, Hebert & Cie, Montreal, are in receipt of a shipment of French briar pipes, also carved and plain meerschaum pipes, both grades in large and varied assortment.

SOCKEYE SELLING BASIS IN U. S.

INTEREST in salmon with special reference to futures was increased this week, says The New York Journal of Commerce, by the action of The Pacific Selling Co. in fixing a selling basis on the 1903 pack of sockeye fish packed by The Pacific Packing & Navigation Co. The prices f.o.b. coast named compared with the opening basis last year by the same company were as follows:

	1903 Per Doz.	1902 Per Doz.
Sockeye talls	$1.50	$1.25
Sockeye flats	1.60	1.35
Sockeye halves	85	1.00

These prices have been submitted to a few buyers who placed their orders subject to approval of prices early in the season and apply only to the labelled goods. Unlabelled goods and salmon packed on buyers' labels are held at 5c. per dozen higher on talls and flats, and 2½c. per dozen higher on half-pounds. The prices are regarded as high—higher than was anticipated several days ago, when a basis of $1.35 f.o.b. coast on talls was talked of. The developments in the sockeye situation of late, however, have completely altered the views of packers on the coast and their representatives here. The total pack of salmon in Puget Sound is figured at less than 200,000 cases, as against 325,000 last year, and it is believed that at the basis fixed today the outlook is that orders already booked and likely to be confirmed will take care of all this interest has to sell. The attitude of the principal packers seems to be one of indifference, and this in connection with the high prices named, is attributed to the fact that English buyers are active on the coast in trying to secure this year's sockeye pack at a sterling price of 26s. delivered, but without success to date. The price of 26s. would, it is stated in well-informed circles, net packers on the coast about $1.57 per dozen out there.

The increased interest shown from the English markets for sockeye salmon has been brought about by the extreme shortage of the British Columbia pack. This is figured in late advices from the coast at 400,000 cases.

THE OYSTER CROP.

Advices from Stamford, Conn., are to the effect that the oyster take from the Connecticut beds is likely to prove a failure. A recent inspection of the beds shows that scarcely any oysters are set, although the season is already at hand.

A Malicious Artist !

The advertising artist of CHINESE STARCH is very malicious at present. His brain is full of designs and ideas; if an idea suits him he draws it for the purpose of producing the proper effect.

The above little cut portrays two characters, unlike but still alike. It represents men of mark, men of sphere, of epochs, of events. In the one is represented Li-Hung-Chang, who, with Bismarck, was the greatest diplomat of his time. In the other—young, active and energetic, presented in "Chinese tunic" (the artist's fancy)—is the portrait of the proprietor of the famous CHINESE STARCH. This comparison between the grand personality of the great diplomat and the modest young Canadian is due to CHINESE STARCH.

Portraits of people who have undergone miraculous cures are often published. "Why not," says the artist, "publish the portrait of one who required in producing his fine linen the use of the famous product CHINESE STARCH? Also the portrait of the Canadian manufacturer?" Said and done.

This is not only an advertisement, but also good information. M. Lefebvre, the starch manufacturer, consents to the use of his portrait by the artist.

When starching and ironing are easily done with CHINESE STARCH, this little truthful sketch will be remembered.

Grocers, insist upon getting CHINESE STARCH. Retails at 10c. package. Ask your jobber for it. For sale everywhere.

BUSINESS MEN AND THE DOMINION EXHIBITION.

BUSINESS men should visit the Dominion Exhibition that is being held in Toronto. Aside altogether from the opportunity of visiting the wholesale and retail houses which is afforded, there is much to be learned from the industrial features of the Exhibition.

The Exhibition is without doubt the best that has ever been held in Toronto. The entertainment features have not been forgotten, but more attention than hitherto has been paid to those branches which are of the most importance to the industrial and commercial life of the country. There is consequently a great deal to be seen at the Exhibition that is of direct interest to those engaged in manufacturing and mercantile pursuits.

President McNaught and Manager Orr are to be congratulated upon the general improvement that is everywhere apparent. THE CANADIAN GROCER has for years urged the Exhibition authorities to offer that encouragement to the industrial interests of Canada that was their due. This the old regime failed to do. The new has struck out along the right lines. It is to be hoped they will continue to hew to them.

THE SALMON PACK.

OUR advices from the Coast this week are not of an assuring nature. The pack is undoubtedly a small one. That on the Fraser river up to the end of August was as follows:

	Cases.
Albion	5,900

The canners are endeavoring to persuade the Dominion Government to prohibit the catching of sockeye for a certain period. The telegram which the Fraser River Canners' Association sent to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries embodying their views, read as follows:

The Fraser River Canners' Association, in view of the lamentably short run of sockeyes on the Fraser River, and the entire absence of salmon from the spawning grounds, respectfully pray that your Department will prohibit all fishing on the Fraser River from August 29 to September 12 inclusive, in order that the balance of the sockeyes remaining outside may be enabled to reach the spawning grounds, and the hatcheries get some supply of spawn. If close season not ordered, future of industry seriously threatened. Immediate consideration and favorable reply by wire is earnestly requested in the interests of the canners and of the fishermen.

THE BEAN CROP.

ADVICES from Chatham are to the effect that prospects for the next crop of beans are very much impaired since one week ago, owing to the drenching rains that have occurred almost continually over that period. A considerable acreage got pulled just previous to the bad weather setting in, and the farmers think the week's exposure in the rains is likely to cause great damage. They say the vines are turning black, and beans commencing to burst from the pods. Reports from the country have brought about a very decided change in sentiment, growers and dealers now realizing that beans will see a big advance. Bad reports have also been received from Michigan points, their crops being apparently in as much danger as those in Western Ontario.

CORN AND TOMATO OUTLOOK.

THE prospects for the corn and tomato pack do not appear to be particularly bright. In answer to an enquiry from THE GROCER The Canadian Canners' Consolidated Co's., Limited, report the season much the same as last year. The corn, it seems, owing to poor seed, had to be replanted several times, and this, with cold weather, has made the crop much later than usual. Tomatoes are also late, although the plants are strong. A month of hot, dry weather is required to ripen the crop. "Much," the report concludes, "depends on September as to what the crop will be."

The Bloomfield Packing Co., Limited, in answer to a similar enquiry, write that comparatively speaking no goods in either corn or tomatoes have been put up as yet. Apart from quality, which is only ordinary, it is pointed out that but four or five weeks remain in which to pack the requirements of the country. This the Bloomfield people regard as impossible. In support of this contention they draw attention to the fact that the market is at present completely bare of these two lines, and the trade is anxiously awaiting for the new pack. "It is a pretty safe prediction," they add, "that before another 1st of September rolls round the Canadian public will again be eating Yankee tomatoes at $1.50 per dozen."

The only ray of hope comes from Essex County, where the seasons are more advanced than further east. W. A. Malcomson, of the Sandwich canning factory, says that the crop of tomatoes in Essex County this year will be very large. They will not ripen as early as last year, but give promise of being a better quality than in former years.

From all of which it may be gathered that a hot September is greatly to be desired.

IS IT A SUBTERFUGE?

ANY proposal to remove the embargo on Canadian cattle has the same effect on the English cattle breeder as a red rag on a bull. Despite the fact that a clear bill of health has again and again been established for Canadian cattle, the Englishman continues to hark back to the old libels on the health of Canadian cattle. The recent renewed efforts toward the removal of the embargo incites a correspondent of The Standard to fulminate as follows:

"What our Canadian friends really demand is the repeal of the Act of Parliament embodying the sanitary policy in relation to animals deliberately adopted after many years of controversy and repeated costly proofs of the unsafety of allowing foreign or colonial cattle to come into the interior of Britain. That act has given a degree of confidence to the breeders of the United Kingdom that they never possessed before it was passed. It would be an outrage to repeal it for the sake of getting a few thousands of Canadian store cattle annually. At present Canadian cattle come to Britain if in fat state in increasing numbers. It would be no advantage to the consumers of Britain to allow them to come in a lean state instead."

This is pure moonshine. Mr. Robert Bickerdike, M. P., at the Congress of Chambers of Commerce of the Empire hit the nail on the head when he said: "This Board of Agriculture has, unfortunately, for years, and is at the present time, in our opinion, perverting the facts in connection with this Canadian grievance of ours, to the mean subterfuges of equivocal language, for the purpose of continuing a system of protection, not against disease, but which has for the sole object the prevention of competition in live stock from the Dominion."

If the English farmer wants protection from Canadian competition, and the British consumer is willing to let him have it, we have no complaint. But Canada objects strenuously to having the health of her cattle impugned in order to serve the selfish interests of the English cattle-raiser.

THE AMERICAN INVASION.

A GOOD deal has been said about the influence on Canada of the settlers in the Northwest from the United States. Americans are comforting themselves over the loss of so many thousands with the thought that these children of Uncle Sam will remain American in spirit, and will be instrumental some day in causing a peaceful revolution in the political allegiance of the Empire stretching toward the golden north. It is to be expected that those who feast on William T. Stead's "Americanization of the World" will find consolation from such reflections. Canadians can afford to look upon these fond dreams of American statesmen with a broad charity. Indeed the extent of our concern over such a possibility is revealed in the fact that we are sending missionaries into Dakota, Montana, Minnesota and scattering broadcast enticing literature, telling of the bountiful harvests and the magnificent future of the Great Canadian West. It is ludicrous to see on the one hand an ultra-British people felicitating themselves over the large exodus of prosperous farmers from the United States, and on the other to see an envious nation endeavoring to persuade itself that all this is a strategical movement of the first order.

The American people stand foremost among the nations of the world as the champions of personal freedom. Yet when some thousands of these same people assert their rights, and elect to leave their country to find new homes under another government, there is a concealed protest from the guardians of liberty. It is a new thing under the sun to see one democratic nation enter the preserves of another democratic nation and canvass aggressively for emigrants. We are familiar with the efforts that both the United States and Canada have made to induce emigration from the Old World, but that a systematic campaign should be made by one, and that the smaller of these countries, to recruit from the other is certainly something novel, something to smile over. Canada has made Uncle Sam look serious, frown a little. It seems to be a violation of the principle of honor among thieves.

Every intelligent citizen of the two nations knows that there is just as much of democracy in Canada as in the United States. The American who settles in Canada will never feel that he has left liberty behind him. He can carry with him no longings other than those that belong to patriotism. His children taught in Canadian schools will find the race line disappear, will learn to love freedom more, to laud England who, through the centuries has made for personal liberty, for equality; who has made mistakes, it is true, but whose purposes have generally been just.

The new citizens of the Dominion from the United States are welcomed, not feared. A generation or two and they will be as loyal to Canada and to the integrity of the British Empire as the most enthusiastic among our sons.

LOOKING AHEAD.

EVERY indication points to a great Fall business and it behooves the wide-awake grocer to prepare for it. Success is the result of looking ahead. The merchant who will reap the most from the coming business harvest is the one who has laid his plans well. What have you been planning in the way of new lines to handle, of new ideas in window-dressing, of effective methods in advertising, of making your store attractive to customers? Later you will be too busy to think out a connected campaign. Looking ahead is as important for a business man as a locomotive engineer. Do not stagnate. Look ahead.

If that which a merchant does does not tend to increase his business reputation it would be more profitable for him to cast it into the fire.

A NOVEL STRIKE.

TO strike for higher wages is not uncommon, and the motive is one that may easily be understood, but it is hard to believe that intelligent workingmen, gifted with a very ordinary degree of common sense, should go on strike to have their wages reduced. Nevertheless such a strike is now in progress in Jersey City, and this seeming miracle has been brought to pass by the efforts of a walking delegate. Until August of this year there had never been any trouble between the firm and its employes, as union requirements have always been carefully obeyed. In only one respect have this firm broken union laws, and the transgression was one which might surely be forgiven—they were paying higher wages than the union demanded.

The uniform rate demanded by the union was $3 per day, but for some time the firm have been paying their more efficient employes as much as $3.75 per day. No man was paid less than the union rate, but some were paid more, the object being, of course, to induce the men to do more and better work and to reward the more efficient workmen. Apparently the men themselves were well satisfied with the arrangement, and it never occurred to them that they had a serious grievance until into that industrial Eden was introduced a serpent in the form of a walking delegate. Very soon after his arrival there was trouble. It would seem that it is the special duty of the walking delegate to unearth trouble, and thus furnish an excuse for his own existence. For some time this particular mischief-maker was puzzled, as the men had no complaints to make. Clearly, since the men were satisfied, it was his duty to make trouble. He demanded that no wage higher than the uniform rate of $3 per day should be paid, as discrimination in favor of more efficient employes is contrary to trade union principles.

To this demand the hitherto docile firm gave a point-blank refusal. They urged, with reason, that a man should have an incentive to prove himself a better workman, and if better than his fellow he should be better paid. The firm expected to hear nothing more of this demand, but they were mistaken. At the command of the walking delegate every man in the shops went on strike. Wonderful tribute to the discipline of the union, the higher paid men went on strike to have their own wages reduced! To such depths of absurdity has descended a trade union gone mad.

The reasons urged in defence of this ridiculous strike fail to render it any less ridiculous. It is urged that the union is bound to demand an equalization of wages in order that no man, good, bad or indifferent, may be barred from employment. Production will be restricted, as no man will do his best work, and thus employment will be afforded for a greater number of men. This is not a reason which is apt to commend the strike to thinking people. Decreased production is scarcely the proper remedy for the economic ills which distress the nation.

The most reasonable excuse is one which in this particular instance does not seem to have been urged. Perhaps it would not be good policy to urge it in public, but nevertheless we believe it is the real reason for this demand for equalization of wages—a demand which, in one form or another, is a part of the requirements of nearly all trades unions, although this is the first case within recollection in which it was sought to enforce it by a strike. The unions fear that their very existence would be endangered by the recognition of different degrees of efficiency among their members. They believe that jealousies would result which would wreck the organization. To all of which one is tempted to say: "So much the worse then for the union."

Such action is tyrannical in the extreme, and it is just such tyranny that alienates from the union the sympathy of many who would otherwise be inclined to be friendly. It is unfortunate, but inevitable, that the ill-considered foolish conduct of one union should bring disrepute upon all such organizations.

Such action is, moreover, injurious in the extreme to the individual employe. Perhaps it is the worst reproach against trade unionism that it represses the individuality of the workman, who has little incentive to do his best work when he has no prospect of earning increased pay. No man can be expected to do his best work when an indolent workman at his side is earning the same wages. The employe who is ambitious to improve his condition has very little chance to do so under the sway of the trade union.

"PEOPLE WHO LIVE IN GLASS HOUSES," ETC.

A DISTINGUISHED Canadian just home from a holiday trip to the Old Land, refers, in an interview in a daily paper, to the appalling ignorance of Canadian geography prevailing in England. The same charge against residents of the United Kingdom is only too common. Before presuming to prefer such a general charge, however, one ought to assume the attitude of "Mr. Facing-Both-Ways." Are Britishers as ignorant of Canadian geography as the average travelled Canadian is of the geography of England, Ireland and Scotland, to say nothing of that of Australia or our other possessions?

In a Montreal club the other evening, they were discussing the interview referred to, and uncomplimentary remarks were made about the Englishman's ignorance. The writer, who happened to be present, quizzed the others on their knowledge of British geography, and the result was decidedly severe on the Canadians. He asked for instance:

"Is Melbourne east or west of Sydney?" Ominous silence reigned supreme. "What are the principal cities of New Zealand?" An odd one in the assembly volunteered the startling information that he could name one. "Is Liverpool east or west of Glasgow?" It was unanimously decided that the situation was west. A good map was brought from the library, when it was seen they were all wrong.

In any event, a critic must recognize the fact that Englishmen are conducting business over the whole world. Are they not likely to know quite as much about the geography of the globe—not excluding that of Canada—as Canadians know about that of the British Empire? We had better not talk so much of our knowledge.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

GROCERIES.

Toronto, September 3, 1903.

THE volume of trade for week under review is eminently satisfactory and great confidence is felt on all sides regarding future prospects. Prices in all instances are remaining firm, and in many lines spot stocks have become so depleted as to cause anxiety as to their holding out pending new arrivals. Canned goods are still to front with demand showing little signs of abatement. There appears to be great uncertainty as to coming season's canning and with existing attitude of the Canners' Association the situation presents every probability of advance in prices. Coffee is still showing signs of greater interest and prices are remaining firm at previous quotations. The sugar situation is distinctly interesting. Demand has been good but tending toward moderation, with a distinctly firm undertone; the New York market continues strong with holders remaining firm at quotations. Spices are uninteresting, with little demand; prices however, remain firm and pepper still continues to show indications of advance. Syrups and molasses are well in demand and prices continue firm, with primal markets showing indications of maintaining themselves at fully up prices. Rice is still in active demand at firm prices, with primal reports denoting better prospects for harvesting crops, and offerings are already in futures. Tapioca is slow and markets show a weakening tendency. Tea on London market is firmly establishing itself at advancing prices, and shows an increasingly strong position. Arrivals are coming to hand in good condition and all medium grades are well competed for and draw fully up prices, any teas for "price" are finding a ready market. In dried fruits the situation is unchanged, the demand being but briefly met by stocks on hand and showing clear indications of falling short of requirements, pending new arrivals.

CANNED GOODS.

Trade continues most satisfactory in all canned goods since our last issue. It is, however, being found difficult to keep pace with the demand in many of the popular lines, the reduced stocks having now become a serious problem, in consequence of which prices are firming up. The uncertainty of new packs is no mean feature in the situation. We quote:

COFFEES.

There is still a healthy aspect to the home coffee market, demand being still maintained beyond the usual standing. The foreign markets are all reporting slow progress and little spirit is manifested in the offerings from primal markets. Prices on the home market in all grades continue firm. We quote:

SUGAR.

The week under review has been quiet and without special features to record. Transactions have been light and at last reported quotation of 3 7-16c. duty paid New York for 96 test centrifugals. Latest advices indicate United States refiners willing to continue as buyers on this basis, but holders of sugars in store and at Cuban outports are asking equal to 3 15-16c., and from present appearances this price is likely to be established on next transaction. Receipts at United States four ports for week ending August 26 were light, being only 20,595 tons, while meltings were increased for the week 3,000 tons, aggregating say 18,000 tons and leaving total stocks of 250,711 tons, against 142,611 tons for same week last year. For the week, receipts at Cuban shipping ports were only 3,000 tons, while there were exports of 14,800 tons, leaving stock in the island of 219,500 tons, against 209,890 tons last year. There are still three central factories grinding. In connection with these figures it is interesting to note that for the week under review the statistical position in the United States and Cuba has improved by a reduction in stocks of over 39,000 tons compared with previous week. Combined stocks of Europe and America at latest uneven dates were 1,953,211 tons against 1,986,923 tons at same period last year, the decrease being 33,679 tons.

European markets are 3d. lower for September shipment, 88 per cent. being quoted 8s. 5¼d. This price is equal to about parity of 1.05c. duty paid New York for centrifugals, the differential in favor of latter grade thus being about 17c per 100 lb.

The distribution of refined in United States and Canada has been greatly interfered with by the prevailing stormy weather, but now that a change for the better has taken place in this regard and with stocks low throughout the country a good distribution may be expected for several weeks and in view of the firmness in raws, an advance in refined would seem to be imminent. Within the past four weeks, raw sugars have advanced 22c. per 100 lb., while there has been practically no change in refined, and this is a point worth noting. We quote:

SPICES.

We have no new feature to record in spices. Trade is slow on the home markets, as is usual at this season of the year, with prices unchanged and remaining firm. Foreign markets are firm, especially so in pepper, holders being disposed to stand firm, as stocks are low and offerings small. Cloves and nutmegs are also reported firm. We quote:

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Demand in these lines continues good with prices continuing firm, foreign market reports all denoting firmness. Dealers' stocks on hand are small and firmly held at full values, with a feeling of confidence as to future. We quote:

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

Rice has continued in active demand and prices remain firm. Reports from primal markets generally denote more favorable situation. The prospects of harvesting crops are considerably improved and there have already been offerings of new crops to arrive, and prices are remaining steady. Tapioca is uninteresting. We quote :

TEAS.

The home trade in tea has not shown a very great change over last reports and appears to keep itself steadily maintained on basis of demand. Any spirit to anticipate the markets is conspicuous by its absence. The London market reports all denote an exceedingly strong situation with all offerings being well competed for and maintaining fully up prices. Arrivals from India are advancing and are now exceeding last year's arrivals, with good report as to the prospect for quality. In Ceylons, arrivals were disappointing and demand appeared to run on teas for "price," any teas showing quality, however, remained firm at full values. More activity was manifested in China teas, with prices ruling up to previous standards. Java teas were well in demand and a steady market was reported. All prices on home markets remain firm at previous quotations. We quote :

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

The home trade in these goods is still maintaining itself satisfactorily. Stocks on hand, however, are well drawn on and it is scarcely expected that they will keep equal to demand, pending new arrivals. Reports to hand at moment from primal markets are uninteresting and denote little change from previous reports. First arrivals are expected at an early date. Prices remain firm at previous quotations. We quote :

GRAIN, FLOUR AND BREAKFAST FOODS.

GRAIN.—Manitoba wheat has taken a further decline since last week. Both No. 1 hard and Northern have dropped. Ontario wheat remains steady at last week's quotations. It is surmised that the Manitoba wheat market will remain fairly steady now until this year's wheat makes its appearance on the market in sufficient quantities to affect it. Barley is slightly firmer this week, and also peas. We quote :

GREEN FRUITS.

The fruit market has been demoralized this last week owing to the storms. The boats were all irregular and the consignments arrived in poor condition. Plums and pears, however, are the only drugs on the market. Crawford peaches are appearing and some magnificent grapes are offered. A few California fruits of a fancy nature are still being sold. Pineapples are again offered at $3.50 to $4. The result of the storm in the Indies was to advance bananas 25c. per bunch. We quote:

VEGETABLES.

The vegetable market continues to show considerable activity. The supply is good and the quality all that can be desired, while the demand is quite satisfactory. Cabbage and corn are a little firmer, and squash somewhat easier, but generally prices are maintained. Sage and savoury are now on the market, and a few pickling cabbages are offered. We quote:

QUEBEC MARKETS.

GROCERIES.

Montreal, Sept. 3, 1903.

BUSINESS, generally, in the jobbing trade has been fairly active, country dealers ordering a fair amount of Fall supplies. It is expected that a large trade will be done in all lines during the current month. Sugars are unchanged. Trade during the week has been satisfactory. London market for beet is strong and New York is firm at an advance of 1-16 toward close of last week. Teas are very quiet, some large arrivals of green Ceylons are reported and a good turn over is going on, low and medium grades being the principal lines. Japans are firm and good common to medium are hard to get at 17 to 18c., finer grades 22 to 23c. China blacks are unchanged and very little doing. In syrups and molasses the scarcity af Barbados has given the corn syrup trade some activity and buyers are turning to the latter goods. Newfoundland has offered some new Barbados through local brokers at prices of 38 to 38½c. laid down here. Foreign dried fruit trade is fairly good ; the arrival in a few weeks of new Valencias will tend to stimulate trade. Prices it is expected will open at about 7½c. for f.o.s., 8½c. for selected, and 8¾ for layers. Sultana raisins are low and it is likely that as quality is reported fine and prices low, an increased trade will result over the last few years. Figs and dates are quiet, no noticeable feature being apparent. California apricots are higher, an advance of ½c. being given out over opening quotations, and peaches are ½c. stronger. Pears and pitted plums will be scarce. Canadian green fruits are arriving freely now, principally plums and peaches. California peaches are arriving in better quantities than last week, when the United States market was too attractive to send much into Canada. Canadian Canners' Association is still withholding prices on tomatoes, corn and beans, and even orders at open prices are declined. Canned salmon are very strong, coast offerings for Rivers Inlet sockeye, talls, being noted at $5.25, and Fraser River sockeye at $5.75, f.o.b. coast. These figures are an advance of $1 to $1.10 per case respectively. Humpbacks are being offered by coast packers and will no doubt find buyers. In fish, the market is improving and the demand will be good from now on, September 1 being usually the opening for better trade. Sea fish are plentiful, but lake fish continue scarce. Fresh British Columbia salmon are arriving and prices are good owing to the short run this season. An improvement is noted in the trade for boneless or prepared fish. Smoked fish are slated for good business. Coffee is dull and quiet. In nuts, locally there is nothing to note. Trade is quiet. Pears are coming in at good prices. The spice situation is unchanged, and trade dull. Rice and tapioca are also very quiet. In provisions a good trade was done in hog products during the week. Canadian short cut mess pork is a little easier and prices have given way some since last quotations. Lard is in only fair demand. Smoked meats, such as bacon and hams, are in good demand. Eggs are coming in more freely and quality is improving. Export inquiry has been good. Butter has firmed up on country boards, a marked advance being reported, but still it has been at such prices that no advance could be obtained over cable. The English importer still shows no disposition to buy. Local prices are unchanged at 19 to 19¼c. for finest goods, and dairy at 14½c. for large lots, smaller quantities being ½ to 1c. more. Cheese, though on the decline towards end of last week, has reacted and is high again, factory prices being given at 10¼ to 10½c. Jobbing trade is being done at 10½ to 11c. Hides are quiet. Trade in ashes is dull. New hay is coming in more freely, $9 for large lots and $10 for carlots of No. 2 were reported this week. New potatoes also are going off well and the trade is good. Reports of rot are discredited, the earlier tubers being the only ones likely to be affected. Honey is arriving freely now. Beans are quiet and easier if anything. Hops are in better demand. Imported apples are opening high, 6½c being quoted for early new goods. The market for flour is strong and higher prices may be looked for as Western millers have advanced 15c. per bbl. Rolled oats and cornmeal are quiet, receipts in the former being light. In wheat a firm feeling is reported in Manitoba, both locally and abroad.

SUGAR.

There is no change in prices to note. Market is firm since last advance of 5c. on hard sugars. Business during the past week among the jobbers has been good. Towards close of last week New York market advanced 1-16c. and in face of the strong feeling in beets it is not unlikely that a further advance may eventuate. The London market for beet is very firm. SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Market is firm. Some little business is reported in mixed Barbados at under 28c, though new Barbados holds firm at last week's quotations. Owing to the scarcity of Barbados and inability to secure through local brokers, some offerings have been received from Newfoundland holders at basis of 38 to 38½c. delivered here. Corn syrup has received some impetus owing to the high prices ruling in Barbados molasses, and some fine samples of New Orleans have also been taken up here. We quote :

TEAS.

Teas are quiet, the demand being steady for Ceylon greens. The market for these is better supplied than has been the case for some weeks. Considerable quantities have arrived during the week, prices ranging from 15 to 18c. for natural leaf. Ceylon blacks are quiet. In China greens prices are unchanged, though reports point to possibly lower prices in the near future, especially for lower qualities. Finer goods are pretty well taken up for first crop. Second crop does not show up to last season's quality. Pea leaf is running from 21 to 27c. and pin head from 30 to 35c. China blacks are unchanged and trade quiet. In Japans, low to medium are still attracting attention, the better lines of low grades going from 17 to 19c.; fine to choice are only moderately in demand. Formosa Oolongs continue firm and high. SPICES.

The situation is unchanged since last report. Ginger, cassia and pepper are firm. Pimento is stronger in New York but as little comparatively comes to this market it attracts only passing attention, unless the advance is exceptionally strong. We quote :

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

Trade in rice is quiet, very little activity at any time during this season being noticeable. In tapioca also, there is nothing to note. A fair average Summer consumption is observable and it is difficult to get jobbers to say there is anything interesting in this product. We quote :

CANNED GOODS.

In canned goods the situation is unchanged from last report. Jobbers still are unable to get quotations on corn, tomatoes and beans from the Canadian Canners' Association. Orders at open prices even are not accepted—the unfavorable weather conditions are the cause of the holding back. As regards salmon, the British Columbia market has re-opened with Rivers Inlet Sockeye talls at $5.25 and Fraser River Sockeye talls at $5.75 f.o.b. coast, which represents an advance of $1 per case on the former and $1.10 on the latter. These heavy advances are turning buyers' attention to the Humpback stock which was carried over from last year and is still obtainable in small quantities in British Columbia. The local trade in general lines of canned goods presents no noticeable feature, the trade is fairly good. We quote:

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

In Valencia raisins prices have been made within the last few days for direct steamer shipments and range from 20 to 22s., according to brand, for f.o.s., with selected fruit offered at the usual 2s. advance. Up to the present importers have shown nothing more than an academic interest. Prices in Malaga fruit, both loose and layers, are at about the same limits as per crop of 1902. In some quarters Malaga fruit seems to be getting a preference over Valencia. It is asserted that they show better value, possessing also better keeping qualities, and not so perishable. The jobber strongly opines, in making a comparison between Valencia and Malaga fruit, that unless Valencia packers pay more attention to shipping better goods to this market, they will simply find themselves neglected in favor of their Malaga rival, as the consumers will refuse to buy Valencias as freely when they can get good Malaga Muscatels. It is noteworthy that Malaga growers have taken a leaf out of the Californian raisin packers' book, to seed and pack their fruit in 1-lb. packages this year. In Sultana raisins, prices so far have been very favorable to buyers, but slightly less favorable weather reports have come to hand with a corresponding strengthening in Smyrna. A large percentage of orders placed by jobbers this season have been on very fetching samples of clean fruit. At lower prices the bulk of the business is being placed in the higher grade fruits. The neglect that Sultanas have suffered during the past few years may be remedied during the present season through the lower prices ruling, and the fact that the quality, from samples shown, is very fine, will undoubtedly mean a greater demand. The prices, it is figured, will range at from 6½ to 8½c., as to quality. Valencias it is expected, will open on arrival at about 7½c. for f.o.s., 8½c. for selected, and 8¾c. for 4-crown layers. Prices for Comadre figs have passed the speculative stage and the market is settled down to about parity for corresponding shipments from Portugal of last year's figures. Currant market is steady locally. New fruit is expected in about three weeks, shipments being on the way now. Prices show a slight weakening in buyers' favor for second steamer. We quote :

GREEN FRUITS.

The fruit market is showing a little activity. A lot of Canadian fruit is arriving, some eighteen carloads having been received during the past few days, principally plums. Peaches have not come in this week as freely as was expected. Arrivals of California fruits are expected to be heavier this week than last when the United States market was taking it at better prices than were obtainable here. Canadian tomatoes are low in price, in fact too low for any money for jobbers. We quote :

FISH.

The market for fish is improving and dealers look for a better demand now. All kinds of sea fish are plentiful but lake fish continue rather scarce, especially pickerel or dore. Fresh British Columbia salmon are arriving more freely ; prices remain about the same, in fact they are higher than usual this year, owing to the very light run of salmon. In pickled fish there is not much new to note as new salt herring have not yet been put on the market to any extent, while green cod is only arriving in very small quantities so far. In boneless or prepared fish there is an improvement to note, in fact the demand is very good, as is usual at this season of the year. In smoked fish such as haddies, kippers, etc., trade is opening up now, and good business is looked forward to. We quote :

NUTS.

The local trade is quiet. Importers are paying little or no attention to Marbot, Cornes and Cahoes, owing to the attraction of low costs of Mayettes. Offerings that have been made will cost laid down about as follows : Grenobles 11½ to 12½c. as to quality ; almonds about the same ; filberts 9 to 10c.; pecans have advanced to 13½ and 14½c. This market is a large consumers of pecans, this class of nut being a favorite with French-Canadians. We quote :

EVAPORATED APPLES.

New evaporated apples are reported as opening high, 6½c. being asked. Ordinary stock is quoted at 5½ to 5¾c. in jobbing lots, and 5c. to 5¼c. in carlots. Indications point to a much larger production than was at first anticipated and prices are looked to as sure to be easier.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

FLOUR.

The market for flour is very strong. Western millers have advanced prices 15c. per bbl. on Winter wheat flour. Complaints are made of scarcity of wheat. One carload of 90 per cent. patents sold at $3.55 on track here, though that is claimed as unobtainable again, $3.60 to $3.65 being the general price. We quote:

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B.C., August 29.

THE efforts of the Vancouver Board of Trade, the Victoria Board of Trade and the British Columbia Wholesale Grocers' Exchange, which comprises the wholesale grocers in both cities, have at last been successful in obtaining a concession in freight rates from Vancouver to Calgary. The C.P.R. Co. has notified the bodies concerned in the agitation, which has been on for six months or more, that a reduction of 25c. per 100 lb. on first-class freight from Vancouver to Calgary is the basis of a reduction in rates all around, which the company is willing to put into effect.

The contention of the wholesale trade here has all along been that the rates from here to Calgary as a base should be the same as from Winnipeg to Calgary, the distance being the same, or nearly so. Existing rates on the same classes of freight have been much higher from Vancouver than from Winnipeg, so that the wholesale trade of this coast has been badly handicapped in efforts to do business with the merchants of Alberta and all intermediate points, to which the Winnipeg wholesalers had a better rate.

The C.P.R. some months ago broke off all negotiations apparently, giving the decision that a change could not be made in the rates, because Winnipeg would ask for similar concessions, making the condition just as before. At that time the wholesale grocers called a practical boycott of the C.P.R. in so far as they were able to control freight. Of course, this applied more to goods being imported than to goods shipped from here. In the latter case it was, perforce, necessary to send by C.P.R. to all points to which that was the only line of transportation.

Evidently, the railway company has reconsidered its position entirely, as the reduction now offered, while not bringing the rate to an absolute parity with Winnipeg, is still such a big cut that the trade feels correspondingly elated. The generally expressed opinion is that the question of doing business in the Alberta country and intermediate points has now been solved. The wholesale hardware trade is equally interested in the concession. A meeting of the Freight Rates Committee of the Board of Trade is to be held this afternoon to discuss the offer. A request to scale the rates on the Crow's Nest Pass line in a similar manner, taking Lethbridge as base point, has not been considered by the company.

The rate for first-class freight to Calgary from Vancouver hitherto in force has been $2.12 per 100 lbs., so that the reduction is nearly 12½ per cent.

Shipments north to Dawson, which have been very heavy up to date, are showing a material slackening off in some lines. In all lines the withdrawal of the Summer schedule of through rate quotations has had the effect of hurrying up shipments until the last minute. But the last boat to reach Skagway before the end of the month, when the rates go out, has sailed, and next shipments will be lighter. There is another reason for some falling off in trade, and that is the cancellation of some orders from Dawson. This is in produce mainly, as the prices of goods in the north have fallen in some produce lines, principally butter and eggs. This will, however, be but a temporary lull in the movement of goods, for Winter stocks are not yet sent in, and in many staple lines of food supplies the big companies are placing orders to replace the goods which have been hung up on the lower Yukon and cannot reach Dawson this Winter.

In grocery lines there is some activity in dried fruits reported, fresh pack of apricots and similar goods being in the market at high figures. Prunes, which are still last season's pack, have been advanced a little in sympathy. In canned goods the additions to receipts of new season's pack from eastern packers are strawberries and raspberries. The wholesale grocers report having promises of new tomatoes for September 1 shipment from the east. If that is carried out, goods will be here in time to get them into Dawson this Fall before the freeze-up. The recalling of through bills of lading on goods consigned to the north does not by any means convey the idea that goods are not shipped in any more this season. The shippers merely have to take the risk themselves. Shipments north will continue for some weeks yet, but through bills will not be given by the transportation companies.

In the produce markets supplies are very fairly good, demand is also good. Prices show a stiffening tendency. There have already been two raises in quotations of cheese from the east in the past week. In twins and small sizes a scarcity is shown. Manitoba shipments of cheese are not large. Eggs are scarce and prices are higher. From the east the quotations on Ontario case eggs are 1c. higher than last week. Local fresh are still at prohibitive prices, being as high as 40c. retail. Creamery butter, while very much firmer in its position in the market, shows no quotable change in price as yet. Dairy is in good demand, and prices are fairly easy, though having a tendency to be firmer in sympathy with the creamery goods. Prices may be quoted at 21 to 22c. for creamery and 17 to 18c. for dairy.

THE FOOD VALUE OF SUGAR.

THE virtues of sugar are interestingly discussed in a recent issue of The Literary Digest. The advocates and disparagers of this indispensable staple are heard, and the weight of evidence is on the side of the healthfulness of sweets. We quote :

"Old and famous doctors, like Hufeland and Heim, declare that a moderate use of sugar stimulates digestion and prevents fermentation in the stomach, while an excessive indulgence in the article has an injurious effect on the digestive faculties, as it causes the formation of an excess of lactic acid, which makes itself apparent in the secretions, especially in the saliva, and in this manner produces an injurious effect on the teeth.

"Latter-day physicians, those representing the latest phases of medical knowledge, declare with great positiveness that 'sugar causes acidity of the stomach only when ingested in small quantities into a stomach already acid or inclined to acidity, when the lactic-acid fermentation seizes upon it and carries it along with it. If, however, the sugar is used in larger quantities it overcomes the fermentation and stops it.'

"The latest investigations have in truth demonstrated that lactic acid fermentation is stopped by an excess of sugar ; but, to the disappointment of pie eaters and bonbon devotees, it must be stated that this effect is produced only when the substance is absolutely pure. In this condition it seems to make no difference whether the sugar be eaten solid in the shape of lumps or dissolved in pure water. Sugar excites the secretions of the stomach, increases digestion of albuminous matters and of nutritives containing iron and lime, a fact which proves that under proper conditions sugar is an enemy against anemia, chlorosis and in scrofula.

"This explains the love of a great many children for sugar in the lump, who afterwards, as they grow older, avoid plain sugar or sugar by itself almost entirely. It seems to be a sort of instinct with children with weak bones and thin blood. As early as 1878 Dr. Bockel recommended in his writings sugar as the best and most powerful remedy in rachitis ('rickets'). According to the theory advanced by him, the sugar given in such cases sets up an alcoholic fermentation, which overcomes the lactic acid present in excess, and thus prevents the escape of the bone-building salts."

According to the writer, the idea that sugar causes bad teeth is an altogether mistaken one.

The teeth of the negroes in the tropics are dazzling white and sound. On our sugar plantations in Cuba, Louisiana and elsewhere all negroes run down with labor or sickness grow sleek, fat and strong again on the return of the sugar harvest solely by chewing the cane. Englishmen and Americans eat more sugar than the French and the Germans, and yet they have better teeth than the latter. He goes on to say:

"After participating in many kinds of food sugar seems to act as a digester, and that heaviness often felt after a hearty meal is frequently relieved by drinking a glass of sugar-water. The famous Hufeland, in his book, 'Makrobiotik' (i.e., on long life), sings a hymn of praise to sugar. and recommends plenty of sugar to all who have to eat coarse, heavy food. It is better, he states, for lean persons than fat ones.

"When we find the cake-bakers and millers habitually have bad teeth it is natural to charge the fact to the use of sugar or of flour. Rather ascribe it to the lack of care of the teeth, habitual with those people, which permits particles of food to remain between the teeth, and thus further decomposition. If they would use the brush frequently and properly they would have as good teeth as anybody.

"In old times our confectioners, bakers, etc., did not employ sugar in their sweet wares, but honey, whose antiseptic properties were known even in remote antiquity, and the Egyptians, Greeks, etc., frequently used it as an application to serious wounds. For that matter, as late as the 17th century our ancestors used sugar as an application to wounds. The practice, however, fell into neglect and was forgotten until only recently prominent surgeons are again bringing the substance into use. Dr. Luke, for instance, professor at the University of Strassburg, recommends it in gangrene, and has used it with excellent results.

"The Frenchman, Claude Bernard, has demonstrated that the normal sugar-content of the blood immediately commences to rise whenever any disease or injury to the organism commences to grow better. In this case a blood rich in sugar seems to exert an influence on the reparative action. This condition of the blood lasts until the health is restored or until the source of supply (of sugar) is cut short. Normal and healthy blood always contains sugar, which is derived from all nutritive foods and has absolutely nothing to do with the consumption of pure sugar. That a too great indulgence in sugar, by itself or mixed with other things, can have a bad effect and cause sickness is not to be denied, but that its use, either in small quantities or large, can cause diabetes cannot be too strongly denied. Such an idea could be conceived or find defenders only from the fact that the original cause of that only too frequent disease has, up to the present, eluded investigation and remains a mystery. . .

"Finally, we can assert that the healthiness of sugar is no longer disputed by educated physicians. That it is not only an article of nourishment, but a beneficient one, is demonstrated by the fact of the constant growth of its employment. In A.D. 1700 all Europe used about 100,000,000 pounds of it: in 1870 this had reached 4,000,000,000 pounds, while statistics show that from the end of August, 1900, to February, 1901, 2,000,000,000 pounds of beet sugar alone had been consumed."

MARYLAND AND HER OYSTERS.

THERE have been oyster wars on the Chesapeake, and Virginia and Maryland have called out their fleets more than once to defend the luscious bivalve, but now the dainty is getting so scarce that it is feared all these troubles will disappear with him, says The Florida Times-Union. The problem now is to keep him at whatever cost. Since Florida has a problem like unto theirs we may learn something by studying the experiences of others.

When the scarcity of marketable oysters first grew noticeable a remedy was offered in "the cull law" similar to ours, which prescribed that only oysters of a certain size should be taken and the young returned to the beds. The boats were obliged to "cull" where the catch was taken. But the increase under the operation of this practice failed to satisfy the exports, and in 1902 the "Haman Bill" was introduced. This was to give the state the right to lease the beds to private parties for a series of years, the assumption being that self-interest would secure the planting and care of the beds. But in the counties having a frontage on the bay a violent opposition to the bill was generated and defeated it, the baymen charging that the purpose was to secure a monopoly and then a trust. The bill was defeated, and "planting laws" substituted, giving ownership to beds planted and cared for. But the diggers fought all laws, making the claim that the bottom of the bay was public property and open to every citizen.

In other sections of the state, however, public opinion has been steadily growing, and there is a fair prospect that the Haman Bill, or something like it, will yet become law, else there will soon be no oysters for anybody. It is not intended to lease any bottoms or beds now proving productive, but to give the "planter" power to protect the crops he may grow on abandoned beds, creating an industry by the methods practiced around New York and formerly at Mobile. Why not? Professor Brooks, af the Johns Hopkins University, has made a study of the subject with close observation for a series of years, and he declares that under the bill the bottom of the bay should produce an annual crop worth $100,000,000 instead of the fluctuating few millions it has been made to pay under the old system that has finally killed the goose that laid the golden egg. Private ownership will not only replant the beds and guard them till the harvest, but insure protection from the starfish and drum that have proved so destructive.

OLIVE STOCKS SHORT ABROAD.

Private advices from responsible sources on the other side, referring to olives, according to The New York Journal of Commerce, say: "The present season is the most dangerous for olives, and as a large amount of them have already been destroyed by the weather, half of the amount estimated will be 'culls' if we have rainy weather in September. The stock of olives in casks is estimated as follows: Number of casks in the United States, 300; No. of casks in the hands of La Exportadora Nuta de Aceitunas, 1,500. The new crop is estimated at 1,500 casks, making a total of 9,300 casks. On the same date last year the stock in the United States was 4,500 casks. The number of casks sold and for sale in Seville was 3,500, and the number of casks cured last year was 8,500, making a total of 16,500 casks. This shows a deficit for this year of 7,200 casks.

"The crop of Manzanillas is expected to be one-half shorter than that of last year. Prices will be higher, as there has been a strong demand for them these last months. Up to the present the quality appears good."

TEA REPORTS.

GOW, WILSON & STANTON, under date of August 31 : Duty payments for home consumption continue to show an increase over those of last year.

Indian. — Supplies have again been moderate and not in excess of requirements, and there has been a continuance of the good general competition noticed last week. Some of the Assam teas are showing promise of good quality to come in the near future. On the other hand, some third invoices of Dooars teas are showing a slight set-back as regards flavor and quality.

Ceylon.—Judging from samples representing the week's offerings it would appear that the bulk of the teas made in the less satisfactory weather prevailing in the Island some two or three months back have now passed through the market. The trade are therefore anticipating improved quality, especially from the districts situated at a high altitude. Samples to hand by mail showing most recent manufacture help to confirm this opinion. The teas met with a good demand and prices ruled steady. Where invoices showed an improvement, a corresponding advance in price was made.

Wm., Jas. & Hy. Thomson's circular of August 20 is, in part, as follows :

The market is showing signs of more general activity and the bidding this week has been brisk for all kinds, while orders for export which have been very scarce for some time were more numerous, and quotations for good medium leaf kinds benefitted in consequence. Common tea remains steady at last week's rates, and though medium grades have been somewhat irregular, invoices of desirable character have been well competed for. Fine teas from India, which are gradually becoming more plentiful, continue to realize full rates. The shipments from India to date are heavier than last year, but it must not be forgotten that very favorable tea-making weather was experienced about the end of June, and from late advices it is unlikely that the present rate of increase will be maintained. Exports from Ceylon to this country continue light.

Green teas.—There is little doing in this market, but both from Colombo and Calcutta come reports of an improved demand, as before remarked. The recent depression in prices was unlikely to continue in view of the scarcity and consequent dearness of the supply from Japan. The opportunity for bringing Ceylon and Indian greens more prominently before the public will no doubt be made use of to the fullest extent.

PROPOSED HONEY EXCHANGE.

A number of beekeepers from through Oxford met in Woodstock last week for the purpose of forming a honey exchange. The plan works well in the United States, and a number think it would work satisfactorily in Western Ontario. In this way the quality and price are fixed and everyone's honey is treated on its merits.

Window and Interior Displays

Timely Hints and Suggestions.

A Winnipeg Grocery Store.

AMONG the thriving business establishments in the bustling city of Winnipeg one of the foremost is the subject of this article and illustration. Its proprietor, Mr. J. A. McKerchar, has been a representative grocer in the Gateway City for many years, during which time, through unflagging energy and a thorough knowledge of the trade, he has built up a business from a very moderate commencement to one of the most extensive in the city.

Interior View of the Store of J. A. McKerchar.

The handsome and substantial building which he has lately built and equipped is situated in the busiest part of Main street, the city's chief thoroughfare. It is of pressed white brick, three storeys in height, with a frontage of 32 feet and a depth of 110 feet, and with a basement of stone and concrete the full size of the building. The store is a model in its interior arrangement, the woodwork throughout, including 140 feet of shelving four tiers in height on each side, being of oak, oil finished. At the base of the shelving are the tea and coffee bins, metal lined; above a section of these are 52 closely-fitting spice and sundries drawers on one side; on the other are handsome glass-front cabinets for displaying plain and fancy biscuits. The walls are tinted in a neutral color, forming an effective background for the shelving and its contents, and a finely designed metallic ceiling, painted to harmonize effectively with the accessories noted, completes a store scheme which appeals to the observer at once by its dignified simplicity and thorough adaptability to the requirements of a first-class business. The lighting is perfectly provided for with two plate-glass fronts, 9 x 18 x 6, extending to two feet from the sidewalk, and a service of five combination gas and electric standards, which, with 20 incandescent ceiling lights, forms when in use a picture both pretty and effective.

Mr. McKerchar's trade has, until recently, been confined to that of a high-class family character, but, in addition to this, which is steadily increasing, a jobbing department has recently been added, with plenty of warehouse room in rear of the store proper, for the reception and distribution of goods in wholesale quantities. Mr. McKerchar is working up an excellent volume of business in this direction, in which, being a close cash buyer, and having access to the best sources of supply, he is enabled to cater thoroughly to the requirements of country merchants, contractors, and other large purchasers.

Changing the Window.

However effective and carefully planned a window display may be, it loses its efficiency in a few days. The habit that many merchants have of allowing a display to remain for two or three weeks is one of the most disastrous faults in the business. A window that passers fail to stop to look at can be condemned by the dresser without hesitation, and a

A Window Display Competition.

THE CANADIAN GROCER, for the encouragement of tasty window displays, has decided to open a competition for its subscribers. Prizes will be awarded for photos or drawings of window displays and accompanying descriptions of the same. The prizes will consist of:

First Prize - - -	$10
Second Prize -	$7

and $2 for every picture and description which is considered worthy of publication.

The competition, which closes on Oct. 1, will admit of photographs, pen and ink or wash drawings, with good ideas counting more than the picture itself, although, of course, all pictures in order to receive a prize, must be of sufficient distinctness and good workmanship to admit of their publication.

There is no progressive merchant but has at least one window a month that is worthy of entering this competition, and the prizes are so arranged that, even if a window does not win the $10, $7 or $5 prize, it may be awarded a $2 prize, provided only that it is of sufficient merit to publish in the columns of this paper. This award will cover the cost of the photograph and there is no reason why any merchant should not obtain it. The number of photographs or drawings submitted by each store is not limited, nor is the number of $2 prizes; a merchant may win a dozen if his pictures merit them.

Should any intending competitor not know how to take a window picture, this paper will be glad to furnish him with instructions. In general terms, it may be stated that the early morning, when the light is clear, when few people are abroad and when there is the least reflection, is the best time to photograph the display. A good photograph can also be taken at night by the aid of an electric or flash light.

Mark all manuscripts and photographs intended for this department with the words "Window Dressing Competition."

speedy change should be made before the public has ceased to expect anything new.

The frequency of the change is a matter of personal judgment, and depends largely upon the size of the town or city. In a city few windows remain over two days, but in a small town a good window may be left a week without having passed its usefulness. More than a week, however, is a loss of window space in any town, however small, and it is to the profit of the merchant that if time can be found more frequent changes are made.

The finding of time for these varied arrangements seems to puzzle and worry many window-dressers, but this time should be considered as just an important as any other part of the business. Time should be made, if it is not convenient. The merchant who has no time to spend on his windows will soon find he has all there is. What store does not find time to wipe the counters, sweep the floor, make up the books? And yet this window-dressing means as much to the success of the business as the everyday necessary duties of the store life. If there is not time with the existing staff of assistants, more are required, just as much as when the size of the business requires more clerks to attend to the customers.

It can be relied upon that a window to which the public have become accustomed will not sell any goods; there is nothing to attract the eye, but rather something to turn customers away. If the public once get the idea that a merchant is careless about his window they soon entertain the closely-succeeding thought that he is careless in every other line. Frequency of change in the display window gives it its principal value, and a poor display, if new, is far better than an old one that was at first a successful salesman.

The sales of sugar at the present time are heavy, and are certain to continue so for a couple of months; the fruit season for peaches and plums goes hand in hand with sugar, and economical housekeepers are now making selections of both for their annual supply of preserves, so essential in every Canadian home.

The shipments of early Fall fruit this year exceed anything that was ever known in the business, in this district. This refers chiefly to the Leamington or Erie district, where there has been a great abundance of peaches and other fruits. The transportation companies have been kept going night and day handling the traffic. Mr. Sharp, of the Dominion Express, says the shipments will treble those of last season. The lower prices for peaches, etc., have created the greater demand for granulated and paris lump sugars.

Mayor Beck was the recepient on behalf of the corporation last week of an illuminated address at the hands of visiting members of the Chambers of Commerce Congress, and the merchants, manufacturers and business men generally are naturally much elated and gratified on account of it. It was presented, on behalf of the Mayor of Canterbury, by three of the business men of that city. Printed on vellum, it made a very attractive document.

London's consumption of fruit has already been noted in these letters; the quantity brought into the city is enormous, and the wonder frequently given expression to is "Where does all the stuff go to?" At last Saturday's market it was in evidence everywhere, and large quantities were disposed of at very moderate figures. Peaches, 12-quart baskets, ranged from 40 to 65c.; 8-quart baskets, 25 to 30c.; 6-quart baskets, 15 to 20c. Plums, in 12-quart baskets, 25 to 35c.; by the peck, 20 to 25c., and by the bushel, 80c. to $1. Pears, by the peck, 25 to 30c., and by the bushel, 50 to 75c. A WATERMELON PALACE.

One of the chief events that will occur in Knox county, Indiana, this Summer will be the watermelon carnival that will soon be held in Oaktown, Ind., says The Chicago Inter-Ocean. According to the arrangements, the affair will be on a gorgeous scale, and will be a novelty. It is planned to build a palace of watermelons, and to arrange the melons in many different styles of architecture. As Oaktown is in the heart of the melon district, it is believed the carnival will be a most interesting sight.

The crop this year will be the largest ever known, judging by present conditions. More than 1,000 acres above last year's acreage have been planted, and preparations are making to handle hundreds of cars. Last year entire melon trains left Oaktown, and hundreds of melons were wasted because the railroad company was unable to supply the demand for cars. There was no bank in Oaktown last year, but one was established last Winter for the purpose of assisting the shippers in their businsss transactions.

The butchers of Winnipeg organized a union last week. The charter roll contained 40 names. The union will be affiliated with the Trades and Labor Council.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

Cereals in Retrospect.

WHEN one looks at the crude stone mills used by uncivilized peoples for grinding grain into meal, and then regards the complicated and highly-perfected machinery of the present day for performing a similar work, one is made to consider the tremendous advance made in science, in meal quality, and in the social conditions from primitive times to the present order.

Hundreds of years of history are suggested by the contrast. Conquests; the intrusion of higher, more forceful races; peace, with the inevitable development from rough-and-ready modes of living to gentler, more highly organized forms of domestic life; the tilling of the soil; the levelling of forests; the tribal advance; fresh conflicts; added victories; beneficient, enlarging peace,—all these pictures of the past go flitting through the mind.

The little patch of land about the pioneer's log house——the millions of acres in our glorious West: what of history lies between is the suggestion of the stone mill that is found now only in our museums.

Indulging still more in the pleasures of retrospect, one finds some amusement in considering the highly-developed form of cereals of to-day and the imperfectly-crushed grain our forefathers produced. In this day of world-wide advertising, when whole pages of a nation's newspapers proclaim in huge type the surpassing merits of a new breakfast food; when bright artists turn their talent to the production of commercial illustrations, and poets (?) manufacture jingles; when the digestive properties of scientifically-prepared, semi-cooked cereals are printed on brilliantly-colored cartons, the poor, simple, common meal of the past is ludicrous in contrast. Yet children thrived on this form of food, and grew into sturdy men and women. The primitive meal and flour may be laughed at to-day; but the men and women who found in them their sustenance might, could they be recalled to life, deem our daintiness and faddishness subjects for answering mirth.

The stone mill suggests much. It is a question whether its modern successor represents in evolution a better type of men and women than those whom we delight to honor as the pioneers of Canada.

Advertising Canada.

Advices from London, Eng., say that the exhibit of Manitoba cereals in the window of the Canadian Emigration Offices at Charing Cross is attracting much attention. As an advertisement for Canada and the resources of the Dominion it is a great success. Hundreds of the pamphlets prepared by the Department of the Interior for the use of intending emigrants are given gratuitously daily to enquirers.

Unless there is some unexpected drawback during the coming Winter the emigration to Canada next season will excel even that of this year. As it is, the Board of Trade returns continue to show a phenomenal growth in the exodus to Canada. The figures are commented upon in many papers, and cannot fail to prove another great advertisement for the Dominion.

Canadian Route a Favorite.

UNDER the heading, "American Ports in Danger," The Record-Herald says:

"Exporters at the Atlantic seaboard ports are greatly alarmed over the rapid decadence of grain receipts and a corresponding increase at the port of Montreal.

"Statistics gathered by The Wall Street Journal show clearly that the alarm is well founded, and that something must soon be done if the prestige of the American ports is to be maintained.

"It is shown that the receipts and exports of wheat, for example, at and through Montreal for the month of July, 1903, almost equalled the entire volume going by the way of the combined American ports. During the first seven months of this year the decrease in volume of export wheat through New York as compared with the same period of 1902 amounted to 29 per cent., and the decrease through the port of Boston was 60 per cent., while the increase through the port of Montreal amounted to 21 per cent. The growing importance of the port of Montreal is further shown by the total grain shipments for 1902, which amounted to over 21,000,000 bushels, placing that city on a par with Boston.

"The condition of the American ports is further emphasized by the corn exports for the past seven months, during which the increase at New York reached 1,111 per cent., at Boston 701 per cent., and at Montreal 6,410 per cent. In view of this showing it is not to be wondered at that the grain interests at Buffalo and the seaboard are urging the railroads to reduce their grain rates sufficiently to prevent a further loss of business.

"The rapid stride made by the port of Montreal is due largely to the Act of Parliament making the Canadian canal free. This port has a further advantage in an all-water route from Duluth, the distributing grain centre of the great Northwest, and from Chicago, the distributing centre of the West.

"Grain can now be shipped from Chicago to Liverpool through Montreal about three cents a bushel cheaper than through Boston or New York. Only a fraction of a cent a bushel is sufficient to divert an enormous volume of grain.

"The problem is plain and the solution is simple. The Canadian route has outbid the American route, and unless this competition in rates is met by the latter the grain of the West and Northwest will continue to seek the Canadian outlet in a rapidly increasing volume."

The Granary of the Empire.

The current number of The Nineteenth Century contains an excellent article from the pen of Robert Machray on the grain-producing capacity, present and future, of the Dominion of Canada. He criticizes at length the claims of the Dominion to the title she placed on the Coronation Arch, "The Granary of the Empire," and comes to the conclusion that, although at present she is not entitled to the distinction, she will soon have demonstrated to the world that the inscription she placed upon the arch was no empty unmeaning boast. He says: Suppose that in the course of a few years—it is as inevitable as anything well can be—suppose there are 380,000 farmers in the Canadian West, what then will be the wheat yield of the Dominion? What will it be when there are 1,000,000 farmers? And there is room, plenty of room, for more than 1,000,000 farmers. He also tells us that the enormous rush of settlers into the country during the last two years, a great number coming from the United States, furnishes the most convincing proof that the slow growth of Canada will soon be looked upon as an interesting phase of our past.

To meet the requirements of their increasing trade in Canada The H.-O. Co. have decided upon opening an office in Toronto, from where in future all their Canadian business will be transacted. In the meantime all orders directed to their representative in that city will receive immediate attention.

Canada's Cereal Exports.

From an interesting trade and navigation return issued by the Department of Customs and compiled up to the end of last June we learn that 86 per cent. of the wheat, flour and bran exported from Canada last year went to Great Britain. During the year the total exports of wheat and its products amounted in value to $29,507,816 of which Great Britain took $25,431,704 worth.

The exports of wheat alone amounted to 32,986,745 bushels, valued at $24,566,703, of which 30,726,947 bushels valued at $22,997,745 went to Great Britain. The exports of flour amounted to 1,287,776 barrels valued at $4,699,143 of which 633,250 barrels valued at $2,338,667 went to the British market.

The exports of bran amounted to 351,641 cwt. valued at $241,970, of which 130,596 cwt. valued at $93,292 went to Britain.

The United States took 892,904 bushels of wheat valued at $536,264. Belgium took 707,733 bushels of wheat valued at $555,198. Germany took 237,063 bushels valued at $187,147. The remainder of the wheat exported, amounting to 423,098 bushels valued at $288,349, was distributed among the British colonies and other countries.

In addition to the amount of flour exported to Great Britain, Newfoundland took 223,210 barrels valued at $843,956. Australia took 167,112 barrels valued at $571,336, and the British West Indies took 43,624 barrels valued at $152,668. Cereals at the Exhibition.

The people of Canada should feel proud of the magnificent display of package cereals in the main building of the Dominion Exhibition.

The Tillson, McIntosh and American Cereal companies deserve very great credit for the artistic arrangement of their exhibits, and all three are attracting the attention they undoubtedly deserve.

Wheat Shipments to Europe.

The actual shipments to Europe from each country during the twelve months ended July 31 in the past three seasons have been as follows, in quarters, hundreds omitted:

From—	1902 3. qrs.	1901-2. qrs.	1900-1. qrs.

Worth Sending For.

The "Force" Food Co. are distributing a very handsome button to their friends. The button has a splendid reproduction in colors of the now celebrated Jim Dumps, with the expression "Be Sunny" inscribed on the margin. It is really a very clever and attractive little ornament, and certainly the best thing of its kind yet issued. Any of our readers who have not yet received one can get it by sending a card to The "Force" Food Co., Toronto, and mentioning the name of THE CANADIAN GROCER, as they are for the trade, who can, in addition, if they wish, secure a few for presentation to their customers.

Cereal Notes.

The handsome new offices of The Parkinson Cereal Co., Thornbury, will soon be ready for occupation.

W. D. Robertson, secretary of The Tillson Co., Tillsonburg, was a visitor at the Exhibition on opening day.

The William McCann Milling Company, Toronto, purposed making an extensive exhibit of their "Peerless" brand of cereals at the Exhibition, but pressure of general business prevented their making the necessary arrangements.

The C.P.R. are making great efforts this year to handle effectively the crop of the Northwest. Already new engines have been brought from the east and empty cars are in every siding waiting for the grain carrying season to commence.

The Oatmeal Cocoa Company, of Minneapolis, has been incorporated with $50,000, capital stock. The incorporators are F. J. C. M. and H. J. Kost. It is understood that the object of the company is to turn out a certain food product.

A representative of THE GROCER, in sampling Quaker Oats on opening day at the Exhibition, complimented the lady in charge on the excellence of her goods and received the assurance "They should be good—they were grown in your own State."

P. Haines & Son, proprietors of The Beaver Valley Flour Mills, Clarksburg, are having a good export demand for their high-grade flour. They have already ground considerable for export this Summer, and are now shipping a consignment to Europe via New York.

It is reported from Keewatin that a company is being formed to establish another large export flour mill at that point. The scheme is to convert the buildings and power plant of the reduction works, which have been standing idle since the mining boom burst, into a mill. This building has only been idle a short time and is a most substantial one.

A. N. Reay, the Canadian representative of The "Force" Food Company, reports that the sales of the goods of their manufacture are increasing so rapidly that both their Canadian and American factories, although working to their fullest capacity, are unable to supply the present demand. The additions now in course of erection at the Hamilton factory will enable them to handle 1,000 cases per day.

The first shipment of wheat from the Northwest of the 1903 crop was made from Altona on August 26. THE WALL PAPER TRADE

A MAN WHO DID MUCH FOR THE WALL PAPER TRADE.

TWO years ago, when The Continental Wall Paper Company of the United States ceased to exist, the American manufacturers began to sell at what is known as flat prices, that is, side wall, ceiling and border all at equal price. Mr. S. S. Boxer, vice-president and managing director of The Watson-Foster Co., Limited, Montreal, saw at once that this would seriously harm, if not ruin, the retail wall paper trade, not only of the United States, but of Canada also. Many retail dealers in Canada, without going into the matter, came to the conclusion that if they bought their borders at the same price as side walls from American factories they would be buying their goods cheaper than if they bought from Canadian factories, paying the usual advance price for borders. Mr. Boxer knew that this was not the case, but that the retailer in reality paid from 15 to 25 per cent. more for his American goods on a flat price than he would pay for Canadian goods with a border price, and he issued a most comprehensive comparative statement to the wall paper trade of Canada, which clearly showed that American wall papers at a flat price cost, as before stated, considerably more than Canadian. This comparative statement was so thoroughly correct that it was at once appreciated by the Canadian wall paper trade, and Mr. Boxer received letters from buyers from all parts of Canada thanking him for putting this matter so clearly before them.

Mr. S. S. Boxer,

Had the Canadian manufacturers followed the idea of flat prices inaugurated in the United States the retail wall paper dealers of Canada would to-day be selling their borders at the same price as side walls, and their business would have become as unprofitable as it has in the United States, as every dealer knows that the bulk of his profit lies in the borders.

No one can overestimate the credit due to Mr. Boxer for his foresight in this matter. He is probably without a superior on this continent in his knowledge of the wall paper business, and is personally and favorably known to nearly all the wholesale and retail trade of Canada, and the company with which he is connected has prospered under his management.

THE COMING SEASON.

THE business for the coming season promises a volume that will be entirely satisfactory to the manufacturers and will repay them for the trouble and expense which they have been put to in preparing the beautiful patterns which they are showing. One and all they state that never have they been able to show samples equal to what are now in the travellers' hands. Great pains have been taken with the high-grade papers, and the results merit the close consideration of buyers. But this does not mean that the lower priced papers have been neglected. This year patterns similar to those previously used in the more expensive lines are being turned out in cheaper qualities, and thus a merchant is enabled to show a really expensive looking pattern in a cheap paper.

Reports are that orders taken thus far are encouraging the manufacturers to continue making the rapid advances in style that have characterized this year. Orders are large, and customers generally are expressing the greatest satisfaction in the new things.

Buyers should not postpone too long the sending in of orders. With the promise of an immense business factories will be very busy later on, and orders cannot, perhaps, then he filled as quickly as desired. Orders now and have the choice of the best patterns. They will sell first, and if oversold, will have to be taken out of the travellers' hands. A merchant knows the possibilities of his business just as well now as four months hence, and by ordering now he runs no chance of having to wait for his stock, nor of missing the best patterns.

VARNISHING WALL PAPER.

VARNISH, when applied to wall paper, will soak in, unless prevented by the surface being well sized. It will be found necessary to use two coats of size, as there may be some skips in the first coat. When dark colored papers are to be varnished a pale glue should be used, and made up in the proportions of one pound of glue to a gallon of water. For the lighter shaded papers, a mixture of gelatine, glue and white paper varnish is the best. A difficulty often met with when sizing on paper is the frothing; for after the bubbles burst, there are spots that have not received the size. This can be avoided by mixing into the size a little turpentine.

Manufacture of Stone Pipes.

THE little village of Mogadore, in Ohio, supplies five-sixths of the United States' smokers with what is known as the stone pipe. The industry began 25 years ago, on a small scale, and has increased until it is the largest plant of its kind in America, and gives employment to 50 men, women, boys and girls. The adjoining hills furnish an abundance of a peculiar kind of clay used in the manufacture of the pipe. It is ground in a clay mill until perfectly smooth and then submitted to a piece of machinery which shapes the taffy-colored earth in long, sausage-like rolls, which are cut in two-inch-length bars, or wads, and given to the men called "punchers," who, by placing them in a machine, form the shape of the pipe. The dexterity of these workmen in all the departments is wonderful. It is not an unusual thing for a boy to make 16,000 pipes in one day.

FINISHING AND BURNING.

The mining, grinding, running wads and punching is done by male help, but when the pipes leave the puncher's table there are bits of ragged clay clinging to them, which are trimmed off by girls, who are styled "finishers." The only tools required for their trade are a knife and a grain bag. The latter is fastened across the lap, and after the pipe is trimmed with the knife it is rubbed on the bag until it is smooth. One finisher can smooth as rapidly as a puncher can make them. When the pipes are partially dry they are placed in a sagger, which resembles a straight butter pot with numerous holes punched in it, and then burned in a kiln about forty-eight hours. Shortly before the fires are allowed to go out, salt is thrown in the fire to give the pipe its gloss. Kiln burning is a trade of itself, and requires considerable experience to temper the heat to the proper degree. It is the all important part of the work, as it is in the kiln that the pipe receives its color, gloss, smoothness and hardness.

STEMMING AND POLISHING.

The stems are made of a cane from the Southern States, and come in bundles five feet long. The joints are sawed out on circular saws and the length made by little boys, who run great risk of losing fingers. The next machine is also managed by boys, who sharpen the end of the stem.

They are then subjected to an immense wooden cylinder, resembling a land roller, and rolled and whirled constantly, which gives the stem a very respectable polish.

Passing to the next room they are treated to the bending process. Long, regular rows of stems are placed on a grooved block of wood, and on the top of the hollowed part is a hollow iron tube reaching across a row two yards long. A red-hot iron bar is inserted in the hollow, and in a very few minutes the heat will bend the cane the shape of the groove. This completes the manufacture of a stone pipe and stem.

Tobacco in Greece.

According to an Athens correspondent, says The Scottish Trader, tobacco culture is rapidly extending in Greece. This year's crop promises to be twice as large as that of last year, and British, Dutch, and other European buyers are already in the market to prevent the competition of Americans, who last year sent up prices through their desire to lay in big stocks. The experiments carried out of late years have proved that many districts in Greece are eminently suited for the growth of tobacco, and that the best Turkish brands can be cultivated with perfect success there, and not be distinguishable from those produced at Xanthi and Kavalla.

Aged 102; Uses Tobacco.

John McNabb, of Lundyville, Man., celebrated his 102nd birthday recently, and is looking forward eagerly to the Fall, when he expects to enjoy his customary sport of duck hunting. Mr. McNabb was born in Kildonan, and is of Scotch parentage. He has been a user of tobacco from his youth, and believes the constant use of the weed has tended to lengthen rathe than to shorten his life.

London Tobacco News.

ALL the London manufacturers report business fairly good. At this time of the year, when the farmers are their busiest, the effect is felt in no line more than the cigar trade. This statement may be a surprise to some readers, who may have had the impression that the agriculturist swears by a pipe, but it is a fact and an indication of the growth of consumption and popularity of the soothing cigar in the rural districts.

The strike which has disturbed to a certain extent the cigar industry in London is now happily settled, at least so far as the factory of McNee & Sons are concerned, they having conceded to all the demands made. Theirs was the only factory who really were inconvenienced, but a small proportion of employes from the other establishments having gone out.

It may be the popular impression that while other manufacturers of various articles, merchants, milliners, etc., find it necessary to visit the large trade centres for new ideas, the cigarman just makes cigars year in and year out in the same old way, using the same old methods, etc. This is an erroneous impression, as the manufacturer of cigars who wants to keep abreast of the times can always benefit by a visit to centres where the goods are made on a larger scale. There are constantly appearing new ideas in boxes, labels, shapes, etc., which, if taken advantage of, mean increased and growing trade. Several of the London manufacturers, among the number Messrs. Harry Line, Bert McDonald and A. H. Brener, have just returned from a visit to the large American cities, whither they went in search of novel and up-to-date ideas. The results from said visit will no doubt appear shortly.

It is rumored that The Tuckett Cigar Co. are negotiating for the purchase of a certain block which will be converted into a cigar factory.

Mr. Wm. Ward, who was so seriously ill some months ago, and afterward appeared to have quite recovered, has suffered a relapse which will necessitate his complete retirement from business. It is understood that in the event of a purchaser not appearing very shortly the business will be wound up by The Western Trusts Co.

As an evidence that business is not altogether dead in Dawson, Y.T., it might be mentioned that Brener Brothers have shipped in August alone about 250,000 cigars to that place.

Now that the American yacht, Reliance, has proven her superiority to Sir Thomas' craft, we may look for a rush of applications to register for a new cigar, the name "Reliance." We believe a "Shamrock" is already on the market.

PUFFS.

Guest—Waiter, bring me a cigar.
Waiter - Yes, sir; five or ten?
Guest—One, I said. A cigar.

In the snowy regions of the Himalaya mountains, it is said, little smoking funnels are made in the frozen snow, at one end of which is placed some tobacco, along with a piece of burning charcoal, while to the other the mountaineers place their mouths and, lying flat on their stomachs, inhale the smoke of the glow-weed. This is at least a cooling story for Summer reading.

Balloonist Lands on Chimney.

THE Quebec Mercury gives a thrilling account of the last of the series of balloon ascensions which The B. Houde Co. have been conducting in that city to advertise their "Red Cross" brand of smoking tobacco. The ascension, which took place from Parent Park at seven o'clock in the evening, drew a great crowd, which awaited the rise of the balloon with open-mouthed interest. Professor Trussel, the 22-year old aeronaut, wore a white suit, on the back and breast of which were large red crosses, fac-similes of the trade-mark on the packages of "Red Cross" tobacco. The flight of the balloon was signalled by a shower of packages of "Red Cross" tobacco from the hands of the ascending balloonist.

There was a craning of necks as the crowd watched the balloon and aeronaut drift higher and higher and in a southerly direction. Finally the parachute drop was made, the balloonist dropped out of sight and the balloon became smaller and smaller as the smoke left it, and finally sank.

When the aeronaut dropped out of the sight of the crowd at the park, it was thought that he had landed on terra firma, but such was not the case. High up on the roof of a house in St. Sauveur he landed and sat gracefully on the top of a brick chimney. There was much excitement in the vicinity, but the daring young man has evidently been in worse places before, and he clambered down quite easily. Meanwhile, the balloon dropped in a garden near the Sacred Heart Hospital.

The island of Formosa imported last year from Japan, chiefly, tobacco amounting to $65,000, being $5,000 more than in any previous year. The ad valorem duty is 150 per cent. there.

Tobacco Notes.

Gus. Fenwick, formerly with The W. H. Steele Co., is now travelling for W. B. Reid.

There are 175,000 people engaged in making cigars in Germany, mostly in villages.

Fred Spires, the representative of The J. M. Fortier Co., Montreal, was in Toronto last week.

E. F. Stiles is taking the northern ground for The W. H. Steele Co., Toronto, and can now be heard sounding the virtues of the "Security" cigar.

The business of Andrew Wilson & Co., Toronto, has increased to such an extent that they have been compelled to enlarge their factory.

The display of The McAlpin Tobacco Co. is one of the features of the exhibition in the main building. The crowd around their exhibit show that it is appreciated.

T. J. Horrocks, of Toronto, has a very attractive exhibit of cigars and tobaccos at the Exhibition. The arrangement is very artistic and commands a great deal of attention.

As showing the lively interest the retail trade are evincing in the cigar trade we may mention that the prominent and widely-known firm of Playfair, Preston & Co., Midland, have added a handsome "silent salesman" showcase for the display of their tobacco and cigars.

The W. H. Steele Co., 40 Scott street, Toronto, are placing a new idea on the Canadian market, which is certainly very neat and of great use to the retailer of cigars. A metal contrivance opens and then regulates the angle of the lid, giving much uniformity of display. A connection also shows the price of the cigar to the customer. The company are now in a position to fill Canadian orders at $1 per dozen. Very large sales have been made in the States, and it promises a very ready sale in Canada.

DAWSON CITY PRICES.

THE CANADIAN GROCER does not regularly publish the Dawson City market reports, but the following summary of prices recently prevailing there, received from a party lately arrived from the north, will be of interest to our readers. Prices, although no longer comparable with fabulous rates of the early boom days, are sufficiently high to enlist interest. Our correspondent writes :

Most of the commodities in the Dawson market have reached a normal price level, or fallen below normal, but cream (condensed) still remains several notches too high. Some predict that cream will drop a couple of dollars within the next ten days.

A large supply of cream arrived in Dawson the past week, but it sold quickly. The price list, however, suffered to some extent. Jersey, family size, dropped from $9.50 to $8, to $8.50 per case. The hotel size fell from $10 to $9, to $9.50 per case. St. Charles, family size, dropped $1.50 per case. The hotel size went from $10 to $9. Carnation was pretty well shot to pieces. The quotations for this cream fell $2.50 per case. More cream is constantly coming into the market and the point will soon be reached where the demand and supply will be at an equilibrium, and a normal price prevail.

Some vinegar arrived, but soon disappeared and the market is practically out of this commodity again. Jelly is also practically out. None has arrived this season.

Butter is becoming short again but traders believe that there is enough to supply consumption until the arrival of more shipments. It is not thought that there will be an actual shortage like what prevailed earlier in the Summer.

Potatoes are jobbing at 5½ and 6c Last week they were held at 6 to 6½c. Traders account for the tumble with different explanations. Some believe the arrival of new potatoes, which are selling at 7 to 8c. wholesale, had a weakening effect on the potato market generally. A considerable quantity of new potatoes arrived this last week or so. Traders declare that it costs 5½c. to land potatoes in Dawson and by the time they are handled the cost has risen to 6c. Consequently, they state, the present wholesale price is not a normal one, and is due to over-competition.

It is claimed that $9 oranges and $11 lemons are not normal quotations, but are caused by the competition. Since last week the oranges have changed from $11 to $9, to $11, and lemons from $12.50 to $11, to $12.50. Some dealers are holding out for the higher figure.

Beef and mutton have fallen 5c. a pound wholesale, the quotations now being, beef, 30c. and mutton 35c. The veal market is in a peculiar condition. Only thirteen calves have arrived in the city this season and they were cornered, it is stated, by one dealer. They were killed and are now in cold storage. Other dealers refuse, it is said, to handle the veal and the owner has the market to himself.

The supply of lard is fair. Selling prices are 21 to 22½c. This commodity was very short all last Winter, but the situation has been relieved to a considerable extent by the arrival of shipments from the outside. Lard, it is claimed, costs 17½c. to 19c. laid down in Dawson. Sliced hams fell from $12.50 to $9.50, and sliced bacon from $9.50 to $9.

Nearly all dried fruits took a 1c. tumble this week, dropping from 16c. wholesale to 15c. All dried fruits are now held at that figure. They are rather high on the outside and from all appearances the present quotation will remain in force until the arrival of the first consignments of the new crop. These will come in the Fall.

Lots of hay arrived the past week, and as a result the price is cheaper. Hay is now held at 4½ to 5c. wholesale. Last week it brought 6½c. The fall is in the natural course of affairs and was expected. Hay costs $78 to $80 per ton to lay down here, it is stated. In large lots it is going at $90 to $100 per ton, the lower figures being given on big sales.

As a general thing, business in the markets has been good, and no complaints have been heard. The only trouble encountered by dealers is in securing enough stock to carry on their trade. A shipment of some commodity arrives but sells so quickly that it is out of the market before the comlng of the next consignment. This condition, however, is rapidly disappearing as traffic on the river becomes more settled, and in a few weeks normal prices should reign in all lines.

Some wholesale quotations are : butter, Agents' 60-lb. case, $33 ; New Westminster, $24 to $28 ; Eden Bank, 42½c. per lb.; fresh ranch eggs, $11 to $11.50 per case ; Canadian creamery cheese, 25c. ; flour, $3.50 per 50 lb. sack ; oats, 5¼ to 5¾c. per lb.; hay, 4½ to 5c. per lb.

CARRYING OUT THE SUGAR CONVENTION ACT.

A supplement to The London Gazette, issued recently, contains two Orders in Council with respect to the recently passed Sugar Convention Act. The first puts into force the penal clause of the statute, which is directed against the foreign countries giving bounties on the production of sugar, and prohibits from September 1 the entrance into the United Kingdom, except in transit, of all sugar from Denmark, Russia, and the Argentine Republic, but not including molasses and sugar-sweetened products. The second Order places under the supervision of the Customs or the Inland Revenue from September 1 every sugar factory and refinery in the United Kingdom.

INTERESTING TO FAIR VISITORS.

United Factories, Limited, will keep open house to their numerous friends visiting the Toronto fair. All merchants and their friends will be made welcome. The sample-room and offices have been remodelled in order to handle the rapidly growing business. A new telephone system has been installed, with a switch-board connecting all departments. Here can be seen a magnificent display of brushes, embracing over 5,000 kinds, of every known variety, also brooms, whisks, woodenware and sundries, the product of their own factories. Owing to the pressure of business the firm is unable to make exhibit at the fair, but it will repay anyone interested to visit their sample-rooms. Travellers will be pleased to show the trade through the offices and sample-rooms and give full information regarding goods, prices or processes of manufacture. The address is 80 York street, close to the depot and wharves. Their illustrated catalogue may be had for the asking.

ESSEX FRUIT FOR ENGLAND.

A special meeting of the South Essex fruit growers was held in Kingsville town hall on Saturday afternoon, August 29, for the purpose of considering the advisability of shipping fruit to the Old Country. A Mr. Harry Howard, of Bristol, Eng., who was visiting Mr. C. S. Miller, was surprised to see the quality and quantity of fruit in this section, and said that there would be a ready market for it in England. He was so anxious to secure shippers that he said the commission merchants there would make advance on shipments. California fruit was being shipped there in large quantities, he said, and peaches were sold at 5c. each. Mr. C. S. Miller addressed the meeting on behalf of Mr. Howard on Saturday.

DEPARTMENT OF ADVERTISING SUGGESTION AND CRITICISM

NOTE—Herein are discussed the principles and practice of advertising. Subscribers are invited to send Mr. Lydiatt specimens of their newspaper and other advertising, for the purpose of review in this department. Address care of Department of Advertising, CANADIAN GROCER.

Edited by

W. Arthur Lydiatt,

TORONTO.

The Business Man who does not Advertise is mighty apt to go home tired at night, but not from overwork.

A VERY successful retail advertiser has said, "I do a great deal of advertising, yet never make two ads alike."

Changing the style of one's regular advertising space is undoubtedly a profitable plan. I have said, "adopt a good style and then stick to it," but I might have added, "until you strike a better."

A retailer should never allow the same copy to run twice in a newspaper, any more than he should distribute the same handbill or circular to day that he used a week ago or last month. Advertisers should learn to look upon an advertisement as business news. As soon as he gets that idea well impressed upon his mind he will see the inadequateness of yesterday's ad. to-day's needs. Frequent change gives a sense of newness to a regular size space which is oftimes very refreshing.

By this I do not mean that if you should be publishing a store paper, for instance, you should issue it only once and then substitute some other style of advertising. The very fact that you adopt a newspaper form for your advertisement is a tacit announcement to your public that they may expect other issues at stated intervals, either weekly or monthly. A newspaper is a "periodical," that is, it issues periodically or at certain periods. If you adopt a "periodical" form, you should make it ful fil the expectations aroused by it. If you place simply the month upon your store paper, the reader naturally thinks that next month will see another paper issued. If the contents of this one are such as to arouse his interest, he will look forward to the next "periodical" issue with a curiosity and expectation which will be of distinct value to the advertiser.

The change that is necessary in this class of advertising is in the contents of the store paper and not in its form. Something bright, something catchy, something interesting, but always with a direct bearing upon the business in hand in the store paper.

In some localities the store paper can be made to do all the work of advertising the store and its merchandise. In others it can be made to do only a part of the work. Newspaper advertisements, mailing cards and other approved methods of reaching the public should be used in conjunction with it. It is impossible for anyone to prescribe exactly what kind of advertising a man's business needs, in general terms. There are certain general principles which apply to all good publicity, but the merchant must study his public and local circumstances and modify general plans to fit local needs.

Advertising is by no means simple; neither is it a mystery. It requires just as much thought and common sense as any department of successful merchandising.

Study Your Own Convenience

If it isn't convenient for you to come to the store, we'll bring the store to you in the form of a solicitor who will attend to your wants as intelligently as though you called at the store.

Or, if you have a telephone a clerk can call you up at any time you name.

Or we'll supply you with postal cards and you can order by mail.

We're on our mettle when orders come this way, and use our best judgment in making selections for you.

Study your own convenience — you are the one to be pleased.

How shall we do it?

It's a good scheme to have post cards printed with a list of staple articles thereon, leaving space to indicate quantity and price, and also some space for remarks and extras, with name and address blank at the bottom. If an ordinary postal isn't big enough, use a priva e card, taking care to have them all stamped. Give these to customers who live at a distance from the store.

To this fact must be attributed the opinions which some merchants entertain, that advertising is useless and does not pay. They are wrong, of course—the testimony of their more successful follow-merchants who do advertise is proof enough—and the reason, as stated above, is to be found in their inability to do the advertising right.

They may say, "we have copied carefully the methods of people who are supposed to be good and clever advertisers." That may all be, but the man who copies blindly an ad. or a series of ads. from another merchant may miss seeing the very essential point which has made the other man's publicity successful.

And this leads me to remind my readers that it is not all of advertising to write an ad. and place it in the paper. In the Springtime the apple blossoms are among the most conspicuous of the beautiful things, but it would be a wide guess if anybody supposed that the blossom alone is responsible for the fruit which always follows. The apple began far down in the ground, where the roots are busily preparing for both the blossoms and the ripened fruit.

Oliver Wendell Holmes said, " to make a cultured man you must begin with his great grandfather." In the same way you must begin far back of the ad. itself to make it effective. To be successful the ad. should begin with the buying of goods, with the arrangement of it, with the instructions to the clerks, with the trimming of the window, all these should fit in and lead up to and support the announcement which you make with printer's ink. Then it must be followed up with intelligent salesmanship. Not one merchant in a hundred ever thinks of all this, and yet it is the meat in the cocoanut of advertising.

Study good advertisements and thus form a good taste in that line. Not all ads. which are found in the magazines are good, any more than are all retail grocers' ads. in the daily or weekly papers good, but you will generally find that at least the typographical work in the magazine publications is worth studying. In studying these ads. you should not take it for granted that all are good and therefore to be copied. Study them rather with a critical eye; put yourself for the time being in the attitude of the casual reader and notice what ad. appeals to you. Then study it and see what it is that has arrested your attention and interested you. The ad. may have faults, but if you can find out what the particular thing about the ad. is that has made you stop and study it, you will certainly have found at least one merit.

FINANCE AND INSURANCE

THE sale by London of over 100,000 shares of stock on the New York market recently, when there was no balance to the account of New York bankers with foreign correspondents, had the effect of putting up the price of sterling to 1c. per lb. above the rate at which gold can be bought in at a profit. But this state of affairs cannot last long, as the commercial bills in connection with the cotton and grain industries will now begin to come in and will last well on into Spring. These bills will put a balance in the hands of the foreign correspondents that will lower the price of exchange by making it of no volume, and America can then, if necessary, reimport part of the gold which she exported during the early Summer.

These commercial bills play a conspicuous part in the money markets of the world, and "documentary commercial acceptances" are papers of great influence on the possibilities of gold importation. Such acceptances are simply drafts drawn by the cotton or grain shippers in this country on the English or continental firms to which they have sold cotton or grain, or on banks upon which they have been authorized by these firms to draw. To these drafts are attached the bills of lading and perhaps a certificate of insurance and, in the case of grain, of inspection. When these drafts are drawn on a reputable firm or bank, the New York bankers readily buy them and discount them on the foreign market where the firm or bank is situated. These bills are usually 60 or 90 day bills and the discount at present in London amounts to about 3 per cent. Of course, the possibility of gold importation depends upon the amount of these commercial bills, and although at present exchange is too high to favor importation, the entry into the market of the cotton and grain bills is looked forward to as of sufficient volume to lower the rate of exchange more than the cent by which it now overtops profitable importation.

Recently discussing the situation as far as the issues of new capital are concerned, Bradstreet's says that it must be admitted that all announcements that industrial or railroad corporations contemplate an increase of their share capital or funded debts or that they have borrowed money temporarily on their credit in the loan market are not only received unfavorably, but have a positively chilling effect on the financial situation. It can, of course, be readily understood that a corporation like The Consolidated Lake Superior Company should meet with but scanty encouragement in response to its management's appeal for subscriptions by the stockholders to an issue of $12,500,000 4 per cent. bonds at 60 per cent. of their par value, even though it is plainly stated and is perfectly understood that failure to supply the $7,000,000 or more which it is hoped can be raised in this way means that the embarrassments of the company will be increased to an extent which would endanger the $26,000,000 of cash which has been invested in the enterprise through its stock. New industrial undertakings, or those like the Consolidated Lake Superior, which are in an incomplete state, and therefore need additional capital to place them in a position where they can prove their earning capacity, find, in fact, no favor whatever at present.

Railway earnings continue to be of a most gratifying nature. The earnings in the United States and Canada during the first seven months of the year aggregated $449,355,044, an increase of 13.7 per cent. compared with the same period in 1902. It is significant that out of 35 enumerated railways on this continent, two of the Canadian railways stood second and third respectively in regard to increases in earnings during July, as compared with the same month last year. The Canadian Pacific showed increased earnings of $750,000 and the Grand Trunk of $603,186.

WHEN A MAN DIES.

"HE left no will,"—familiar words to us all, and to-morrow's newspapers will almost certainly record the death of some prosperous business man who left no will. There are even distinguished lawyers who neglect to do for themselves what they have insisted times without number upon their clients doing. The making of a will is unfortunately one of those things that do not appear urgent, one of the things we are "going to do some day," and so postpone until we are in the valley of the shadow of death, or defer forever.

With many men the reason for not making a will is that the estate to be disposed of is so small, consisting of a home and some life insurance. With others it is a natural distaste to deal with those things that relate to the dissolution of the body. There is, however, another reason that operates powerfully in causing precise and prudent business men to neglect the all-important matter of leaving their affairs after their decease well ordered, and in the custody of trustworthy and competent executors; namely, the disinclination to name executors from among their acquaintances and friends. Most men do not care to act as executors themselves. The time an executorship requires; the troubles involved; the possible lack of sympathy between them and the beneficiaries; the responsibilities incurred; the uncongenial association with fellow-executors; these and other considerations make the office of executor not always one to be desired. In view of these things many men are reluctant to ask a service of others they themselves would be unwilling to render.

That there should be organized bodies of men willing to act as executors, governed solely by business considerations, belonged to the evolutionary processes of our times. Thus arose trust corporations. From the very nature of their operations these companies demanded men of the highest personal character, conspicuous alike for business ability and integrity. The rise and growth of trust corporations has been remarkable. The courts of the land have endorsed them and have committed to their charge many vexatious, but important, estate matters in which wills, investments, guard-ianships, and trust funds demanded skilled and responsible management.

Lawyers in cities, in towns, in villages learned to appreciate the services of such an organization. Another of the influences at work to make trust companies prosper is the record of criminal or careless conduct on the part of executors by which funds have been wrongfully or wastefully dealt with.

There is extreme satisfaction in knowing that one's estate after one's death is safeguarded by a competent body, familiar with every process of the law affecting wills and trusts, to whom the investing of funds, or the custody of property, or the guardianship of minors is an impersonal matter, protected by stringent legislation. These trust corporations are made up of men of the highest stamp, whose wealth and honor are pledged for the fulfilment of the fiduciary obligations the company assumes.

The fear may be entertained by some that the cost of appointing a trust company as executor of one's estate is excessive. Such a fear is without foundation. The charges are all regulated by legislation, and are declared just. Quite apart from the question of expense it is worth a good deal to know that the conditions, bequests and requirements of the last will and testament are discharged with the utmost of business wisdom and legal exactitude.

In this limited consideration of the advantages of trust corporations as executors, only one of the several functions of these institution has been dwelt upon. The intention has been to impress upon our readers the importance of attending to a matter of great moment, and to point out to them that one of the chief objections for not leaving their earthly affairs well ordered in view of inevitable and certain death is removed through the establishment of trust institutions.

A FAVORABLE FORECAST.

IN spite of large purchases from Europe of securities by American investors and operators in recent years, the American excess of exports over imports of gold in August, September, October and November of last year amounted to £4,400,000. In the corresponding months of the previous year the amount of gold imported on balance reached four millions. This year, with America selling instead of buying securities, and with Europe buying instead of selling, with probable large shipments of cotton as soon as the new crop comes forward, and with heavy exports of general produce, it is quite possible, indeed probable, that the quantity of gold imported by the United States in the three months up to the end of November may be twice as great as last year—a sum which, added to the surplus cash balance of New York bankers, would enable them to meet the usual Autumn demand for cash amounting to some ten millions with ease and with a considerable surplus. Further, it must be borne in mind that after the beginning of November cash usually returns from the interior to New York, and although there is an increased demand for currency at the end of December, in January the return of cash is very rapid. So far as it is possible to gauge the outlook, we anticipate that the cash reserves of the New York banks will show some further increase before the Autumn demand is experienced, that by the aid of gold imports the Autumn demand for currency will be met with comparative ease, and that early in the new year the supply of money in New York will be excessive. Under these circumstances investors on this side having command of resources will probably make considerable profits by purchasing securities during the present month with a view to holding them into the new year. That American railroad securities at their present prices are intrinsically cheap cannot be doubted.—London Statist.

GOLD PRODUCTION AND PRICES.

"The world's gold production is increasing now and bids fair to pass all records," says The Wall Street Journal. "The Transvaal output is not so large as it was in the record months of 1899, but on its present ratio of increase promises to reach the total of $45,000,000 for 1903. Alaska is a factor now, and, altogether, it is plain that we have entered upon a series of years in which gold will increase in supply, and commodities will advance as its purchasing power becomes less." Continuing its analysis of the subject of increasing gold production and its effects, our contemporary reasons that "the average rate for time money will be higher in the next five years than it has been in the past period of the same length, even allowing for its special dearness at present. Equities, on the other hand, and railroad stocks, as a concrete instance, should sell at higher figures. If commodities are higher, wages should be higher; railroad supplies of all kinds should be higher, and the railroads would be able to charge a higher rate, which should naturally show in increased gross earnings. Although industrial corporations should have to pay more for the expense of their output they would require and receive a greater price for it."

Why do some merchants employ a cashier, buy a Cash Register and a Safe to protect their cash, and then refuse to guard the bins and barrels that hold this money in another form? Just realize this. Your bulk goods were cash yesterday, and will be to-morrow. Your success depends on the difference between these two amounts, and you need protection right at this point. Why do you not give 13 eggs for a dozen? Simply because you can conveniently count out 12 eggs which are the standard dozen. Why do you give 17 ounces or more for 1 lb? Simply because on the scales you are using you have to guess and are never sure whether you have just 16 ounces or not. The Toledo Scale Counts the ounces and shows them to both buyer and seller, just as plainly as you count the eggs, so you may give 1 lb. 1 oz. for a pound if you wish, but there is no necessity for your so doing if you use a Toledo Scale, as there is absolutely no such thing as down or overweight on a Toledo Scale.

Subjects Being Discussed at Ottawa

Written for The Canadian Grocer by a Member of Parliament

AT 3 o'clock Wednesday morning the vote on the first stage of the Government's transcontinental railway policy was taken, with a very full House and a very full gallery. Speaking of the latter it is a surprise to many that the ladies turn out in such force to "see the vote," subjecting themselves to a great deal of discomfort, forced to listen for hours to speeches none too brilliant, deprived of rest without the compensating advantage of the excitement which a social gathering brings with it, and all that they may behold a couple of hundred weary looking legislators rise in succession in answer to their names to record votes upon which most of them at least have made up their minds long before the first word upon the subject in hand had been spoken or the first flood of eloquence let loose. Yet such has been the custom of the fair sex time out of mind. Of course, it is not every vote which they honor with their presence; just the more important ones, always the division on the Budget for example, and perhaps one or two more during a long session such as this has been. From August 11th to September 1st is certainly a long time to have spent on the first round of even such a fight as this, especially when one considers that on that same 11th day of August the House had been in session five months, but nobody would have grudged the expenditure of time had expeditious dealing followed. When the members streamed into the lobbies after the vote the face of one young Liberal was so unmistakably happy as to provoke the question from a Tory chum of his, "What are you looking so pleased about?" "Why, old man," came the reply, "this is the first transcontinental railway I have ever built." Little did this joyous legislator imagine that the very next day, Thursday, the House would plunge into a hopeless deadlock to keep it in session night and day till the blessed peace of Sunday put a period to its senseless labors. We say senseless labors advisedly. Labor it has been and no mistake, senseless because it has been simply a party fight with no more to do with the railway legislation before the House than with the Irish land bill. Graphic writers have described the stampedes of cattle, the uneasiness in the herd in the early stages of the trouble, and the final headlong rush, but no one can account for the recurrence of such inane acts as these on the part of men who are supposed to be beyond all others the common sense of the nation. Of course, each side blames the other. The Government supporters charge their opponents with obstruction, and in this particular case whisper that the Conservatives have made up their minds deliberately to waste the time of the House until Mr. Borden, unfortunately absent through illness, returns, while the Opposition speaks angrily of Government tyranny in refusing to allow the House to rise, with many grumbles about the "brute majority." The backbencher deplores his fate in being kept here absolutely wasting time when he is dying to see the home and family from which he has been absent for a half year, but puffs his chest, blames the other fellows, and says, "We'll show them that they can't run us, if we have to sit night and day till Christmas."

The closing hours of the great debate were enlivened by a speech from the Hon. Wm. Paterson, which, if power to move one's hearers be the true test of oratory, must rank high among the greatest efforts of Canadian parliamentarians. To begin with, Mr. Paterson is undoubtedly one of the most popular men in the House. Of unfailing courtesy to friend and foe alike, and with a most delightful humor of his own, with a voice which for power and richness is unequalled by any man in the Commons, and with a power of sarcasm so tempered by good nature that even the victim is seen to be smiling pleasantly, "Billy" Paterson, as he is fondly called by his Ontario followers, has assets as a public man unexcelled by many. Since more than four score men had spoken before him, one can readily understand that he was unable to produce any very new arguments, but he certainly changed the costumes and the stage settings with the result that the audience appreciated the performance as keenly as if his speech had been first instead of last. The point which he emphasized more than any other was a contrast between the two policies, so far as its effect on the manufacturing industries of Canada were concerned. He contended that the Government's policy of constructing new roads called for manufacturing in almost every line, while the Opposition policy of buying existing systems and acquiring running rights over still others, did not mean one cent of expenditure for productive purposes, though costing the country just as much or more. He rallied Mr. Tarte, for whom he said he still felt a "lingering affection," for opposing a measure which meant so much to the very class, the manufacturers, whose special champion he professed to be, and fairly brought his Ontario followers to their feet at the conclusion of this portion of his speech.

Mr. Paterson was followed by the popular and eloquent senior member for West Toronto, Mr. E. F. Clarke. It is safe to say that no two men could have been found on the respective sides at so late a stage of the debate who could have so aroused enthusiasm in their weary followers. Mr. Clarke resented Mr. Paterson's charge that the Conservatives were by their opposition to the Government scheme writing the motto "Little Canada" on their banner. He traced in glowing periods the work of the Conservative party in the past as the builders of the Intercolonial and the C.P.R., and as the inaugurators of the National Policy to prove that far from being "little Canadians," it was to it that we owed the prosperous and united Canada which today we see.

After Mr. Clarke some two or three other gentlemen mingled in the debate and then Mr. Seymour Gourley took the floor and held it courageously for three hours. Mr. Gourley was not so interesting as usual, and, at last, many members growing impatient, cat-calls and other unseemly noises began to manifest themselves. The Speaker, who never before in this Parliament has been called upon to notice such conduct in the House, sternly called order, which produced the same—for about three minutes. Then once more the offender (so carefully did he comport himself that to locate him was impossible) gave tongue, and Gourley rose to the occasion. Ignoring the Speaker, with that power behind the throne, the Sergeant-at Arms, as the peace keepers of the House, he announced that he would have his say out if it took till Christmas, that he would not tolerate such interruptions, and that if they occurred again he would personally eject the disturber from the House. This burst was hailed with enthusiasm by his fellow members, and, evidently, with quaking by the offender, for the noises ceased and Mr. Gourley went on triumphantly to the end.

Mr. Tarte, of course, voted against the Government. Some few inconsiderates wondered if he would do so, but why the matter was ever in doubt it is hard to say. Only the Sunday before Mr. Tarte had been chief speaker at a large Conservative gathering in the Province of Quebec, and then and there had made his peace with his old party and formally rejoined it. Such being the case it would have been odd indeed had he endorsed that part of the Government programme on which the next general election will chiefly be fought. There was but one thing for him to do, and he did it.

As to Mr. Blair's vote, there was, of course, no possibility of doubt, since it was because of this very policy that he left the Cabinet. Since the vote, however, his paper, The St. John Telegraph, has come out with an article, the purport of which is, that the contract having been made and the matter now practically settled, further resistance is useless, and, that, possibly it might be better to desist. This gives rise to a good deal of political gossip and to the question, is Mr. Blair coming back into line?

On Monday Henri Bourassa asked his question, which had been foreshadowed in the press, as to the Governor-General's authority for using the following language at the recent dinner of the Chambers of Commerce in Montreal:

"Now, gentlemen, in looking forward to this great coming discussion, there is one point which must appeal pre-eminently to a gathering such as this—the future relations between the Motherland and her dependencies—the possibility, and, in an imperial sense, the necessity, I say it most strongly, for closer commercial relations in respect to an interchange of trade in preferential conditions between the Old Country and her possessions beyond the seas—a problem surrounded by difficulties, domestic, imperial and foreign, but on the solution of which I firmly believe the future of our empire depends.

"I have already said we have a great problem before us, the solution of which must depend largely on the researches of experts, and on such well thought out opinions as the delegates of such a congress as is assembled here can give to the public.

"I hope possibly that their discussions may not only have tended to suggest a commercial basis upon which the unity of the Empire may rest, but may have impressed upon the public the necessity for some system of common defence to insure its safety from attack.

"No one who has watched the history of the United Kingdom and its possessions for the last few years, can have failed to note the growth of a great imperial idea, the wish for a closer union between the Old Country and her dependencies for sentimental reasons, for the sake of common defence.

"Gentlemen, it is impossible to foretell the issue of the coming struggle, but in my firm belief we stand very near the parting of the ways. Our opportunity is before us; it may never come again. what is to be our choice—a mighty empire, a brilliant constellation of nations, united in common interests, disseminating throughout the world the spirit of free institutions and liberal ideas; proud of a glorious history, and confident in the promises of its future—or the gradual estrangement of that Empire's component parts, and its ultimate disintegration?

"This is not the time to sit down and fold one's hands. It is the time for those who believe in the future of our Empire to speak out."

Of course he received the answer all expected, to wit, that His Excellency expressed only his own personal views. None knew better than the member for Labelle that this was the case, but he asked for the information in order that upon it he might later on in the session found an attack upon His Excellency. While all may not agree with the views expressed by Lord Minto, opinion will be almost unanimous that Mr. Bourassa is once more endeavoring to make a mountain out of a mole-hill. Even if His Excellency did transgress his constitutional privileges, which we venture to dispute, the British Parliament, whose appointee he is, is surely the proper body to deal with the question.

But Lord Minto is not the only one who makes speeches open to criticism. If the Governor-General of Canada and a peer of the realm is subject to rebuke for declaring his faith in the Empire and his views for its general welfare, what of the member for Labelle? Mr. Bourassa has evidently forgotten that excellent saw "Those who live in glass houses should not throw stones." But a few days after Lord Minto's utterance, this man, a member of the Canadian Parliament, stood up on a platform in our great commercial metropolis, and loudly proclaimed that the State of New York alone could overrun Canada in 30 hours. This from one of those people who kept the flag flying in 1776, and who again in 1812-15 repelled American invasion, a handful against a host, this from one of the representatives of the Canadian people! Where the utterance is annoying lies in the fact that it comes from a member of Parliament. We can well imagine the glee of the American anti-British press in quoting these sentences as from a Canadian public man. Over the line they do not know as we know here. In Canada one reading this gentleman's utterances will but shrug his shoulders and say, "Oh, that's only Bourassa," but, in Yankeeland, they will say what a mark Canada must be; behold the statement of a Canadian member of Parliament, who, from his public position, must surely know.

BRITISH COLUMBIA SALMON.

OUR British Columbia correspondent, in a late communication re the salmon situation, advises us as follows: It is practically admitted that the salmon season is over. Many of the canneries have closed down altogether and a few, which are still open, are getting but very few sockeyes. The pack on the Fraser river this year will not total 200,000 cases. In fact, it is still some distance from that total. The effort of the canners to induce the Dominion Department of Marine and Fisheries to declare a close season of two weeks was turned down. It is said now that there are plenty of salmon on the spawning grounds whence the fish hatcheries obtain their spawn. The absence of spawn was the chief consideration urged by the canners. It is rather peculiar that three years ago the canners fought strenuously and successfully to have the then existing close season on the river removed. Now they wish it replaced.

There is a movement on foot which has, of course, originated with the canners and salmon packers on the Puget Sound side of the line, to secure permission from the Dominion Government to allow co-operation between the canners of the United States side and the Fraser river canners to improve the artificial propagation of the salmon.

State Inspector Kershaw, of the State of Washington, was in the city last week to interview the canners, and he expressed his belief that the Fraser river was coming to the same experience as the Columbia river had had, that it was "fished out," and that the only remedy was the early establishment of three or more hatcheries in addition to the two now on the river. Mr. Kershaw said that, as it was a matter of importance to the canners of Puget Sound, no doubt they would ask to be permitted to join in the cost and maintenance of the hatcheries. It may be noted that the Sound fisheries are dependent on the run on the Fraser river, as there are no rivers emptying into Puget Sound which are salmon rivers in any sense of the word. The Fraser river is the attraction which brings the sockeyes into the Gulf, and from thence across the waters of the Sound, contiguous to the international boundary. Here the United States cannerymen have established themselves, and by the use of traps have obtained an unfair advantage over the Canadian canners. The life of the industry, dependent as it is on the run of fish in the river, makes it as important to the Sound canners as to the Fraser river canners to have the run improved by artificial propagation. The suggestion of joint action in bearing the cost is no new proposal, but the former offers were turned down.

AGE OF SCOTCH HERRING.

Said an old importer of herring recently: "The preponderance of herring on the Scotch coast in proportion to all other fish is probably due to the well-established longevity of the species. It has been estimated that a 10-inch fish is at least 25 years old. When the schools go into deep water and return year after year there must be, therefore, a vast body well accustomed to the route of travel and feed."

Grocery Exhibits at the Dominion Exhibition

WHEN this number of "The Grocer" reaches the reader the great Dominion Exhibition will be drawing to a close, having outclassed anything heretofore attempted and having established a right to the title Dominion by its magnificently national character. Manitoba, Ontario, Quebec, are the words inscribed over the entrance of the great new Manufacturers' Building, and to those who have not kept in touch with the manufacturing development of Canada, these latter years the exhibits therein must have been a revelation, as to all true Canadians they were a source of pride. As mentioned in last week's "Grocer," the happy idea of the Manufacturers' Association in making a liberal distribution of those handsome "Made in Canada" cards, was the one thing necessary to bring home to ourselves and to our visitors from foreign lands that this was our own exhibition of our own natural products, our own manufactures, and our own skill and enterprise. For indeed, visitors from abroad were legion. The distinguished delegates to the Chambers of Commerce convention, even after their "all Canada" trip, could find something new to admire in what Canada had to show in the "Dream City" out King street, and Lord Lyveden's party of parliamentarians confessedly bent on learning more of this "Granary of the Empire" to be, were afforded opportunities for gratifying this desire at the Exhibition which were unexcelled.

The impression made by the Exhibition upon these distinguished and influential brethren of ours from across the sea, cannot fail to redound greatly to the fame and credit of the "Land of the Maple," one time known as "Our Lady of the Snows," and soon, perhaps, and more justly, as the "Land of No. 1 Hard Wheat." Nor were visitors from the Motherland our only guests. Toronto thronged with Americans.

"I had no idea of coming to Toronto when I left Atlantic City," said an American gentleman to "The Grocer," on a car going out to the Exhibition grounds, "but I met a friend at the Falls who had just been here, and he gave such glowing accounts of your Exhibition, that I couldn't pass it by."

This was but one case out of hundreds. The boats from Niagara brought over crowds who had perhaps first heard of the Exhibition on reaching the Falls.

An exhibition is a most potent instrument for education, not only in the matter of diffusing information and advertising certain industries, but, more particularly, in arousing an intelligent interest in the more remote resources of the country.

Exhibit of The Christie, Brown Co., Limited.

NEW ONTARIO.

A striking instance of this was to be found almost on entering the grounds in the building jointly devoted to the exhibits of the British West-Indies and of New Ontario. The former occupying the centre, were alluded to last week, the latter were arranged around the outside of the hall and were of very particular interest, in view of the actual and prospective railway developments in that locality. The exhibit comprised a fine collection of cereals, roots and vegetables grown in the Temiscaming district along with samples of 158 native grasses found there. A huge placard bearing the words, "New Ontario, 16,000,000 acre clay belt," beside a map, on which this new agricultural district appears almost as large as the older portion of Ontario, was particularly effective.

VEGETABLE EXHIBIT

In the Agricultural Hall proper the collection of grains, roots and vegetables were of a uniformly high quality and interesting equally to the amateur gardener and the bon vivant. Some particularly fine samples of cabbage, onions and potatoes were noticeable, as well as some mangels of prodigious size.

THE DAIRY BUILDING.

The fine new addition to the Dairy Building with its commodious amphitheatre was daily filled by interested crowds who listened to experts lecture on points in the production of butter and cheese and to witness the butter and cheese-making contests, which were every afternoon carried on. The scrupulous cleanliness, which is a feature of what is practically a model school in dairying, and the novelty of this glimpse into the mysteries of the dairy, made this department of scarcely less interest to the city people than to the dwellers in the rural parts.

PACKING FRUIT FOR EXPORT.

In a wing of the Implement Building, immediately behind the press headquarters, was located a small but most important feature of the Exhibition. Mr. A. McNeill, senior inspector of the Fruit Division of the Department of Agriculture of Ottawa, was entrusted with the task of demonstrating to fruit growers the proper method of packing fruit for export. Model cases and methods of packing were shown both for apples and pears, and the actual process demonstrated twice a day. For pears the half case was recommended, holding 20 pounds net fruit. The fruit is wrapped in paper at a total cost for box and packing of 15c. This size of package is most suitable for pears and brought last year 5s. to 6s. per package, the same, indeed, as for the box of double the size. An egg-tray type of box, made by The Diamond Paper Co., London, was also shown. For apples a 40-lb. box about 9x12x18 inches was shown, with an alternative, the B.C. box, of 45 pounds, 10x12x20 inches preferred. The packing of apples in barrels was likewise illustrated and the requirements of the Fruit Marks Act explained. Great interest was taken in this demonstration.

Tne national scope of the Exhibition this year has appeared to "The Grocer" to demand a special recognition, and the method of treating the matter is unprecedented in Canadian journalism. That our many readers who have been unable to attend the Exhibition may have a clear and unbiased account of what was to be seen at the Exhibition in the grocery section, "The Grocer" has undertaken to give a reproduction of every exhibit which appeared worthy thereof together with a short description of the exhibit itself, with what comment and information it was deemed would be of interest to the trade. The novelty of this treatment of the Exhibition lies in the fact that the publication of cut and description is entirely gratuitious and the expression of the candid opinion and best judgment of our representatives, who have made careful study of this section. Against the orthodox paid-by-the-line newspaper write-up "The Grocer" has ever steadfastly set its face, and the criticisms which follow can be depended upon as bona-fide and discriminating.

The illustrations and the accompanying criticisms it is hoped will be of real service to our readers who are anxious to keep abreast with all that is taking place in Grocerydom.

BLUE RIBBON TEA.

gracefully draped with bunting, the latter of the colors mentioned. The seven young lady attendants who were kept constantly busy demonstrating also made use of the firm's colors in their costumes. Miss Hemphill, the firm's expert, was in charge of the brewing, and explained to inquiring housewives the secret of extracting the delicious liquor which was being served over the counter. Only the 40c. black was being demonstrated, but attention was also called to the other blends of black, green and mixed at 25, 30, 40, 50 and 60c. The Blue Ribbon Tea is put up at the headquarters at Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver. The exhibit was in charge of Mr. G. F. Campbell.

COWAN CO., LTD., TORONTO.

A fine corner stand laid out with a view to immediate business, is the first impression the visitor gets on approaching the Cowan Co.'s exhibit. A display counter occupies the two sides and here can be seen and merits demonstrated of the many products of the company. "Pure Cream Bars," "Chocolate Wafers," "Swiss Milk Chocolate," "Crystalized Ginger," and "Chocolate Ginger" are in evidence, the latter of which we were informed by Mr. C. Dimmock, who was in charge of the stand, this company were the first to introduce to the Canadian market. "Prepared Icing" in various colors, and "Pure and Sweet Coatings" for confectioners. The stand occupies one of the most prominent positions in the Exhibition and is surrounded by an artistic sign of many curves in gold, silver and green, presenting a pretty and pleasing effect, while behind the counter are lady assistants serving out free cups of the company's "Perfection" Cocoa. Beside the manufactures mentioned the company's business comprises coffee roasting, sugar grinding and cocoa making.

TOBLER'S CHOCOLATE.

At a corner stand on the centre aisle is brought to view an impressive show of finely got up chocolates in almost every form and description, bearing the name of "Tobler's Chocolates." The representative in charge was busily engaged with the numerous customers, yet nevertheless found time to explain the particular claims of this product. "Made in Switzerland, with pure, rich cream, not only a delicate sweetmeat, but positively a nutritious food" was his quick response to our inquiries. Messrs. Browne & Wells, of Toronto, are the Canadian agents and have had charge of the arrangement of what is certainly an artistic and attractive exhibit. "Tobler's Cocoa" in attractive tins has also a prominent and important place at this exhibit.

MacLAREN'S IMPERIAL CHEESE.

Two neatly costumed young ladies engaged handing out to an appreciative public morsels of potted cheese on the regulation cracker were a noticeable sight at the southern entrance of the Manufacturers' Building. The booth was decorated in white and gold, and the over-towering pile of three heroic white opal jars of Imperial proclaimed it to be MacLaren's. Of course the Imperial brand in the four sizes was made most prominent and the point well made that 100 points perfection had been secured at Chicago and gold medals at Paris, the Pan-American, and, last year, at Toronto. A Roquefort cheese put up in same form and size as Imperial was also introduced to many for the first time, and the economy of its use when the shrinkage of the ordinary Roquefort is considered, was pointed out to interested auditors. The trade in this cheese has been steadily increasing since it was put on the market, and, in addition to the home business, a large export trade is done with European, Asiatic and African countries. WALTER BAKER'S COCOAS.

The Walter Baker Co., Limited, had a most effective display of their cocoa and chocolate. Fortunate in securing commodious quarters, a liberal use of burlap, dyed the color of chocolate, gave their booth a most artistic appearance. As an educational exhibit a series of jars showed cocoa pods, cocoa beans, cocoa nibs, cocoa butter, and the finished product as cocoa or chocolate. The young lady attendants were quaintly arrayed to represent La Belle Chocolatiere, the trademark, which appears on all the Walter Baker goods, and sold over the counter steaming cups of delicious cocoa, or Breakfast cocoa. Premium chocolate and the various brands of sweet chocolates put up by the company. They considered this method more satisfactory than the indiscriminate giving of free samples. They did give, however, a very neatly steaming cups of delicious cocoa, and chocolate. The Canadian office of this company, whose headquarters were established in Dorchester, Mass., in 1780, is Montreal.

CROWN MFG. CO., LTD., TORONTO.

An exhibit of an impressive, business-like character, and yet by no means lacking in artistic effect, its blue and yellow draped roof giving a strangely relieving effect against the internally arranged show room with its well-filled shelves and show cases, giving the appearance of a substantial order room. Here were in evidence a goodly array of the firm's officials busily engaged interviewing the much interested public. A great feature of this exhibit is the unfermented wine made by the company and for which they give a positive guarantee that it will keep any length of time in good condition, even after the cork is removed. It can be had in numerous flavors, all of which are made from genuine fruit. The products of this company comprise all kinds of boiled goods, extracts, flavorings and general confectionery.

E. G. WEST.

In the western end of the Manufacturers' Building was located the booth of Mr. E. G. West, exhibiting the lines of Leeming, Miles & Co., of Montreal, for whom he is the Toronto selling agent. Royal Baking Powder was the most striking line in this exhibit, which included a large range of specialties.

J. LABATT'S.

The immense pillar with the keg crowning it which stands for the exhibit of J. Labatt, London, was sure to attract the attention of everyone. It rose to a great height and consequently Labatt's name on the keg at the top was visible for some distance. For a short way up the pillar there were shelves in the circular grooves which extend from top to bottom of the pillar and on these were displayed the different products of the Labatt Brewery. The pillar stood on a pedestal which was also effectively utilized. Protruding from the sides of the pedestal were imitation kegs with "J. Labatt, London, Canada, Established 1832," across the heads in gilt letters. J. Labatt's products are well known, not only in Canada, but in other countries as well. The export trade is being developed by the company to a great extent during recent years, and one of the chief aims at the present time is to work up as large a foreign trade as possible.

CARLING BREWING CO.

The exhibit of The Carling Brewing Co., London, Ont., occupies a prominent position in the Manufacturers' Building. The exhibit is pyramid shaped, and the eye travels up the immense structure until it lights on the big bottle which caps the pyramid. The exhibit is certainly imposing. The pyramid stands on a base from which protrude on each side imitation kegs and barrels, with "Carling" in gilt letters across the heads. This brewery gives great care and attention to see that nothing of a deleterious character enters their product. For some time the Carling Brewing Company have been devoting special efforts to the development of their foreign trade, with the result that it has increased considerably and they have now a very large and successful export trade.

DOMINION BREWERY.

The exhibit of the Dominion Brewery in the Manufacturers' Building readily attracts the attention of passers-by. The display is neat and handsome, and the eye of the observer admires. As may be seen from the accompanying cut, the exhibit consists of a display of their brands of goods, consisting chiefly of R. Muat, in charge of H. J. Heinz Co.'s Exhibit.

White Label ale, under a canopy supported at each of the four corners by a triple set of pillars. In a glass case are exhibited four handsome medals, one given by the World's Columbian Exhibition and the other three by the North, Central and South American Exposition at New Orleans, in 1885-86. On the top of the canopy on each side is the national emblem of Canada and The Dominion Brewery Co.'s trade mark, the beaver, in gilt finish.

HEINZ PICKLES.

Immediately on entering the north entrance of the Manufacturers Building the visitor was met by a handsome four-sided pyramid composed of the familiar "57 varieties," each tier having for its corner piece a fine cut-glass vase of Heinz Pickles, the whole being surmounted with a large model of the Heinz trade mark studded with 108 electric lamps each of 8 candle power illumination. Here behind an inviting and delicately arranged counter we met Mr. R. Muat, actively superintending the several lady assistants, who were kept continually busy making and distributing to an enquiring crowd samples of tomato soup, steaming hot, and dainty samples of Heinz Pickles, Chutneys, etc. From him we were able to gather a few interesting facts regarding the progress of this industry. The main plant used in the manufacture of the 57 varieties now covers a total area of 15 acres, while it takes the whole product of 20,000 acres to supply the demand for preserv-men-of-the-road to protect their interests throughout the globe. They have also a large salting house at Burlington, Ont. Attached to one of the columns, of which there are three, was a fine cabinet containing some 30 pictures illustrating the various departments of the factory. Messrs. H. P. Eckardt & Co., of Front street, Toronto, and Messrs. Hudon, Hebert & Co., of Montreal, are the houses to whom the Canadian interests of Heinz Pickles are committed. Boldly facing the visitor, in the centre, is a notice, that the whole of this exhibit has been purchased by Mr. R. Barron, 728 Yonge street, Toronto.

EDWARDSBURG STARCH CO.

A model starch department for a live grocery was the form taken by The Edwardsburg Starch Co.'s exhibit. In their standard Silver Gloss brand a new six-lb. horseshoe tin was shown as a show package for shelf purposes. A line to which they are calling special attention was "Benson's Enamel," a cold water starch, which admits of ironing 10 minutes after using and is said to be very serviceable for dark goods. Benson's Prepared Corn completed the central trio shown, although in a number of fine glass jars corn starch for culinary and for laundry purposes, potato flour and thin boiling wheat starch were of unique interest. In connection with the various starches a special feature was made of the company's Crown Brand Corn Syrup, put up in 20, 10, 5 and 2-lb. tins.

The works of The Edwardsburg Starch Co. are situated at Cardinal, Ont., with offices at Montreal and Toronto.

McGREGOR-HARRIS CO., TORONTO.

The McGregor-Harris exhibit is at once attractive and interesting. Here we met Mr. McGregor with his several assistants busy dispensing their several products at a rate which gave scarce time to obtain the information required. This exhibit has a corner situation and is arranged in a business-like way and presents a striking appearance. Bold at the immediate corner is a pyramid of red and black plaid boxes of butterscotch, while a fine show case filled with an even finer display of thocolate, forms the counter piece. This company, as previously stated in this journal, is of comparatively recent formation and is the amalgamation of two businesses formerly carried on separately. They are running a full line of chocolates, butterscotch, hard-boiled goods and "Quaker" marmalade.

McINTOSH & SON, TORONTO.

Entering the Manufacturers Building from the south, immediately at the corner of the cereal aisle, the visitor is confronted with an attractive display of the McIntosh Cereals laid out in an impressive, business-like manner, yet withall draped in an artistic and pleasing way with a crowning piece made to represent an enormous packet of "Swiss Food," the leading brand for which the firm are known. A good feature of this show was noted in an array of fine glass jars filled with samples of the firm's several products, showing the grade and quality for inspection by the interested visitor. Here busily superintending the distribution of free sample packets was to be met the firm's representative, Mr. Howitt, explaining to all enquirers that "Swiss Food" was made of selected wheat, specially prepared, could be easily and quickly prepared for use and was particularly easy of assimilation. Prominent at this exhibit could be seen a goodly array of the firm's products, "Farina," "Brose Meal," "Hominy Grits," "Aunt Sally's Pancake Flour," the latter a specialty of comparatively recent date.

THE ONLY TOBACCO EXHIBIT.

T. J. Horrocks, the distributor for Toronto and Eastern Ontario for The McAlpin Consumers' Tobacco Co., Limited, is exhibiting this company's leading lines in an attractively gotten-up display in the Manufacturers' Building. In chewing tobacco "Beaver," "British Navy," "King's Navy" and "U & I" are much in prominence, while "Tonka," "Solid Comfort" and "Pinchin's Mixture" gladden the eyes of the smokers. The growing plant, the dried leaf, fine cut, plugs, packages, and, in fact, tobacco in all its forms, are to be found on view. In the rear of the stand are open boxes carefully arranged from floor to roof, making a strikingly unique wall. The roof is arranged in canopy style of yellow and white bunting, surmounted by a shield bearing the Canadian beaver, just as a last reminder that "Beaver" chewing is always on top. This company operates two factories, one using the straight Canadian leaf, while the other turns out the combination.

A Display of Tobacco That Attracted Much Attention.

Exhibit of The Horton-Cato Mfg. Co.

ROYAL SALAD DRESSING.

An inviting exhibit was that of Royal Salad Dressing, the product of The Horton-Cato Mfg. Co., of Detroit and Windsor. The goods, which are handsomely put up, lent themselves well for display purposes, and being the one article on exhibition in the booth, made a most effective background. At the prettily decorated counter in front, the merits of the dressing were convincingly demonstrated by being served in dainty quantities on meat, vegetables, fruit and other salads, at the same time the point was made by the wide-awake attendants that the ingredients of Royal Salad Dressing are so well blended that they never separate or spoil. No package samples were given away, but orders were taken for delivery through the purchasers' grocer.

INGERSOLL PACKING CO.

This company's exhibit in the centre of one of the side aisles is one of particularly pleasing appearance and a good illustration of artistic effect. Inside is a fine display of Millar's Paragon Cheese arranged as it should be in an ordinary store and which at once impresses the visitor. The decorations are in cream and gold with elaborately colored Eastern curtains, the cream columns supporting a draped canopy roof of rich colors. The company still adhere to the name of the originator of this particular brand of cheese. The exhibit is under charge of Millman & Sons, who are the Toronto agents of the company and from Mr. Millman we learned that this particular brand of cheese has been made in Ingersoll for nearly a quarter of a century and that Ingersoll is known as one of the finest cheese producing districts of Canada.

NATIONAL CASH REGISTER.

One is struck with the attractiveness of the exhibit of The National Cash Register Co., the Canadian office and plant of which is in Toronto. They have their machines displayed on pedestals, square in shape, and on each side of which are handsome pictures of different parts of their plant in Dayton, O. One can take a trip through the factory by simply going from one picture to another. The originality of the ideas employed in the operating and management of their plant are very interesting. One striking feature of the management is the very liberal treatment of employes. The life-like figure of the lady demonstrating mechanically the system employed in the cash registers attracts considerable attention. Of course the Canadian plant of this company is only starting, and as yet all their kinds of registers are not manufactured here, but the company propose to build up a Canadian industry which will be a fitting representation of the progress which is now manifest all over the Dominion. A few years ago the entire Canadian business of the company was managed by one man. To-day they have twenty representatives in Canada.

Exhibit of Millar's Paragon Cheese.

ST. LAWRENCE STARCH.

An enclosed octagonal glass booth, with a base and roof in white and gold, housed the display of The St. Lawrence Starch Co., Limited, of Port Credit, Ont., while a stout, brass railing kept back the crowd. Within were very prettily displayed the various brands put up by the company. The foreground, filled with lump starch, made an appropriate setting for the package goods, which rose in pyramids behind. Among these were noted Ivory Gloss, in six and one-pound packages, No. 1 White, and Ivorine, a cold-water starch, for collars and cuffs. In edible starches St. Lawrence and Durham were the brands shown.

GODDARD & GRIMM.

Under the grandstand, cheek by jowl with the royal presents, was the maple products exhibit of Goddard & Grimm, of South Stukely, P.Q. The central and a most effective feature of this exhibit was a miniature maple forest on a hill side encrusted with snow in which the various processes in the manufacture of maple syrup and sugar were shown. On one side, placarded "The Old Way" the sap was being boiled in the round iron kettle swung over the fire in the open; along side of this "the new way" was illustrated by a complete representation in little of the champion evaporator made by The Grimm Evaporator Co., of which there are said to be 60,000 in use in Canada and the United States. Enclosed in a neat little building it was a striking contrast to the crude pioneer method. Around this scene from nature were built delicious looking pyramids of sugar bricks and maple syrup in glass and tin. A rushing trade in sugar was done over the counter. Goddard & Grimm tap 5,000 trees and lay particular stress on the purity of their product. They are reaching out for an Ontario connection.

THE COMPUTING SCALE CO.

In the Manufacturers' Building the exhibit of The Computing Scale Co., of Canada, Ltd., is to be seen. The display is a good one, the central feature being one of their handsome weightless scales. These scales are a novelty, having been on the market for only a year. Having seen these scales one is impressed with their handiness. They are also showing this year another new kind of computing scales. The chief plant of the company is at Dayton, O., and the scales turned out from that plant have won silver medals at the Western Fair, London, in 1901, and at Toronto Exposition in 1902. The Toronto plant was only started a few months ago, and as yet only two kinds of scales are manufactured there; but the company are paying particular attention to their Canadian business, and the plant will be steadily increased until they have capacity for turning out all kinds.

CHRISTIE, BROWN & CO.

Christie's, in great gold letters stood out prominently over the magnificent square of fancy biscuits which formed the exhibit of The Christie, Brown Co., of Toronto. There were said to be 520 kinds in the well-filled glass-faced boxes which were built into the four sides of this booth, while on the top of the wide ledge formed by the handsome white base were displayed the many fancy package biscuits, tinned puddings, cakes, and the like, which are kept in stock. Softly-tinted electric lights were festooned around the cornice of the structure, and a great mirror, filling the only break in the four walls of biscuits, was second only to the display itself in its power to attract the attention of the ladies.

EBY, BLAIN CO., LIMITED.

A huge gilt Kin-Hee coffee pot surmounted and overtowered the booth in which The Eby, Blain Co., Limited, of Toronto, demonstrated at once the merits of this coffee pot and their Gold Medal Coffee. The booth was well located near the main entrance, and four neatly attired young women were kept busy demonstrating. Coffee made in a minute and without boiling was the text from which they expounded their coffee gospel, and its truth was substantiated while the crowd watched the operation and partook of a steaming cup to test its virtues. Kolona Tea was also shown but not demonstrated.

CITY DAIRY CONDENSED MILK.

An attractive little corner near the centre of the Manufacturers' Building was the booth in which The City Dairy Co. were demonstrating the merits of a new product placed on the market only last May, "Dominion Brand Condensed Milk" of The Canadian Condensed Milk Co., for whom The City Dairy Co. are selling agents. Unskimmed milk with the addition of a little cane sugar is all that is contained in the product which is guaranteed to keep in any climate. The milk is put up in three convenient sizes and is on sale through the wholesale trade. Mr. H. Pannell, superintendent of the condensed milk department, was in charge of the booth and demonstration.

E. W. GILLETT CO., LIMITED.

The quarters of E. W. Gillett Co., Limited, Toronto and Hamilton, were commodious to begin with, and the mistake of crowding was carefully avoided. A rail guarded the two aisle sides, the centre was left clear and the display made along the two inner sides. In this Magic Baking Powder was made the leader, supplemented with other of the company's goods, Gillett's Perfumed Lye, Magic Baking Soda, Gillett's Cream of Tartar, Royal Yeast Cakes, etc., while the figure of a lad in Highland costume stood guard over all. Red and gold drapings on a base of white with a liberal supply of palms were used in the decorations. Samples of the firm's goods, leading with Magic Baking Powder, were distributed, while the fact was emphasized to the public that every package of goods bearing Gillett's name is guaranteed by the firm. Mr. J. F. Holden, western representative, was in charge.

ST. CHARLES CONDENSED MILK.

One of the most attractive exhibits in the new Dairy Building is shown by The St. Charles Condensing Co., whose Canadian factory is in Ingersoll, where an army of employes is kept busy the year around preparing St. Charles Cream Silver Cow Milk and Purity Milk for markets in all parts of the world. Great taste has been shown in the arrangement of the display, the pyramids of cans bearing white, gold and white, and silver labels against a background of pure white, while a young lady in white gracefully demonstrates the process in the various uses of the cream. The company personally guarantees every can of their cream to be thoroughly sterilized, absolutely pure, and to keep in any climate, three very important points in an article of this kind. The Canadian product is all prepared in Oxford County, Ontario, one of the finest milk producing sections of the Dominion.

ARMOUR'S EXTRACT.

Near the centre of the northern aisle of the Manufacturers' Building, well situated to catch the eye of visitors coming in by the main entrance, was built a daintily designed booth in white and gold for Armour's, the Chicago packing house. The booth contained a most interesting exhibit of Armour's Extract of Beef, Asparox, a dainty prepared from asparagus and tomato bouillon, all put up in bottles of various styles and sizes. On the counter the public were served with tiny cups of hot beef tea made from the Extract, while it was explained that the Extract could be used for making soups, gravies, meat sauces, and in all kinds of cooking where stock is required. The Asparox and Tomato Bouillon were also demonstrated, but the main stress was placed on the Extract of Beef. Orders were taken for delivery through the local grocer.

LEVER BROS. SOAPS.

A noticeable exhibit in the Manufacturers' Building is Lever Bros.' display of soaps, including "Sunlight," "Lifebuoy," Lever Bros.' Exhibit of Sunlight Soap.

"Monkey Brand," "Y Z" and their "Crest" floating soap, all now well known to the public and the trade throughout the country. This showing is particularly interesting, it being their original display, show cases and all, just as it appeared in the famous Glasgow Exhibition the year before last. Sunlight Soap has been sold in Canada for over 12 years, and was imported from England until the trade here and the demand on the English factory necessitated the opening of large Canadian works. The site here, which is located on the river Don, Toronto, covers 23 acres of land. The buildings are worthy of Canada, being described by insurance authorities as "the finest soap factory on the American continent." Over $300,000 is represented in the Canadian buildings and plant.

LIBBY, McNEILL & LIBBY.

Libby, McNeill & Libby, of Chicago, who manufacture 71 varieties of good things to eat in the way of tinned meats, have certainly a dainty exhibit of their products in the Manufacturers' Building, where they are demonstrating the good qualities and giving generous samples of many of the leading lines to the passers by. The stand is prettily decorated with small pyramids of cans of meats interspersed with palms and ferns against a background of green burlap, while the roof is of white bunting going up to a point in the centre, where a cluster of electric lights is arranged to flood their radiance over the exhibit. The factory of this enterprising firm covers over six acres, giving a floor area of some 50 acres, where 3,000 people are employed regularly, making an annual pay-roll of about $1,500,000. Their output monthly is roughly figured at about 10,000,000 cans.

TILLSON'S OATS.

A certain distinction is to be noted about the display of Tillson's Oats. The sturdy old Scotchman, the central figure in all Tillson advertising, was prominent in the foreground, while the Mackenzie and Royal Stuart plaids were effectively utilized for drapery, and, together with oats in the sheaf, for further decoration. But the accessories were properly subordinated to the imposing pile of package oats which filled the rear of the booth.

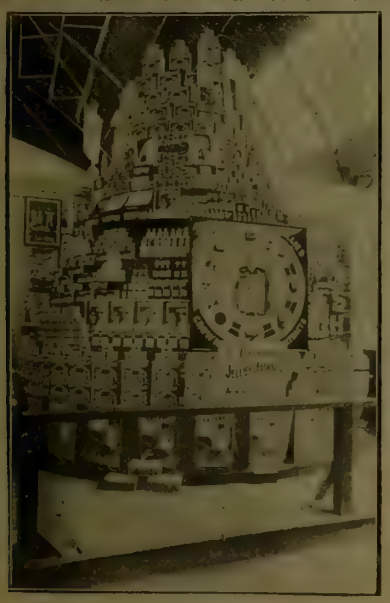

Exhibit of Greig & Co.

In the foreground two attractively attired attendants served the public with tiny tastes of porridge, made from Tillson's Oats, and handed out sample packages, explaining that the particularly rich flavor was due to the fact that Tillson's Oats were pan-dried over fire and not steamed, thereby preserving the full flavor of the oat. A food, not a fad, was the point made by the exhibit. The plant of The Tillson Milling Co. is situated at the town of Tillsonburg, Western Ontario, than which no country produces better oats.

CANADA CREAM CHEESE.

As may be gathered from a glance at the cut there was an attractive simplicity about the pyramid of tin-foiled packages which constituted the background in front of which the public were being invited to sample Canada Cream Cheese. This is a brand put up by The MacLaren Imperial Cheese Company in tin foil. It is of convenient size and is meant to provide a good quality cheese at a price to meet public demand.

THE GREIG MFG. CO., LTD., OF MONTREAL.

Just a turn south from the centre aisle of the Manufacturers Building brings the visitor to a fine pyramid display destined to cheer the hearts of all industrious housewives, for here was shown, arranged with artistic effect, articles in concentrated form ready for immediate use. Here too was seen the manager of the company, Mr. J. R. Greig, busy with his assistants distributing samples to the many interested enquirers and explaining the virtues of the many products for which the firm are sole agents, prominent among which were "Kkovah Jellies," "Kkovah Custard Powders," "Kkovah Blanc Mange Powder," "Sy-Muz Linen Gloss," "Barringer's Mustard," and a unique line of advertisement matches, all of which are comparatively new to the Canadian market. Later on in the Women's Hall we were enabled to sample the firm's products, where assistants were busily engaged demonstrating the ease with which concentrated products could be converted into easily digestible and attractive dishes. This firm are also agents for John Buchanan Ltd., of Glasgow, and M. A. Craven, of York, both of whom are important manufacturing confectioners.

LUMSDEN BROS.

Of course "Social" was the feature of this Toronto firm's display, and that feature was well brought out in a handsome display. The exhibit was made up, for a large part, of Social Tea and Social Coffee. Jersey Cream Yeast Cakes and Jersey Cream Baking Powder constituted the rest of the display of goods. The can-opy crowning the display was very prettily draped. The corner position of the exhibit brought it into prominence and "Social" was well advertised. As can be seen from the accompanying illustration the exhibit presents a very attractive appearance.

BOW PARK CREAM CHEESE.

Shuttleworth & Harris' exhibit of Bow Park Cream Cheese was prepared by a specialist, Dudley H. Bissell, from New York, and received much favorable criticism from all sides. The color scheme was in blue and white. The pillars and uprights, composed of Bow Park cheese cans studded with frosted incandescent electric light bulbs, gave a soft creamy appearance to the whole exhibit. "Bow Park" Cream Cheese is done up in tin foil and then incased in light tin, a form of package on which the makers lay much stress. Shuttleworth & Harris stand behind every package with a guarantee that the cheese contains no adulterations and is strictly pure.

THE SMILE THAT WON'T COME OFF.

Many were the smiles to meet with coming away from The American Cereal Co.'s exhibit, where thousands were served every day with generous samples of "the work food;" Quaker Oats. The stand itself was most prettily decorated, the interior being gotten up after the idea of a New England kitchen. The exterior was of white enamelled wood work with dark green burlap panels. The name "Quaker Oats" was a decided novelty, being composed of oat heads, while on top of the whole display were three of the now familiar Quaker figures surrounded by sheaves of oats. The story of Quaker Oats from the field to the breakfast table is well worth following. First, only the best grown and most nutritious oats are used; they are carefully steamed, cleaned and separated by special machinery, then the pan roasting begins, where the patient Quaker pan roasting brings out the nut oil of the oats and toasts it to that pure rich oat flavor, then hot and fragrant from the rolls it goes straight into the package, shut tight and hermetically sealed; then no time is lost—it is the packages into the cases, cases into the cars, and the cars away the same day for all parts of the country. This means freshly prepared oats for all.

WILSON'S COMPUTING SCALES.

C. Wilson & Son, Toronto, have their exhibit of scales in the Machinery Building. The Wilson scales have been before the Canadian merchants for nearly half a century, and they have been awarded medals at the World's Fair, Chicago, at the Victorian Exposition, and also many first prizes at colonial fairs and at Paris. One of the chief features of their exhibit is their improved dairy scale. It is a scale of five beams and its chief value is the ease with which different quantities of milk can be weighed on it by means of these beams. First the can is put on and its weight found on the lowest beam. A quantity of milk is then brought and poured into the can and its weight ascertained on the next beam. In this way quantity after quantity may be weighed in the same can until the beams are exhausted. Another specialty is their "King Edward," a 2,000 pound platform scale. The beautiful finish of Wilson's scales is noticeable in the exhibit. The bearings are made of full jeweled agate and diamond steel.

THE HALLWOOD CASH REGISTER.

Around the exhibit of The Hallwood Cash Register Co., of Canada, there is ever to be seen a crowd of interested listeners to the interesting demonstration of the system of the cash registers. A very useful accompaniment of their cash register is what is called the Hallwood Short Credit System, which is a system of keeping a strict account of one's business and which works in direct connection with the cash register. It does away with elaborate bookkeeping systems, and with very little work after each day's business all accounts can be posted up to the day; and so the condition of all accounts is always before the merchant and he can find in a minute what any customer owes him. The Canadian company is a branch

Windsor Salt.

You buy the best butter, why not the best Salt? Do you forget that it is the little things that count? A woman doesn't tell all she knows. Perhaps she has been trading at some other store just because she can't buy Windsor Salt of you. She doesn't say this to you, but there are a good many chances that she tells her friends.

Windsor Salt is pure, white, dry, crystalline—it is nothing but Salt. There is no dirt, no impurities in it. It is the highest quality there is or can be. Think it over—perhaps the woman who is trading elsewhere will trade with you if you sell Windsor Salt.

THE Ingersoll

American Watches.

RETAIL PRICES, $1.25 to $2.50

ARGUMENT.

We now offer a practical time piece for the Grocery Trade of Canada, and base our statement upon the following:

First—It is absolutely guaranteed to keep accurate time.

Second—It stands rough usage and does not get out of order easily, making it the only watch for dealers outside of the jewelery trade to handle, and also making it a practical one for sportsmen, boys and all men who give a watch hard usage.

Third—Its low price and high quality insure a tremendous sale, which we further augment by furnishing many handsome advertising devices for your store.

Fourth—Last but not least, these watches offer a handsome profit. Price cutters are not supplied.

Sold by several leading Grocery Jobbers of Canada. We will tell you who they are upon request.

Trial Offer—To any Grocery Dealer who will write to us upon his business letter head and inclose 75c. we will send a sample watch (duty not paid) and our catalogue, so that he can test its accuracy and durability.

As far as possible only Canadian labor is employed, but for the finer work instructors have been sent over from the Columbus plant to supervise the work.

PURE GOLD EXHIBIT.

Near the east end of the Manufacturers' Building will be found the exhibit of The Pure Gold Mfg. Co. of Toronto, which is certainly strikingly handsome, the counters, railings, showcases and overhead woodwork being of solid cherry, with a large showcase in the rear across the entire width of their space filled with flavoring extracts in over 25 different flavors. The Pure Gold Co. this year are showing another new product which is rapidly growing popular. It is a salad dressing powder, retailing at 10c. a box, which makes a quart of the most delicious dressing. Orange marmalade, jams, jellies, quick tapioca, quick chocolate pudding, and the old reliable Pure Gold jelly powders are also receiving the full share of attention both by the demonstrators and the thousands who sample them daily.

THE FRUIT EXHIBIT.

The Fruit Building from its opening had a steady stream of people pouring in and out. Everyone enjoyed the sight of the attractive displays of the different kinds of Canadian fruit. The apple, which might be called Canada's national fruit, was given all due prominence, and the display certainly did credit to Canadian growers. Pears, peaches, plums and grapes were there in profusion. The bunches of luscious grapes certainly made one's mouth water, to use a common but apt phrase. The large rosy peaches were not behind in having the same effect. The exhibit of the Niagara Fruit Growers' Association won the admiration of all.

Exhibit of Libby, McNeill & Libby.

INTERCOLONIAL EXHIBIT.

A feature in the Transportation Building which attracted more than ordinary interest was the remarkably fine exhibit made by the Intercolonial Railway. A large section in the northern wing was filled with splendidly finished large-sized photographs, which were arranged in order to illustrate the route of the pride of the Intercolonial—the Maritime Express—from Montreal to Moncton and from there branching to St. John on one hand and Halifax and Sydney, C.B., on the other. Tadousac, Bic, Perce Rock, the Metapedia Valley, Antigonish, and the Bras d'Or Lakes were among the views most admired, although it is hard to particularize. The sporting blood of the visitor is fired by the skins of four great 40-lb. salmon mounted on polished wooden plaques to illustrate the four crucial moments in the sport. Mr. Lindsay and Mr. Barton, the representatives of the Intercolonial, were in charge.

GRAND TRUNK SECTION.

The Grand Trunk Art Gallery, as it might be called, ran along the western end of the Transportation Building and comprised a series of large photographs of the Muskoka Lakes, Georgian Bay, Kawartha Lakes, and the Portland district, also mounted specimens of the finny beauties to be taken in these regions. A 'longe of 59 pounds was one of the centres of interest.

THE STRONG CHEESE MARKET.

THE strength which the cheese market has been developing of late, irrespective of any apparently sufficient warrant from the British side, is an eloquent commentary on the position of Canada with reference to this great dairy product. Whether bulling of the market is purely speculative, as has been suggested, or is in pursuance of inside advices obtained by the large operators who are most active, will transpire in due time, but in the meanwhile the farmers are reaping the benefit, and in the face of the largest make on record, the prices are being made here and the British market anticipated. The quality this year, with few exceptions, has been of a very high standard, and with the Fall in sight perhaps those operating on the bull side of the market are not after all too optimistic. To quote one provision man, "We are making the finest cheese in the world and they must have it," And indeed the magnificent exhibit of cheese in the Dairy Building at the Dominion Exhibition goes far to justify this optimism and explain the gratifying growth in the demand for our cheese. Nothing in the economic sphere ever undertaken by our Government has been more productive of beneficial results, not only to the agricultural interests, but to the country at large, than the assistance and instruction given to the dairy industry and to that part of it in particular which has to do with the making of cheese. It may not be far distant when our butter shall occupy as commanding a place in the British market as is now conceded to our cheese.

FALSE FREIGHT ENTRIES.

THE new Railway Bill before the House at Ottawa strikes at a point in transportation affairs that will, it is to be hoped, prevent the lowering of classification adopted by a number of shippers to the detriment of houses adhering strictly to legitimate classification. It is a fact that many houses shipping particularly to the Northwest and British Columbia have for years forwarded goods at lower classification than the Railway Freight Association had adopted, this action placing a handicap upon such houses as honestly marked and shipped goods. It is but recently that an old established grocery house in the West, whose reputation is one of the best, received an order for a carload of fourth and fifth-class goods, the major portion being fifth-class. The buyer's instructions were to ship all at fifth-class rate, and as it was the first order the house had received and the account a desirable one, they were rather in a quandary what to do. They knew that classifications were being lowered systematically by regular shippers, and we presume their customer did not suffer, as the goods went forward all right. The house in question did not like to adopt this measure, but competition forced them to fall into line.

The new clause in the Railway Bill imposing a heavy penalty, and the authority given to railway companies to collect the regular tariff and 50 per cent. more, as well as imposing a fine of from $100 to $1,000, will no doubt have a tendency to confine shippers to proper classification. The imposition of the 50 per cent. additional tariff was made optional, still the heavy fine will be a deterrent to wrong rating.

One of the results of the change in the law will undoubtedly be the shipping of the different classes of goods in carload lots to central western distributing points in order to place eastern houses on an equal basis with Winnipeg and Vancouver and Victoria houses, and it is not at all unlikely that branch houses will eventuate in the near future. The tendency in grocery circles is to open up such branch houses, and the late movement of a certain amalgamated grocery association seems to be right in line with this feature of the trade.

PACKING FRUIT FOR EXPORT.

EVERY year is heard more or less complaint as to the condition in which Canadian fruit reaches the foreign market, and the reputation of Canada is impaired on account of the folly of some who either wilfully forward inferior stuff or are culpably negligent in packing it properly. The dearth of fruit in Britain this year affords a great opportunity for Canadian fruit men to make themselves solid with the British market. The Briton is slow to take anything up, but he is all the better customer once a connection is formed. He will be forced this year to take our fruit, and if it is properly packed and marketed its superior qualities will do the rest. The Dominion Government is demonstrating at the various fairs and exhibitions throughout the country the proper methods of packing and the style of package required by the British consumer for different kinds of fruit, and there is no excuse for any consignment of Canadian fruit arriving on the British market in any other than first-class condition.

In our article on another page on the Dominion Exhibition may be found a summary of the methods recommended by the Government, and further information may be obtained by application to the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa

Selling Terms of the Canners' Consolidated Illegal

THE attention of THE GROCER has been called, by a series of complaints from the wholesale trade in all parts of Canada, to the selling terms adopted by The Canadian Canners' Consolidated Companies, Limited.

The objectionable conditions are contained in a circular issued from the head office of the company, which after reciting that the company controls 30 of the largest factories in Canada, that the object of the consolidation is to protect the whole canning industry by eliminating the selling of futures, that selling prices are to be kept as low as possible, and that they propose to put the canned goods business on a footing whereby the manufacturer, wholesaler and retail merchant will make a fair profit, goes on to make the following proposition :

> We propose selling goods to the wholesale trade only, under the rebate system, reserving 10 per cent. rebate, provided they handle exclusively goods manufactured by this company : such rebates to be made at regular periods to those buyers who make a statutory declaration that they have handled exclusively goods manufactured by us.
> Realizing that already a few goods have been purchased from other packers, and not wishing to prevent any wholesale merchant in Canada from obtaining the benefit to be derived through co-operation, we make exception only to any goods now in the hands of the wholesale trade and any orders for futures, which they have actually booked prior to receipt of this registered letter. If any goods are subsequently purchased outside of this company, no rebate whatever will be made on any goods purchased from us throughout the season.

Then follow the names of the companies in the incorporation, viz. :

Alymer Canning Co., Alymer and Hamilton.
Burford Canning Co., Burford.
Bowlby Bros. & Co., Waterford.
Brighton Canning Co., Brighton.
W. Boulter & Sons, Picton.
Clark & Clark, Brighton.
Delhi Canning Co., Delhi and Niagara-on-the-Lake.
Dunmore Canning Co., St. Catharines.
Grimsby Canning Co., Grimsby.
Imperial Canning Co., Kingsville.
Kent Canning Co., Chatham and Sandwich.

In this first effort The Canadian Canners' Consolidated Companies, Limited, altogether over-reached themselves, for there are certain lines of canned goods extensively handled by the Canadian trade which the consolidation are not able to supply. Realizing the impossibility of this position, a second circular was hastily despatched exempting from the above terms baked beans, jams and jellies, catsup, lunch tongue, soups, corned beef, blueberries and foreign canned goods.

The wholesaler is charged the same price for his stock as he is to get from the retailer. Should he be so bold as to buy any goods but the exceptions noted from a firm outside the consolidation he is punished by being deprived of any profit on The Canadian Canners' Consolidated Companies', Limited, goods for the season. As The Canadian Canners' Consolidated Companies, Limited, control 95 per cent. of the canned fruits and vegetables put up in Canada, the wholesaler is clearly at their mercy. This is the position of affairs as they now stand.

The consolidation is a bona fide joint stock company, and as such an arrangement wholly within the range of reputable business enterprise. The conditions of the canning industry were undoubtedly unsatisfactory, and such an amalgamation as The Canadian Canners' Consolidated Companies, Limited, was well calculated to rectify some, at least, of these conditions. In the bare fact of amalgamation there was no menace to the trade of the general public ; but there is only too good cause to suspect the designs of any corporation which seeks to arrogate to itself the preponderant control of any industry. It is to be regretted that The Canadian Canners' Consolidated Companies, Limited, should have thought it necessary to meet competition by other means than the merit of their goods.

Possibly in framing these terms they were guided by a recent decision in the courts of the United States, where it was held that a company has a right to sell on whatsoever terms it pleases, as the purchaser is under no obligation to buy.

How such a decision might have been regarded by Canadian judges is now merely a matter of academic interest, for the Dominion Government has taken strong ground in the matter. In the present session of the House an amendment of the Criminal Code was introduced by the Minister of Justice, and now awaits the sanction of His Excellency, which covers this very point.

The amendment, which is an addition and is cited as 520A, runs as follows :

> Everyone is guilty of an indictable offence and liable, if convicted upon indictment, to a fine not exceeding ...., and not less than..... .....and on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding..... .....and not less than..... who, being a manufacturer of or dealer in any class of goods :
> (a) Makes a sale of any such goods to a person who sells or intends to sell goods of that class in connection with his own business, subject to a condition that the purchaser shall not sell or deal in goods of a like kind produced by, or obtained or to be obtained from, any other manufacturer or dealer, or
> (b) makes such a sale upon terms that would in their application deprive the purchaser of any profit upon the sale of such goods, if he should so sell or deal, or
> (c) consigns any such goods to another person for sale upon commission upon such terms that the consignee can profit by such sale only if he does not sell or deal in goods of a like kind manufactured by or obtained or to be obtained from any other manufacturer or dealer : Provided that it shall not be an offence under this section to appoint an agent or sole agent for the sale of goods or the making of contracts for the exclusive sale of goods.

This clearly covers the case, but to leave no room for doubt THE GROCER has obtained an opinion from a high authority in the Dominion Government, who writes:

> It is quite true that there is in the Criminal Code Amendment Bill a clause which would apply to the selling terms of The Canadian Canners' Consolidated Companies, Limited, as described. I enclose a copy of the bill calling attention to the proposed clause, 520A, therein.

It is evident, therefore, that The Canadian Canners' Consolidated Companies, Limited, have made a mistake. Controlling as they do 95 per cent. of the canned fruit and vegetables output of Canada, it should be beneath their dignity to resort to such tactics in order to freeze out the 5 per cent. who constitute their opposition. In any event, the amendment to the Criminal Code quoted above will make obligatory the withdrawal of the objectionable conditions.

TEA REPORT.

WM. JAS. & HENRY THOMPSON, London, Eng., in their tea circular of August 27, say: Fine teas continue to command good prices, and a few high averages have been realized, while the rates for all good liquoring kinds have been fully maintained; ordinary medium grades, both leaf and broken, are, however, relatively cheap.

Green teas.—The rapid progress made in the United States and Canada by Ceylon and Indian greens seems from news at hand by this mail to be causing a good deal of concern among members of the Japanese tea trade, and a resolution has been adopted by the Tea Guild in Japan urging the cessation of late picking in order to maintain the present quality and price. Such a proposal should be satisfactory to our planters, as British growths are making way in America at present, solely on account of their cheapness, and consequently it is to their interest that the high rates ruling for other kinds should be maintained.

Indian.—There have been a fair number of orders for export, which have been mostly executed, while good broken pekoes seem to have met with more competition. Fine teas again sold well. Advices by cable report a firm market in Calcutta for good and common kinds, with medium unchanged.

Ceylon common teas were, if anything, slightly firmer than last week, and rather more competition in broken pekoes about 7d. was noticeable.

KNOWING ONE'S STOCK.

SOME manufacturing and wholesale grocers have said that it is their belief that the wholesale grocery trade would be better in many instances, if not in all, if retailers would educate themselves regarding their goods, meaning that a more thorough knowledge of their goods, their origin and preparation, would result in larger sales, because that would enable retailers to call the attention of customers to the advantages and good qualities of a particular line of goods.

Years ago retailers knew about their goods, and could talk intelligently concerning them, conveying to customers information which made the articles offered appear desirable. In other words, dealers made themselves experts, and then used their knowledge to assist them in selling.

Retailers when approached upon this subject reply that it was easy enough to learn about goods in years past when the varieties were few and manufacturers were not so secret about their methods. Those were the days, they say, when the grocery trade was limited to staples like flour, sugar, butter, cheese, eggs, molasses, codfish, the old-fashioned split and dried kind, and similar goods with which everyone was more or less familiar.

Now retailers point to scores, possibly hundreds, of varieties of package goods, put up in numerous different ways, hermetically sealed, and bearing the trademarks of prominent manufacturers as guarantees of good faith. They say it is impossible to learn about all these goods, and that if they wanted to the manufacturers would give them no information.

Perhaps both have missed the point a trifle. The object in advocating the education of grocers is to create a sentiment among them to know everything possible about their business, and to utilize this knowledge in selling goods.

It is not necessary, advocates of this principle assert, to know minutely the ingredients and methods of mixing the different preparations. In a general way the constituents of any product can be known, but what retailers want to learn is the best means of handling these goods and making them most useful in the family.

Without much doubt, it is retailers themselves who must acquire this information. No one else can do it for them, and until they manifest a decided interest nothing can be accomplished.

Manufacturers say to ask questions, to inquire about any goods with which they are unfamiliar, and that information sufficient for the purposes will be supplied.

Whether manufacturers could really do this it is impossible to say, but without much doubt a better understanding of the goods handled, enabling them to explain their use to customers, would be a great assistance in selling goods. Successful grocers say it should be a part of the business of every retailer to learn these things. They ought, by all means, to be able to tell a customer how to use any new goods which may come out. This information is absolutely essential to the housewife, and the lack of knowledge on the part of the retailers is a partial explanation of the necessity for demonstrators from the factories. It is frequently a good thing to have a demonstrator in the store, but it is better not to need one.

In discussing this matter a short time ago a prominent retailer, himself an expert, declared that he believed it would be a good thing for the retailer to have the new goods tested in his own home, then he would be absolutely certain of their qualities. This suggestion applies with special force to retailers in small towns and in the country where many customers are personal acquaintances, and whose recommendation would mean increased sales.

Perhaps this suggestion is radical, but sometimes radical remedies are the best in the end, and lead to important trade reforms. If something will lead to a better and clearer knowledge of the goods sold, it would be a good thing for retail grocers.

A Window Display Competition.

THE CANADIAN GROCER, for the encouragement of tasty window displays, has decided to open a competition for its subscribers. Prizes will be awarded for photos or drawings of window displays and accompanying descriptions of the same. The prizes will consist of:

First Prize - - -	$10
Second Prize -	$7

and $2 for every picture and description which is considered worthy of publication.

The competition, which closes on Oct. 1, will admit of photographs, pen and ink or wash drawings, with good ideas counting more than the picture itself, although, of course, all pictures in order to receive a prize, must be of sufficient distinctness and good workmanship to admit of their publication.

There is no progressive merchant but has at least one window a month that is worthy of entering this competition, and the prizes are so arranged that, even if a window does not win the $10, $7 or $5 prize, it may be awarded a $2 prize, provided only that it is of sufficient merit to publish in the columns of this paper. This award will cover the cost of the photograph and there is no reason why any merchant should not obtain it. The number of photographs or drawings submitted by each store is not limited, nor is the number of $2 prizes; a merchant may win a dozen if his pictures merit them.

Should any intending competitor not know how to take a window picture, this paper will be glad to furnish him with instructions. In general terms, it may be stated that the early morning, when the light is clear, when few people are abroad and when there is the least reflection, is the best time to photograph the display. A good photograph can also be taken at night by the aid of an electric or flash light.

Mark all manuscripts and photographs intended for this department with the words "Window Dressing Competition."

BRANTFORD PACKING HOUSE.

Advices from Brantford relate that the buildings and plant of The Brantford Packing Co. at the locks have been purchased by Fox Bros., of Toronto, who will commence operations at the earliest possible moment.

On Saturday last Mr. John Fox, one of the members of the company, visited Brantford and made final arrangements for the purchase of the property. During the past year or so the plant has not been operated, the company that started the industry having found, in view of the condition of the market, that it was not a paying proposition, and that there was more money in handling live hogs than in packing. A gang of men will be put at work at once cleaning out the premises, and it is expected that the factory will be in operation by the end of a month.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

GROCERIES.

Toronto, September 10, 1903.

THE home trade has been remarkably good since our last issue and every confidence is felt in the prospects for coming season's trade. Canned goods are going well and great difficulty is experienced in supplying orders. Canners have practically withdrawn quotations and it is considered certain that there will be short packs in many leading lines, but it is still early for final advices. Coffee has been moving well and prices continue firm. Spices are uninteresting and there is no new feature to record. Syrups and molasses are continuing firm with trade demand increasing. Rice and tapioca are both moving well and prices continue firm. Tea has been in active demand and prices continue well up to quotations. With general demand increasing and dispatches from primal markets falling below market demands, the aspect is presenting a decidedly strong outlook. Dried fruits are going well with firm prices, and reports from primal markets all pointing to strong statistical position in both currants and valencia raisins. Sugar has not been in active demand, though good trade has been done and prices continue at previous quotations.

CANNED GOODS.

Trade has been well maintained in these goods since our last issue. On account of much reduced stocks some difficulty is experienced in keeping up supply. With no new feature as to coming season, it is still an open question as to extent new packs will reach. It is, however, considered certain that corn and tomatoes will be below the usual average. We quote :

COFFEES.

There is no new feature in the aspect of coffee on the home market since our last, but there are still signs of more than usual interest, and fair sales are reported. The New York market bore a holiday character, according to latest report, being closed from Friday till Tuesday morning. Business was therefore inoperative. Advices from the primal markets, however, speak of the Brazilian crops being much below usual on account of havoc by pest and late frost checking the "pea" berries. We quote :

SUGAR.

We have again to report a very strong market for sugar, with prices nominally unchanged.

There have been large sales of raw sugar to United States refiners, totalling about 70,000 bags at full recent quotations. Since these transactions transpired business has been dull owing to the scarcity of offerings, and it is generally felt that if any further considerable quantity of sugar should be brought out buyers would readily concede 1-16c. to secure additional supplies for their prospective requirements. Meanwhile, quotations remain as last advised, viz., on basis of 3 7/8c., duty paid New York, for 96 test centrifugals. The tone and tendency are to continued strength and with a scarcity of cane sugars at West Indian points the outlook for prices is encouraging.

Receipts at United States four ports for week ending September 2 were 34,889 tons, with meltings same as previous week, viz., 48,000 tons, leaving total stock of 237,633 tons, a reduction of over 13,000 tons for the week. Receipts at Cuban shipping ports were very light, viz., only 2,500 tons, while exports amounted to 19,300 tons, leaving stock in six principal ports of 201,000 tons. These figures show a combined reduction in United States and Cuban stocks for the week of 32,000 tons, and it is interesting to note that during the past seven weeks the total United States and Cuban stocks have decreased 191,806 tons, or say, at the rate of over 27,000 tons per week.

Combined stocks of Europe and America at latest uneven dates are 1,941,633 tons, against 1,981,413 tons at same period last year, the decrease being nearly 40,000 tons.

Old crop beets for September October shipment remain steady at 8s. 6d. basis f.o.b. Hamburg for 88 test, while new crop are quoted at 9s. for October December, and 9s. 2¼d. for May shipment.

American refined markets have been interfered with by the Labor Day holiday, being closed both on Saturday and Monday last, but prices of hard sugars are firmly held with no disposition to shade even for large lots. A slightly improved enquiry is noted, while withdrawals on contracts are reported fairly large.

In our local market there are no changes to record, but the demand from second hands is greatly improved owing to heavy arrivals of fruit and the outlook is reported encouraging. There are no special indications for the immediate future but it would be well to watch developments on the other side of the line. We quote :

SPICES.

There is no feature of interest to note since our last issue, in spices. Trade continues inactive and prices remain firm. Pepper is reported as still advancing on London market ; cloves also are firming toward advance. We quote :

TEAS.

The home tea market is in fair activity and prices are ruling firm. Reports from London market speak of continued firmness, with tea showing quality well competed for. Arrivals from primal markets are only moderate as to quantity and the averages are well up to quotations. Primal markets also report great firmness in good qualities. Prices were well maintained, with common grades unchanged, the markets generally showing in seller's favor. We quote :

QUEBEC MARKETS.

GROCERIES.

Montreal, Sept. 10, 1903.

JOBBERS report a week of uniformly good business. Travellers are sending in good orders, which indicate a general feeling of confidence among the retail trade. Everyone is looking forward confidently to an exceptionally good September, and, as the month has opened auspiciously, there seems no reason to anticipate a disappointment. The general tone of the market is firm. The local sugar market remains unchanged and the general feeling seems to be that any change will be in an upward direction. New York advices tell of a strong market. The demand this week has been excellent, and, until the close of the canning season, no slackening is anticipated. A good trade in teas is reported and the market is firmer. A weakness in China greens was anticipated, but, as yet, there are no indications of it, and the market continues firm. Cable advices from China report an advance of 1 to 1¼c. on low-grade China blacks. In syrups and molasses the market is firm and there are some advances to note, which are given below. The trade in foreign dried fruits is reported good, and, as a scarcity of valencias is expected, the market is very firm. Jobbers report a scarcity of fine filiatras, and some are unable to fill orders for these goods. The Association prices for British Columbia salmon in Great Britain have been fixed at 26s. for Fraser River and 24s. for Rivers Inlet Sockeye c.i.f. London. These prices are equal to $5.75 and $5.25 f.o.b. Coast. In fish the demand has improved very much and a good trade is anticipated. Some changes will be noted in the quotations given below. Coffee is dull, and little is doing. The spice situation is unchanged. In rice and tapioca there is also very little to report, there being only a fair demand. Corn is considered very good property at 85c. per dozen. There has been a considerable advance in beans on account of the poor crop ; changed quotations are given below. Glucose has again advanced 10c. per 100 pounds and is now selling at $2.70 per bbl., with an increase of 15c. for smaller packages. Pearl hominy has dropped 15c. per bag and is now selling at $2.10. G. rosin has been advanced 1½c. per pound. Lobsters are very scarce on the local market, and prices are advancing. They are now quoted at from $3.45 to $4 per dozen. Evaporated apples have advanced, and are now quoted at 6½c. Dealers report a better quality of eggs, and prices are a little firmer. In butter, the firm feeling shown in the market last week still continues. Free buying in cheese at all the country boards on a basis of 11 to 11⅜c. is reported. The quantity of honey on the market is in excess of what was anticipated, but dealers are not anxious to buy. Hides are quiet and there is nothing to note except an advance in lambskins. There is a good export demand for ashes. Beans have advanced. Hops are in better demand. The wheat market is firm.

SUGAR

There are no changes on the local market but the general tone of the market is firmer than it was. A further advance is expected very soon in view of New York advices telling of a firmer market there. The market for beets is very strong. We quote :

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The market is firm. Owing to the great scarcity of Barbados there has been an advance of 2c. per gallon since last week. Corn syrup, as reported last week, is in better demand owing to the scarcity of Barbados. Some sales of the latter at lower prices than those quoted are reported on the street, but jobbers assure us that they are not pure Barbados. We quote :

TEAS.

Trade is fairly good this week, there being a good demand for Ceylon and India greens in particular. Some round lots have been sold during the week, and the volume of business has been larger than was anticipated. The market is firm. Cable advices from China announce an advance of from 1 to 1¼c. in low-grade China blacks. China greens continue firm and no weakness is now anticipated. Cable advices from London report a stronger market for Ceylons and Indians. In the low-grade Ceylon and India teas there has been an advance of a farthing, while the mediums have been advanced a ha'penny. Japan teas are firm. Some orders for third crop teas have been sent out at 15½ to 16c. per pound, but cable advices say that these cannot be executed except at a 4 per cent. advance. High-grade teas are also much firmer. Teas similar to those which last season sold at 17 to 17½c. are now eagerly snapped up at 20 to 22c. per pound.

Cables received from Shanghai announce that orders already out for common sorts of China green cannot be executed under an advance of from 1½ to 2c. per pound. In the better qualities of China green there is no change. Several large sales of India greens are reported, and there is a good inquiry for same. Consigned teas are readily picked up, and it would seem that India and Ceylon greens are rapidly growing in popular favor. From all of the above it may be gathered that the market is very strong, and advances may very soon be expected. We quote :

CANNED GOODS.

There is little to add to last week's report. The Canadian Canners' Association will not yet give quotations on new goods. Some little trade is reported in canned tomatoes of old stock. The Association have fixed the price of British Columbia salmon in Great Britain at 26s. for Fraser and 24s. for Rivers Inlet Sockeye. These prices are equal to $5.75 and $5.25 f.o.b. Coast. FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

The weather conditions for housing of valencia raisin crop have continued favorable, but it is feared that owing to midsummer drought the crop will not exceed 17,000 to 18,000 tons, whereas a crop of 25,000 tons was confidently expected. The demand for loose muscatels has been exceptionally good during the present week, and malagas have been in good demand on the strength of high quotations for Californias. As was noted elsewhere, many jobbers find difficulty in filling orders for fine filiatras, and the currant market in general is very firm. Figs and dates are firm at prices given last week, and there are no changes to record in prunes. In these goods there is very little doing at present. We quote :

GREEN FRUITS.

The market is glutted with green fruits, and dealers report that they are scarcely paying charges. Canadian peaches are coming in freely, and, hence, California arrivals have fallen off. Canadian tomatoes are in good supply. We quote :

FISH

The trade in fish has been improving steadily, and dealers are looking for a better demand. Good supplies of all kinds are expected from this time on. Some changes will be noted in this week's quotations. Fresh haddocks have been advanced ½c., but dore, halibut, salmon trout and white fish have declined somewhat. The trade in smoked fish is opening up well, and dealers anticipate an active demand. We quote :

NUTS

There is little to note on the local market, which is firm in tone. Pecans continue in very good demand. Producers are declining to deliver almonds at prices made by speculators, and an advance is not unlikely if stocks do not come to market more freely. We quote :

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS.

A considerable advance is to be noted this week, and the general tone of the market is very firm. As mentioned in last week's "Grocer," a short crop is expected, and this accounts for the advance on the local market. We quote :

POTATOES.

An improved business is reported this week. New potatoes are coming in more freely and are of good quality. Complaints of rot are heard in some sections, but, on the whole, the crop will be good. We quote :

HONEY.

The delivery of all kinds of honey is greatly in excess of what was anticipated. Large quantities are now being offered, but, from the experience of last year, buyers do not feel like paying the prices which are being asked by the holders. They are also influenced in holding back by the fact that West India honey has made a pretty good reputation for itself on this market. The Canadian can never depend upon the market remaining steady throughout the season. At the present time the value for buckwheat honey is 6c. and clover 6½c. delivered Montreal. Comb honey is offering freely, $1.25 to $1.50 per case of one dozen sections being the prevailing prices.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

The market remains quiet and there are no changes to report. We quote :

EVAPORATED APPLES.

New evaporated apples are opening high and 6½c. is being paid. The market is firmer than last week, but dealers say that prices are sure to be easier.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

FLOUR.

The market is very firm, but, as is usual between crops, there is not much doing. Dealers report a scarcity of Spring and Winter wheat flour. This is due to the fact that the millers sold freely for export for future delivery, depending upon getting all the wheat they required from the new crop, but farmers are holding back for higher prices, and hence the present shortage. We quote :

ROLLED OATS.

Trade is quiet and there is nothing to note. We quote :

GRAIN.

There is a firm demand for export oats, barley and peas. Farmers are very busy in the fields and are not delivering, hence very little new grain has yet been marketed. We quote :

HAY.

Deliveries are still comparatively light, as farmers are busy with harvest work. New hay so far received has been of better quality than was anticipated. There have been several sales of Quebec Province hay at $10 to $10.50 for No. 2 old on spot. New hay, No. 2, in good condition, has sold at $9 to $9.50. American buyers are on the market for all the good No. 1 and No. 2 timothy that they can get. Shipments to Great Britain have fallen off considerably. Port shipments during the last week were, to Liverpool, 1,198 bales ; Glasgow, 951 bales ; Bristol, 711 bales ; South Africa, 417 bales ; total, 3,277 bales. We quote :

HIDES.

There is little to report this week, as trade is quiet. Lamskins continue in fair demand. We quote :

CHEAP TEA

Probably the worst thing a grocer ever attempted to do, is to push a cheap, low-grade tea.

One dose of it is usually enough. Would'nt it be if you had to drink it ?

Does the man or woman who drinks it have a pleasant recollection of the visit to your store ?

DON'T DO IT ! !

If you push tea, push one that you can recommend. The percentage of profit may be smaller, but the gross profits in a year will be more ; and, you will be building up your business—not driving it away.

Try RED ROSE TEA

as a brand to push and I think you may be agreeably surprised with the results.

It's not a cheap tea ! It is one you can drink yourself.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, September 7, 1903.

BUSINESS conditions in Nova Scotia are much better than might have been expected considering all the untoward elements that have been in evidence during the last year. The speculative losses arising from the slump in iron and steel do not appear to have seriously affected the mercantile community. In many cases, no doubt, earnings have been swept away, but wholesale houses report that collections have not been materially affected and in very few cases has the working capital of our business houses been impaired.

The failure of the apple crop made our banks very careful about advancing money in the Annapolis Valley, but with the present season's good crop this stringency is passing away,

The completion of a portion of the works at Sydney, necessitating the laying off of numbers of men, affected trade at that centre for a time, but matters are now settling down to a basis of greater stability. It is true there have been a number of small failures throughout the province, but this has not been due to any weakness in the business situation. It has been due to the fact that a new collection law came into effect in Nova Scotia on September 1 and some traders desired to avail themselves of the advantages which the former lax conditions afforded creditors.

Taking all these things into consideration the business situation does not afford any room for pessimism. August trade has been exceptionally good and the outlook for Fall is fully as bright as at this time last year.

Brokers report that the wholesale trade has been booking orders very liberally for dried fruits to arrive by direct steamer from Patras. This steamer is due to sail on September 25, which is a few days later than usual, but she is expected to arrive at Halifax about the end of October. Owing to freight concessions, currants to arrive by direct steamer are a little easier than expected but lots via London show no decline in price. A Montreal house claiming to represent a Patras currant exporter in the Dominion of Canada has recently been offering to sell Halifax jobbers notwithstanding the fact that a local broker is selling agent for the same principal in this province. Some sharp correspondence has passed between Halifax and Montreal regarding the matter. For the most part wholesalers here have booked their orders with the man who was on the spot and personally solicited the business.

Last week the corn mill of Levi Hart & Son, in this city, was considerably damaged by fire. This firm have been doing a fairly large business and have supplied the cornmeal for quite a large proportion of the trade. Recently cornmeal on the local market has advanced 10c. and the temporary shut down of this mill will not make it any easier for merchants to secure their supplies. Flour jobbers have been very conservative in the matter of advancing prices, although millers have been asking more for some weeks. Today western millers have advised that a further advance has been made on Winter wheat patents of 15c. per barrel and as stocks both in the hands of the jobbers and retailers are not excessive, quotations are being marked up on future transactions. There is quite a demand beginning to manifest itself, which shows that retailers have allowed their supplies to run low and are now under the necessity of buying on an advancing market.

In recent years quite a business has developed in canned blueberries, most of which are put up in the province of New Brunswick. This year a severe hailstorm visited that province and almost annihilated the blueberry crop. A Newcastle packer writes to a customer here that not one-tenth the usual pack was put up in that district this year. In fact the supply is so limited that not much attention is this year being paid the article by distributing houses.

The Halifax selling agents of The Consolidated Canners' Association last week notified their clients that owing to the cold nights and the backward season the association would refuse to book further orders for peas, beans and corn. No prices had been quoted for these articles but fair orders were taken subject to the price to be fixed by the association. The inference is that retailers will have to pay a fairly high price for these lines before the season ends.

Apples are beginning to move, quite a large shipment going forward to London on the "Evangeline," on Saturday. A London house is contracting for 10,000 barrels of Ribstons, Blenheims and Kings, for which $2 at the orchard is offered. Some sales have been made at this figure, but many farmers are refusing the offer as it leaves the Gravensteins on their hands, preferring to sell the entire yield of their orchards en bloc.

Flour is very firm at present. Retail stocks unfortunately are light, but jobbers are fairly well protected. Late advances on this market aggregate about 30c. per barrel. Cornmeal also is firm in sympathy with the market for corn. Beans are higher. On the strength of unfavorable reports from the bean-growing districts of Ontario this article has been advanced 25c.

Considerable interest has been aroused in cheese as buyers have been bidding prices up. Last week there was an advance of ⅜c. This article is now jobbing at 11½c. The make this Autumn promises to be very heavy as the pastures are now in excellent condition. The market is in a very excited condition. Butter is also firmer and the price has stiffened somewhat.

The local tea market is beginning to respond to the advances at first hands. The trade here runs chiefly to Ceylons, black predominating. All kinds of preserved fruit such as raspberries, strawberries, plums, etc., will be much higher this year owing to the shortness of the crops and the high price of sugar, which bids fair to continue. The advance will be about 15c. per dozen on the 1-lb. glass jars. Rice is ¼c. higher.

Provisions are firming with a better demand for hog products. Live hogs are now sold at 5¾c. per pound and small shipments are coming to the packers regularly. These average about 150 pounds in weight.

THE MANITOBA CROP.

Later crop reports from Manitoba continue of a much more reassuring nature. It is now thought that the increased acreage will fully offset the shortage of yield and that the total grain crop of Western Canada will equal in volume that of 1902. The expert opinion of the president of the Northern Elevator Company is to the effect that the present crop is quite the equal of any crop grown within the past ten years. The crop in the Territories, more especially north and west of Edmonton, is characterized as magnificent in reference to both quantity and quality.

Experiments made in England have shown that a salmon can swim at a speed of forty miles an hour.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B.C., September 4, 1903.

IT certainly would do the wholesalers of the eastern cities good to see the way freight was piled up on the C.P.R. wharf on Monday, August 31, all day and until up to midnight. Two of the large sheds were filled to the roof and large consignments were stacked in roofed enclosures on the wharf. The drays with loads of merchandise were sent down hour after hour all forenoon and afternoon, and were kept at it as busy as ever right up to midnight. The staff of clerks in the freight sheds did their best to receive it as it came, but it was piled up everywhere despite all efforts.

The withdrawal of the Summer schedule with its accompanying guarantee of through bills of lading and guarantee of delivery in Dawson was accentuated by an increase in the commodity rates which went into effect on September 1. The increase was $5 per ton, and that item was worth saving. It was estimated that nearly, if not altogether, 1,500 tons of general merchandise were delivered at the C.P.R. wharf on the last day of August.

To handle this extra freight, sent in all at once, the C.P.R. has put on the steamer Danube, which was loading yesterday, and the steamer Venture, which will load as soon as she returns from the north. The Amur, one of the regular northern steamers, took out over 700 tons, which had been on the wharf previous to Monday. The Princess May, which is the alternate boat on the Skagway run, will also take out a full cargo this week, so that the congestion will be relieved before the beginning of next week.

The withdrawal of through Summer rates and the substitution of ordinary commodity rates, will not have a very appreciable effect in stopping the shipment of goods north. There has been an underlying current of feeling among the merchants and shippers that the condition in the northern market will render it necessary to send in large quantities of goods yet. The efforts being made to get the big shipments from St. Michaels up the river before the freeze-up, are not an entire success. The water is too low, and, despite the fact that the owning corporations are impressing every available steamer into the work of transporting the big stocks from the mouth of the river, it is openly admitted that many consignments will never reach Dawson this Fall.

When that is assured, it will make it positive that large quantities of staples in food products will be needed, and the only way to send them in is by the White Pass Railway from Skagway and down the Yukon. The stocks of staples in the Yukon now are by no means large, and the expectation is that large shipments will have yet to be sent.

Orders for hundreds of tons of food staples were received by local wholesalers until Monday noon, August 31, and while it was impossible to have them even entered up, let alone packed, in time for catching the through rates, the goods will be shipped in any way.

In the grocery market this week there is noted the withdrawal of quotations on corn and tomatoes by eastern packers. The expected shortage in the pack is the cause. As tomatoes have not been supplied the trade here to more than half the demand for a year back, the move is not a surprise. Local wholesalers have to depend largely on California for their supplies of canned tomatoes.

The eastern houses shipped a fair supply of new peas when the crop was ready and packed. So far no shortage in that has occurred.

In dried fruits the stiffening of all lines has followed on the opening of new season's apricots at high prices. Other lines of dried fruit are still last season's pack. Demand is fairly active in these lines owing to heavy northern shipments.

In produce markets the butter situation is steady. There is fairly good demand and receipts are well up to demand. Store butter is also being received just now, though the heavy consignments for Winter stocks will hardly begin to move yet.

Cheese, which is not heavily stocked here at present, has shown an advance in sympathy with eastern higher quotations. The supply is as yet in part from Manitoba.

Eggs are very scarce and very firm on receipt of news that the next arrivals from Ontario will be worth 2c. more than present stocks. It is now almost impossible to get eggs in any quantity from Manitoba and the Northwest. Price is quoted at 21c. at present; it is going up. Local fresh still retail at 40c. per dozen, and few on the market.

The receipts of fruit from California are somewhat restricted. The rigid inspection has practically stopped importations of apples, and there are no pears from California at all now. All the California apples on the market are a few Gravensteins. They are quoted at $1.50 to $1.75 per box. Bartlett pears from Washington and Oregon are in liberal supply at $2 to $2.25 per box (same size as apple box). Peaches are plentiful; Crawfords from Washington and Salways from California being the only varieties on the market. Crawfords quote at $1 to $1.10 per box, and the Salways at $1.15 to $1.25. Grapes are very plentiful; there are muscats, tokays, and black grapes, the price being $1.75, with lower tendency. The Italian prune is the only variety of plum being received from California just now. The British Columbia crop of Italian prunes is not in the market yet. Other varieties are, however, so plentiful that they have no quotable value. The keeping qualities of many of these plums prevent shipment to the Northwest.

Watermelons have never come in such quantities to this market. Up to date 11 cars have been absorbed. A very few years ago it was difficult to sell that number in the whole season. Most of them have been from California this year, but Washington is now shipping. The local quotation to the trade is $30 per hundred. Canteloupes are $1.75 to $2 per crate of three dozen.

Local Spence's Bridge tomatoes are quoted at $2 for the 40-lb. box. Fancy Spence's Bridge apples, $1.25 per box; other varieties from 50c to $1 per box.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. F. F. Adams, grocer, of Cardinal, Ont., was one of the Exhibition visitors to our Toronto office this week.

Mr. J. M. Findlay, general merchant, Dromore, Ont., was in Toronto this week and paid a visit to our office.

Mr. F. J. Castle, of The F. J. Castle Co., Limited, paid THE GROCER a call this week when in Toronto. He reports business at Ottawa exceedingly good.

Mr. R. J. Wales has started business in groceries and hardware at Napanee, Ont. Two stores, both bright and attractive, have been fitted with choice stocks.

Mr. W. McPherson, general merchant, Williamstown, Ont., has made extensive alterations, including a new front in his store, which greatly improves its appearance.

Mr. C. E. Choat, of Choat & Co., retail grocers and provision dealers, Halifax, has been spending a few days in Toronto. Mr. Choat left Toronto about five years ago, and since living in Halifax has built up a nice business.

Mr. P. C. Larkin left on Tuesday on a visit to the branches of The Salada Tea Co. in Buffalo, New York City and Pittsburg. He intends continuing on south through Virginia and Florida, visiting many wholesale handlers of "Salada" in the Southern States.

Ritchie Bros., who four years ago began a general business in Orangeville, are branching out, and have started a similar store in Dundalk. Mr. E. W. Ritchie assumed the management on September 1. F. W. Ritchie, with the third brother H. W. to assist him, will continue in the Orangeville branch.

Mr. T. B. Price, of Parrsboro, N.S., was in Toronto this week. Mr. Price is in the grocery and crockery business, and is one of the many progressive merchants of Maritime Provinces who believe in securing all the knowledge available of interest to their business, so subscribed to THE GROCER before leaving.

Mr. E. R. Crane, grocer, of Orwell, Ont., was in Toronto this week and called on THE GROCER. Mr. Crane is the oldest grocer in Elgin County, having been in business there for over forty years. He has been burned out twice, but still continues at the old stand. He is combining business with pleasure while in Toronto.

On the invitation of Mr. E. B. Goodacre four prominent business men of Montreal spent a very pleasant ten days on a fishing excursion at Lake Gaumont, some thirty miles north of Labelle, recently. These were Messrs. A. Chaput, G. C. Rose, G. Haldimand and E. Desaulniers, and all report a very enjoyable holiday enlivened by excellent fishing.

Mr. Fred M. Wilkinson, president of Trade a journal published in Detroit in the interests of retail merchants, called on THE CANADIAN GROCER a few days ago. Mr. Wilkinson is an old St. Thomas, Ont., boy, being the son of the late Mr. Wilkinson, founder and for a long time proprietor of The St. Thomas Times. Mr. Wilkinson is doing well in Detroit and his paper is steadily growing.

Mr. F. W. Morley, of F. & J. Morley, grocers, Sydney, C.B. was a visitor in Toronto during the Exhibition. He said that when he left home, business was rather on the quiet side, partly on account of the uncertainty which surrounds the iron and steel industry in the town. Mr. Morley, however, felt that the quietness was only temporary and that the iron and steel industry would eventually be in a flourishing condition, on account of the natural advantages of Sydney for the location of such an industry. He said that three furnaces and a steel plant were in operation at The Dominion Iron and Steel Co.'s works.

Mr. E. H. Dierham, Milverton, Ont., has been in Toronto for a few days, more on business bent than on pleasure. In conversation with THE CANADIAN GROCER he remarked: "Although the population of Milverton is only about 850, it is quite a little town, there is no better in west Ontario. The merchants do not cut each other's throats, but pull along pretty well together." From further conversation it was learned that Mr. Dierham is a strong believer in the efficacy of printer's ink. He advertises freely in the local paper, and besides this, issues circulars from time to time to persons whose names he obtains from the voter's list. When questioned in regard to the cash system, he held that it was not possible to employ such a system in a town: "It is quite different in Milverton from what it is in larger towns in regard to the possibility of cash trade."

TO FIGHT CANADIAN PORTS.

A press despatch announces that the Philadelphia grain exporters have joined with the Baltimore merchants in the movement to prevent the further diversion of the western grain trade to Montreal and other Canadian ports, and a conference will be held in Philadelphia next Tuesday and Wednesday to devise a plan of action. New York and Boston merchants interested are also to be represented.

LOOKING FOR CANADIAN AGENT.

A visitor to the Montreal market this week is Mr. John Grant, director of Messrs. Wm. Grant & Sons, Limited, Dufftown, Glenlivet District, Scotland. Mr. Grant was a caller at the offices of THE CANADIAN GROCER. He stated that his trip to Canada was for the purpose of opening up trade with this country, and he is looking about for suitable agents. Inquiries re agency may be directed to THE CANADIAN GROCER.

Dairy Auction at Dominion Exhibition.

AT the Dominion Exhibition, Tuesday, Sept. 8, was the appointed day for disposal of the cheese and butter exhibits. In the centre of the arena, upon a temporarily-arranged stand, at 2.30 p.m., the auctioneer, in the person of Mr. MacLaren, head of the dairy division, took his stand, and quickly became the centre of attraction of a large concourse of visitors and buyers. The great amount of attention and time which Mr. MacLaren has given in connection with this department is well known to all who are interested in them, and it is doubtful whether a better person could have been found to fill the duties of auctioneer; and, indeed, the remarkably masterly manner in which he explained in detail the merits of each particular section, proved unquestionably the great interest he has taken in this section. Bidding began with a fine sample of cheese, which was quickly run up to 11c., the bidding continuing all through with a good degree of interest and prices secured ranged from 10½ to 11⅜. The butter attracted a good deal of attention, and many of the visitors seemed disposed to have bid had the offers been in small quantities. Below we give details of the sales :

Poultry Raising in Hungary.

U. S. Consul Chester, of Budapest, in a recent report says that in the near future Hungary will export more poultry than grain.

Already she exports turkeys, geese, ducks and hens to England, where they now compete more successfully than formerly with American poultry. The poultry culture of Hungary, says Mr. Patak, secretary of the Hungarian National Society for Poultry Rearing, who is organizing the Hungarian export poultry trade, pays ten times as much to farmers as any other branch of agriculture. Beef is dear and pork has gone up in price, while thousands are making money in the export of eggs alone, and raisers of poultry are sure to find a good domestic, if not also a foreign, market.

Cheese Markets.

Lindsay, Sept. 5—The Victoria Cheese Board met to-day. Thirteen factories boarded 1,969 boxes, and the highest price paid was 11c. Ten factories sold at that price.

Cowansville, Que., Sept. 5—At the weekly meeting of the Eastern Townships Dairymen's Exchange here to-day 42 factories offered 1,930 boxes cheese, 18 creameries offered 1,015 boxes butter. Cheese sold at 10⅞c. to 11 1-16c. Butter, 19¾c. to 20⅛c.

Belleville, Sept. 5—At the Cheese Board to-day 31 factories boarded 2,825 boxes white and 300 colored cheese. Sales were 2,460 at 11c.

Cornwall, Sept. 6—Two thousand one hundred and twenty three cheese were boarded here on Saturday, 943 white and 1,035 colored, and 95 American. All sold but one lot. The price was 11 3-16c. for both white and colored. The salesmen were:—Hodgson Bros., 1,198; J. Alexander, 773; T. S. Williamson, 28; A. Grant, 52.

MONTREAL.

A very satisfactory business has been done this week in hog products, and quotations as given last week still rule firm. Lard is still in very good demand, and there has been a fair inquiry for Canadian short-cut mess pork at $19 to $20 in round lots. The local demand for smoked meats, such as ham and bacon, is good, and on the English market there is still a good demand for Canadian bacon. We quote :

Heavy Canadian short cut mess pork	$19 00	$20 50
Canadian short cut back pork	19 50	20 00
Canadian short cut clear pork	20 00	20 50
Bacon, Wiltshire, per lb	0 14	0 15
Hams, per lb	0 13	0 14

DAIRY PRODUCE.

TORONTO.

BUTTER.—No export demand has as yet materialized, but a little better prices are being realized for tip top dairy. Considerable quantities are being offered and with about stationary demand prices are about as a week ago. We quote :

	Per lb.
Creamery prints	0 19	0 20
" solids, fresh	0 18	0 18½
Dairy rolls, large	....	....
" prints	0 15	0 17

Under qualities	0 11	0 13

CHEESE.—The market for cheese has again developed further strength and added from ¾ to 1c. per pound to prices current last week. A remarkable feature is that outside board prices are on a level with those on the local market. Trade is picking up. Nothing further has transpired to account for the boosting which has been taking place but it is possible that the quality of the Fall make will keep up the price. It may be of interest to note that cheese at present prices is equal to butter at 25 to 27c., a fact which should militate against large productions of Creamery this Fall. We quote :

	Per lb.
Cheese, large, new	0 11½	0 11¾
" twins, new	0 11¾	0 12

MONTREAL.

EGGS.—The very favorable weather has greatly improved the quality of eggs which are coming forward. The last week shows a decided improvement in the consumption. Prices are a little firmer, 15½ to 16c. being the price obtained for straight, and 18 to 18½c. and an occasional 19c. are the prices obtained for selected new-laid stock. As a result of the better feeling for local consumption the price in the country is a little firmer, but buyers say that if the market is to continue healthy throughout the season prices in the country must not go any higher. Country prices are now so high that no margin can be made for export, and unless the British market improves the market locally will be a dragging one and may wind up as it did last season unless care is used.

BUTTER.—The firmer feeling which was shown in the market last week still continues, 19½ to 20c. being the ruling price at Quebec's largest boards on Saturday last. The British market has responded to a certain extent, and finest brands have been sold to show a margin over the above price. The feeling locally is decidedly better and, as exporters have had a bad time of it so far this season, a change to better prices will be gladly welcomed. Dairy butters have shown a little more life this week, but not sufficient to warrant the payment of any higher prices in the country. Locally the market is good, the cool weather helping consumption. Prices obtained for finest creamery are 19½ to 20c.; dairies, 15 to 16c.; large lots, 14¾ to 15c.

CHEESE.—Throughout the week there has been free buying at all the country boards on a basis of 11 to 11⅜c. Exporters state that they have been able to secure some business on the above basis, but the majority of the trade are not following the market and operations are at present confined to two or three operators, who seem to have some reason for the prices they are paying. The general feeling among the trade is that lower prices will prevail immediately after the close of navigation. However, the cool weather now prevailing will doubtless have some effect on the production. The local trade is well supplied with small 20-lb. cheese and therefore the price for local consumption is a hard one to quote. We quote at 10½ to 11½c.

Provision Notes.

The price paid by Mr. McIntyre for live hogs on the London market, Monday, was 5¾c. per lb.

OPEN LETTER.

To the Retail Grocery Trade of Western Ontario:

DEAR SIRS,—We thank you for your past patronage, and wish to say that we are still doing business at the old stand, No. 156 Dundas street and 155 Carling street, and never were in better position to cater to your wants. In the last few years there have sprung up so many forms of Companies, Corporations, Associations and Combinations that it is difficult to foresee where these combinations are going to end. In fact the average Retail Grocer to-day does not know where he is at, or who he is dealing with. Now, to avoid any doubt on this matter, so far as we are concerned, we would respectfully ask you to send your orders to us, either through our travellers, by letter, telegraph or telephone, and by so doing we will be responsible to you, and you to us, and to no other person or persons. We will meet all legitimate competition, no matter from what source. We make a specialty of Black and Green Ceylon Teas, Japan and Indian Teas, Raw and Refined Sugars, New Orleans Syrups and Molasses, Canned Salmon, Japan and Fancy Rices, Currants and Raisins, Cereals, Cheese, Lard, etc., etc. We control for London certain leading brands of goods, such as the celebrated "Quaker Brand" of canned goods, Clover Leaf Salmon, and other lines for which we solicit your wants, and we will give your orders our best attention.

Yours very truly,

John Garvey,

Wholesale Grocer, 156 Dundas Street and 155 Carling Street, LONDON, ONT.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

Reforms of the Bakery Trade.

AS in all other trades, so also among the bakers, the exigencies of the times have demanded improvements and suitable efficacious changes, although those relating to the bakery trade have only in the last few years been particularly noticeable. Most of these improvements have taken place in the interior management of bakeshops, especially as far as hygienic measures are concerned. Many of our readers will remember, how formerly the sleeping places of the workmen were situated either in the bakehouse or close to it; the same held good with all toilet arrangements. When we compare this with the up-to-date arrangements now prevalent, we must confess that as far as cleanliness is concerned, nothing is to be desired. But exterior reforms have also not been neglected, and only lately two Berlin (Germany) Bakers' Guilds have laid down several important rules relating to the outward appearance of bakery workmen. These two guilds, the Concordia and Germania, have decided that the journeymen will be allowed to work with clean, blue aprons and kerchiefs only, while those apprentices that are engaged in carrying wares to customers must wear white aprons, blue and white striped jackets and white caps. It was also ordered that no baker boy should be allowed to appear in the street barefooted, a thing which hardly ever has happened in America, but which has become a habit in Europe of which the public did not approve at all. The regulations as to dress will be noticed with a great deal of interest on this side of the ocean, and it is to be hoped that they may be imitated extensively.

Milling in Sweden.

Small water mills are found in all parts of Sweden and serve to grind the grain of the neighboring peasantry. On the plains in the south windmills are met with, says The Miller.

Of late years steam mills have been erected in the larger towns, and, thanks to the protective duty, are in a fair way to produce all the flour the country requires.

In the year 1898 Sweden boasted of 1,417 large mills, with 1,148 pairs of rolls and 4,908 pairs of stones, giving employment to 4,243 workmen and producing 307,110,700 pounds of flour. The more important mills are located in Stockholm, Upsala, Malmo and Gothenburg.

Heretofore rye has been the principal bread grain, but in recent years the consumption of white flour has been on the increase. In some provinces rye and barley are mixed to form the bread, while in other regions oatmeal is added to the rye. A hard, dry biscuit called "Knackerbrod" is made from rye flour and keeps a long time without losing its flavor.

Twice Baked Bread.

THE custom of twice baking bread, according to an article in The Bakers' Review, is growing in many households; true, this is most frequently done at first at the advice of the physician, but, when the taste for zwieback is once acquired, ordinary bread is soon regarded as insipid. Bread twice baked is a standard remedy for indigestion and is beneficial in some kinds of kidney troubles, but the greatest good to be derived from its use is to the teeth. It is said that the habit of eating so much soft food is the reason so few have perfectly sound teeth. The teeth, like every other portion of the human frame, have their allotted work to perform to keep them in a healthy condition. If work is not given them the result is very much the same as in the case of the unworked muscles or faculties. They need food that requires plenty of mastication to keep them up to their proper standard. Zwieback, as this twice-baked bread is called, supplies this necessary exercise. Children should be given as much of it as they will eat, and adults, too, will find it of great benefit to the health and preservation of their teeth. Having said so much about the beneficial results to be obtained from using zwieback, it is advisable here to tell the uninitiated how it is prepared for private use. Vienna bread is really the best to use for zwieback, although any other kind of baker's bread will do if this is not obtainable, but home-made bread will not give satisfactory results. Cut up several loaves into slices of medium thickness. Place these in the oven and subject them to a moderate heat for twelve hours, or they may be left in the oven all night. The longer and more slowly it is baked the better it will be. Twice-baked bread is delicious when used instead of toast in the preparation of various dishes of meat or vegetables. It is excellent served with soups. It is convenient to pack for a light lunch, and, when eaten in conjunction with fruit, is appetizing and nourishing, and far more wholesome than cakes or sweatmeats. For supper it may be taken freely with hot milk or with cocoa. The result is a good night's sleep and healthy digestion. As seen from the above, this zwieback is easily made and many an unused loaf of wheaten bread may be made useful in this way at a minimum of cost.

A Modern Fable.

And behold in a certain city two millers came before King Solomon. And the first cried unto him for judgment, saying—"Lo, while I was asleep (for a wonder) did this supplanter come to take away my customer out of my bosom; a live customer, O king, and goodly to look at and draw upon. And I found I had gotten another customer truly, but ill-favored and thin, and now already dead." And the other said: "Not so, O King, for this customer came to me without my seeking, whereupon I did say: 'Welcome, little stranger!'"

Then said the King to the miller who complained "Why not cut? Peradventure thou mayest get at least a share. Thou mayest haply get it all." But he that had complained answered and said: "Rather, O King, would I have all than part. And this beloved customer, late of my bosom, looks better uncut. And yet further, O King, if I cut, this fellow also will cut, whereupon I shall cut again; and when the customer seeth that we both be bent on cutting, his heart will be glad within him and he will say, 'Cut on, cut on, ye fools and blind.' And it shall befall that in the end thereof my beloved customer shall be useless to me, even should I again nurse him in my bosom. I will not cut, O King, but I will wait till this fellow hath served his customer as badly as he has served me."

Then King Solomon gave judgment that the customer should return to him that complained as soon as the customer wanted to; and, said the King: "That day will surely come and will not tarry."

Mill Loses Insurance Suit.

A New York despatch says: In the suit of The British & Foreign Marine Insurance Co., libellant, against The Portland, (Oregon) Flouring Mills Co., to recover $16,376 insurance of unpaid freight on a cargo of flour shipped to Kobe and Hongkong, Judge Bellinger has rendered a decision in favor of the libellant for the full amount. The flour was shipped and the freight was to be paid by the defendant at the destination. The steamer was wrecked, but some of the flour and freight were saved. The salvage was said to figure up about $30,000. The insurance was paid to the steamship company, and the insurance company sued the milling company to recover the money thus disbursed. The insurance company endeavored to establish that the freight charges were due and payable anywhere along the voyage, and the fact that the ship did not arrive at its destination made no difference.

Feeling Canadian Competition.

THE Chicago Record-Herald says: Lake shipments of corn for the port of Montreal have aggregated 1,000,000 bushels during the last few days. This fact, together with the decline of 60 per cent. in the grain export shipments through Boston and of 29 per cent. through New York, has caused great alarm among the export shippers of the seaboard ports. The Western Elevating Association and kindred associations in Baltimore, Boston and New York have appointed committees to try to induce eastbound roads from Chicago to reduce their rates on grain for export by way of the seaboard ports, so that these roads can compete with Montreal.

The gain of the port of Montreal is due entirely to the action of the Dominion Government in making the Canadian canals free. Grain can now be shipped from Chicago to Montreal for export to Liverpool three cents a bushel cheaper than it can be routed by part rail part lake through Boston.

During the first seven months of the present year over 9,000,000 bushels of wheat and almost 4,000,000 bushels of corn have passed through the port of Montreal, as against a trifle of 1,000,000 bushels of wheat and 4,000,000 bushels of corn through the port of Boston.

The condition of the Atlantic ports is made still worse by the growing competition of the Gulf ports, which are attracting a large proportion of the grain that formerly found an outlet through the eastern seaboard. One of the large exporters from New York called on several of the Chicago traffic men yesterday and told them the situation on the seaboard was alarming. He said that unless the railroads could be induced to discontinue their lighterage charges in New York or reduce the grain rates the exporters would soon have to go out of business.

Banana Flour.

With the cheapening of bananas by the large increase of importation, says an English exchange, some enterprising baker might find it a good business to convert the fruit into bread. It could not be sold, of course, at the same price as wheaten bread, but from a dietetic standpoint it is accredited with very superior qualities. African travellers who have experimented with this food claim for it greater nutritive value, easier and quicker digestibility, finer flavor, and greater lightness of texture. Sir Henry Stanley, during his memorable journey up the Aruwhimi, chiefly lived on this fruit-bread and although his baking arrangements must have been primitive, he pronounced judgment in its favor compared with the wheaten article on almost all points. Whether it is free, as alleged by some enthusiasts, from gouty constituents, must be left for the present an open question, there being little evidence on that point. But if half the other claims advanced for it are true, it would seem to be just the sort of diet for convalescents and invalids, who have need to recuperate physically before their digestive organs can get into thorough working order. They would be willing enough to pay liberally for any form of food satisfying these requirements, and if banana bread would do that, its experimental introduction as an article of dietary at a renumerative price should not break down for lack of patronage.

Don't Be a Miller.

The American Miller publishes the following skit which first appeared some few years ago when the miller was said, in the mind of the farmer, not only to purloin the grist and the sack, but to have designs on the farmer's team as well.

Since time began it's been in vogue
To call the miller a heartless rogue,
He may be honest, true and brave,
But still he's called the city knave.

He grinds your grist and takes his toll,
Just what was right,—but then he stole;
But nothing good was ever said
About a miller until dead.

Some of his patrons will insist
He stole their sacks as well as grist,
And then they tried to make it seem
He followed around to steal the team.

The people call him city thief,
And of all the sinners he is chief.
He had better be dead and in sheol
Than to try to live by taking toll.

So if by labor you exist,
Just swear you'll never grind a grist.
Work at something, beg or bust,
Save yourself from getting cussed.

Beg, steal, lie or kill,
But never run a custom mill.
Of all the trades that ere had birth,
This one is more than life is worth.

So let me die with the sad refrain,
I was a miller. Can't live again;
The mills of the gods run sure and slow,
And sometimes a miller is allowed to go.

While the above was written fourteen years ago, the same old tradition holds in the rural districts. The miller, whether he runs a grist mill or operates a merchant establishment is a bete noir in the eyes of some people who from their readiness to suspect others might well stand watching themselves.

The Passing of Oatmeal.

Such is the title of an article recently published by an American journal. Don't you believe it! After many—a good many—of the advertised cereals of the day have vanished the good old staple will still be to the front. The passing of oatmeal will continue, as of yore, to have a close connection with a second helping. At least that is the opinion of the Scotch editor.

Scarcity of Wheat.

A consensus of opinion prevails as to the scarcity of wheat in Ontario. This is not in any way owing to the crop, which has been a bountiful one both as regards quantity and quality. As a matter of fact the honest tiller of the soil is out after the almighty dollar and this dollar he wants to see represented as the value of a bushel of wheat. 30,000 United States farmers have banded together not to sell their wheat under $1, and the Russian farmers have petitioned their Minister of the Interior to have a law passed fixing the standard price of wheat at $1. Last year's Manitoba wheat has practically been all exported and very little wheat will commence to move in Ontario before the latter part of September. Prices look as if they were tending higher, but in any case wheat will be a scarce commodity for the next few weeks.

A Big Yield.

Well authenticated information credits a farm in Norfolk County, Ontario, with a production of 1,410 bushels of red winter wheat obtained from 27 acres, or an average of 52 bushels. In some parts of this area the yield was 64 bushels. The grain is described as of excellent quality, weighing 63 to 65 pounds to the bushel.

Cereal Notes.

One of the large breakfast food concerns of Battle Creek, Mich., talks of building a factory in Winnipeg.

The Chamber of Commerce, Milwaukee, has passed a rule prohibiting members from trading in bucket shops.

Shipments of wheat from Argentina for the week were 976,000 bushels, against 128,000 last year. Shipments since January 1 have been 55,602,000 bushels, against 18,140,000 in 1902.

The British Consul at Canton, China, reports that Chinamen returning from America are creating a larger demand for flour, and that the importation in 1902 exceeded that of 1901 by 854,744 cwts. The flour nearly all comes from America.

The Great Lakes & St. Lawrence Transportation Co., with headquarters at Duluth, has entered the field for export flour from all points in the Northwest. It operates a line of boats of 2,200 tons capacity via the Welland canal to Quebec.

Wholesale Grocers,

OTTAWA.

FOREST CITY GOSSIP.

Office of THE CANADIAN GROCER.
365 Richmond street,
London, Ont., Sept. 7, 1903.

BUSINESS continues good since last writing. Wholesale houses are receiving satisfactory orders for general lines, sugars still preponderating. Monday being Labor Day a general suspension of business took place, the correspondence men in the wholesale houses only being on hand for an hour or so in the forenoon, and the retail stores, after early morning trade, closed for the balance of the day. Grocery travellers, however, went out on their usual trips, although nearly all travellers representing the other branches of commerce will remain at home until after the Western Fair.

The market season is now at its height, and all kinds of fruits and vegetables are displayed in tempting variety. The deliveries of grain are not so large as many buyers had expected, but this is accounted for by the fact that many farmers are busy at other work which demands immediate attention, and cannot spare the time to attend market. Prices are up to the average generally obtained at this season, and it is fully anticipated that much larger deliveries will be made before many weeks pass—In Western Ontario, the threshing returns are exhibiting a remarkably plump sample, the cool weather having allowed the heads to fill and the kernels to mature in prime condition. The prices paid here this week are, for wheat both old and new, 72 to 75c. per pushel; oats, 27¼ to 29¾c.; corn, 60 to 65c.; peas, 84 to 90c.; buckwheat, 51 to 55c.; barley, 38½ to 43c.; rye, 53 to 56c.

Both butter and eggs are exceedingly steady. The deliveries are large and the demand active for both products. Rolled butter ranged from 18 to 20c.; crocks, 16 to 18c., and creamery 21 to 23c. Eggs are obtained by storekeepers at 13 to 14c. and they are retailed over the city at 15 to 16c.

Consumers are presented with an endless variety of fruits from which to make choice. Plums are almost a drug on the market, and 12-quart baskets sell at 20 to 30c. Large consignments of peaches of every grade are procurable at reasonable figures; 12-quart baskets of early Crawfords are 25 to 50c.; 8-quart baskets of inferior grades 15 to 25c.

The Fire Underwriters' Association placed in effect this month a new tariff of rates that is causing the greatest indignation among the merchants of the city, who appear especially hard hit. Merchants who but recently have completed and entered into new premises, that have been fitted up to suit the most rigid requirements of the underwriters and were expecting a reduction from the old rate, find they are asked to pay now 50 to 80 per cent. higher rates than before, and it is more than possible that a public meeting will be called at once to discuss this very important matter.

W. A. McDougall, of the firm of Robt. Scates & Co., Carling street, was arrested yesterday afternoon by Assistant High Commisioner Lombard, of Montreal, and taken there on the charge of false pretenses. The trouble grows out of the business dealings of the firm. Friends of Mr. McDougall here are confident that the charge made against him will speedily be disproved.

Edward Parnell has been elected to the presidency of the Dominion Bakers' Association for a second term. This signal honor to Mr. Parnell is well deserved. He is at the head of two of the largest bread-making concerns in Canada, one in London and the other in Toronto.

On receipt of this number of THE CANADIAN GROCER, the Western Fair in this city will be in full swing. The preparations made and efforts put forth to uphold its high reputation are worthy of much praise. The business-like arrangements are certain of appreciation by the thousands who will be in attendance, should the weather be favorable. W.H.L.

THE AMERICAN INVASION.

Writing of the American invasion of Canada, a staff correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, who has been on the spot, uses these pregnant words: Thrown back by the arid belt marking the west of our great plains, this movement of population is now just beginning to turn toward the Northwest north of the international line, and the United States becomes for the first time a country of emigrants as well as immigrants.

The tides are yet far from equal so far as numbers go, the United States getting from Europe last year some 800,000 immigrants and giving to Canada, according to railway count from the St. Paul gateway, some 45,000. In matter of value as citizens or as an economic proposition, the balance is against the United States. While United Statesers protest, and justly, against the aggregation of misery, ignorance and wretchedness dumped upon the Atlantic coast, they are giving their northern neighbors experienced farmers, intelligent, trained in western agriculture, good citizens, the thrifty progressive sons of the men who turned the raw prairies into an agricultural empire, and who now seek new homes with a patrimony of money and experience which their fathers lacked.

NOVA SCOTIA APPLES.

James Hall, manager at Halifax for Furness, Withy & Co., who has returned from a trip through the fruit-growing districts of Nova Scotia, in speaking of the prospects, says: "The apples shipped to England from Halifax last year amounted to only about 80,300 barrels. The coming season the shipment from this port will be close to 350,000 barrels." The Furness, Withy Co. will run weekly steamers from Halifax. Mr. Hall spoke of the likelihood of 350,000 barrels offering for shipment via Halifax. The total crop of apples, an enormous one, is estimated at 400,000, or even 500,000 barrels.

A DEPARTMENT FOR RETAIL MERCHANTS.

Good Results.

LAST week a prominent cigar manufacturer informed THE GROCER that he had recently received two orders from British Columbia, and another dealer showed a letter covering a large order from a leading and wealthy grocery house in Newfoundland. Needless to say, both dealers are not only convinced of the interest now being taken by the retail grocery trade in the cigar and tobacco business, but also of the merits of THE CANADIAN GROCER as an advertising medium.

London Items.

There is nothing very new to note in the London column this week. Business keeps up to the expected. Below are given the Inland Revenue returns for the month ending August 31 :

Spirits, ex-warehouse.....	$5,710 76
Malt, "	6,682 15
Tobacco, "	1,180 27
Raw leaf, "	5,782 88
Cigars, ex-factory.....	11,059 86
" ex-warehouse	4,151 55
Other revenue	70 00
	$34,637 47

Compared with same month last year they show a trifling decrease, as the following will indicate :

Spirits, ex-warehouse	$6,132 97
Malt, "	5,623 23
Tobacco, "	1,440 61
Raw leaf, "	5,097 56
Cigars, ex-factory.....	11,007 24
" ex-warehouse	5,150 55
Other revenue.....	25 00
Total.....	$34,477 16

The London Western Fair opens the 11th inst. and closes the 19th. A very hearty interest is always taken in this event by the manufacturers, because of the fact of their customers throughout the country being present in large numbers, and a special effort is always made to entertain them. The retail cigar stores are already making elaborate preparations for displays during the coming fair, vieing with each other in the novelty and handsome general appearance of their windows.

The factory of Geo. Kelly & Co. is closed for the present, pending some expected change in the personnel of the firm.

Line, McDonald & Co., whom we have mentioned at an earlier date, are purposing moving into additional quarters, and expect to have same ready within the next week or two.

The cigarmakers in the city held what they termed a Fall fair in one of the skating rinks this last week, the proceeds of which were to be devoted to an object, the name of which was not divulged.

Making of Tobacco.

The Inland Revenue Act has been amended as follows :

Subsection 2 of section 260 of the said Act is repealed and the following is substituted therefor :

"2. Every wooden, metal or other package containing cavendish, plug or twist tobacco weighing one pound or over, and all packages containing fine-cut chewing tobacco or snuff weighing five pounds or over, shall have printed or marked thereon the registered number of the manufactory, the number of the Inland Revenue Division in which the manufactory is situated, and the gross weight, the tare and net weight of the tobacco in each package : Provided, that cut tobacco, fine-cut shorts (the refuse of fine-cut chewing tobacco), refuse scraps, cuttings, stems and sweepings of tobacco, may be sold in bulk as material, and without the payment of duty, by one manufacturer directly to another manufacturer, or for exportation, under such restrictions and regulations as the Department of Inland Revenue prescribes ; and provided further, that wood, metal, paper or other material may be used separately or in combination for packing tobacco or cigars, under such regulations as the Department of Inland Revenue prescribes."

Presentation to Alan Iler.

Alan C. Iler, the accountant of The McAlpin Consumers Tobacco Co., an active player in the ranks of the Toronto Lacrosse Club, was made the recipient of a very handsome presentation from his fellow-employes on the occasion of his marriage last week. The presentation was made by Mr. Pinchin, the manager of the company, on behalf of 125 employes, and consisted of a combination secretary and bookcase. An address was also read, referring to the high esteem in which Mr. Iler is held by the firm and his fellow-employes.

Marguerite Sales.

The increase in the demand for the "Marguerite" cigar, manufactured by The Tuckett Cigar Company, is best illustrated by giving their sales in August, 1897, the year in which the brand was placed on the market, and each successive August up to the same month this year. The output as given by the factory books is as follows, the returns being typical of every other month as well:

August, 1897	73,000
" 1898	91,000
" 1899	202,000
" 1900	303,000
" 1901	363,000
" 1902	474,000
" 1903	1,087,000

Both the Hamilton and London factories, although working to their fullest capacity, are unable to supply the demand and the firm have recently secured large and centrally located premises in Montreal where manufacturing will shortly be commenced on an extensive scale.

Tobacco in Belgium.

The Belgians are notoriously great smokers. To arrive at a better understanding of this fact, it is sufficient to say that the farmers devote 4,942 acres each year to the cultivation of tobacco; and notwithstanding the yield of 18,700,000 pounds, 21,000,000 pounds are imported. In 1901 there were cultivated in Belgium and imported a total of 38,966,200 pounds of tobacco, making 6.6 pounds per capita of the whole population. Besides this, there were imported 59,400 pounds of cigarettes.

An Old "Ad" Revived.

A cigar dealer in Halifax about a year ago placed a large quantity of burnt matches in his show window with a large card, making the statement that 138,563 matches had been used in lighting cigars purchased at his store during two months. This may not be new, but it was new to many people, judging by the way they gazed at that pile of matches and wondered.

What It Once Meant to Smoke.

THE practice of smoking for pleasure met with much opposition when introduced into the old world. The Sultans of Turkey regarded smoking as a flagrant crime, and offenders were chastised by having the pipes pushed through their noses. This must be regarded as severe, but it was mild compared with the punishment of Russia, where those caught smoking had their noses cut off. True, those two countries could not be included among highly civilized lands, but even the Popes of Rome issued decrees of ex-communication against those smoking tobacco.

Such drastic measures as the foregoing could not be tolerated among liberty-loving Englishmen, but even they felt the hand of the oppressor, and under certain regulations in some parts of England the pipe could not be smoked in public. In the records of Methold Manor, Norfolk, is an entry in the court books, dated October 4, 1659, as follows: "Wee agree that any person that is taken smookeing tobacco in the street forfeit one shilling for every time so taken, and that it be put to the use of the toone. We present Nicholas Bamber for smookeing in the street, and do amerce him one shilling."

At a parish meeting at Winteringham, Lincolnshire, on January 6, 1685, it was resolved: "None shall smoke tobacco in the streets, upon paine of two shillings for every default." Schoolmasters were forbidden to smoke. In the rules of Chigwell School, founded in 1629, it is stated: The master must be a man of sound religion, neither Papist nor Puritan, of a grave behavior, and sober and honest conversation, no tippler, no haunter of ale-houses, and no puffer of tobacco." I am afraid such model school-masters are rarely to be found at the present time.

Smoke Rings.

In Rhodesia, South Africa, it is said the best crop of tobacco ever grown there was that of last year.

Germany, last year, imported and consumed of raw leaf, 50,956 tons; smoking, 542 tons; cigars and cigarettes, 665 tons; chewing and snuff, 53 tons. A ton is about 2,200 pounds.

A Canadian tobacconist who makes a more than ordinary hot chase after the nimble dollar, has evolved a scheme for the loaning of umbrellas on rainy days. He bought a dozen fairly good umbrellas, and these he loans out to business men in the neighborhood, who get caught down town in a storm, and don't care to go home in the rain. He requires a deposit of $1.50, and when the umbrella is returned $1.25 is refunded.

The increased demand for Turkish tobacco has proved a blessing to the farmers in Greece. Output last year 8,000,000 pounds.

"The Canadian Grocer" had a visit from Frank Inksater, of the firm of John Brand & Co., Elmira, N.Y., during Exhibition week.

A cigar made of leaf grown in Ireland is reported by an Irish member of Parliament to be strong enough to support a drowning man.

The new 10c. plug of Myrtle recently placed on the market by The Tuckett Co. is a pronounced success and is already meeting with a good demand.

In Paris the cab driver is prohibited by the authorities from smoking when driving through the streets.

As a reward for the giving up of tobacco, a Yorkshire manufacturer recently offered a sovereign to each of his employes who neither smokes, chews, nor snuffs tobacco during the ensuing twelve months.

A DISQUISITION ON STARCH.

ONE of the most staple articles to be found in the grocery, starch, is also most widely distributed in nature. Dr. T. Lamb Phipson, writing in an exchange, gives some very interesting information as to starch and the raw material from which it is manufactured.

The potato, in its natural state, contains from 15 to 20 per cent. of starch, and when artificially dried it will yield over 80 per cent. It is our cheapest and most abundant source of this product, though a large quantity of starch is also produced from wheat and rice, the sago-palm, Indian corn, etc. All plants contain this peculiar principle in the seeds, the root, or bulbs, and in various other tissues. When pure, it is a soft, white powder, devoid of taste or odor, not dissolving in water, but, when boiled with the latter, making a paste which is so often used as an adhesive; moreover, starch forms the greater portion of the flour with which bread and pastry are made.

Wheat starch was known to the ancients long before the potato was discovered ; for Pliny describes it perfectly in his " Natural History " written in the first century of our era. He states that the method of obtaining it was invented by " the inhabitants of the island Chio," the name of the actual inventor being unknown. Like every great and useful discovery, it was the result of the observation of a large section of the human race—the product of numerous minds.

Although starch is found in all plants, there are very few which contain a sufficient quantity to allow of its economical extraction. Wheat, maize, rice, the sago-palm and the potato, are some of these, and the last named is the most important from a purely commercial point of view. To such an extent is the potato grown for foreign starch manufactories, that some years ago the Belgian Government offered a large price to any person who would indicate another equally lucrative and economical source of starch, so that the large quantities of potatoes now used for starch-making might not be withdrawn from the markets as an article of food. Many eminent men competed for this prize, but it was awarded to none ; in fact, the problem is impossible to solve.

The horse-chestnut contains a good deal of starch in its fruit, but it is slightly bitter, and somewhat yellow. The dahlia and Jerusalem artichoke contain large amounts of a kind of starch called " inuline," but it is not equal to potato-starch for the general purposes to which the latter is applied. Rice yields a very excellent kind of starch, and might, perhaps, in certain circumstances compete with the potato.

The manufacture of starch appears a simple enough process, but as at present carried out it is susceptible of much improvement. Wheat is soaked in water till soft, and then pressed, the starch depositing itself from the milky fluid which flows away. It is then washed and dried. Potatoes are rasped, and treated with water in the same way, the deposit of starch being likewise washed and dried. Simple as this appears, it is a somewhat long and tedious process in actual practice, and the substances which the washing waters contain easily undergo fermentation, in hot water, producing a most offensive odor. Several starch works have been closed for want of a practical method of dealing with their waste water.

The uses of starch are numerous. Besides its use in the laundry for stiffening linen, it is largely employed in the theatrical world (and elsewhere as a powder for the face and hair), especially the starch obtained from rice. When dried upon iron plates in a certain manner, potato-starch is so well made to imitate sago and tapioca, that these different products can only be distinguished by the most careful microscopic examination ; the grains of potato starch being much larger than those of wheat, rice, or sago, are often readily detected in this manner. When grains of starch are examined with a polorizing microscope, each grain shows a black cross or a white cross, according as the two nical prisms in such microscopes are crossed or parallel to each other.

Starch is manufactured in enormous quantities to supply various industries : The textile arts, paper-making, glucose-making, the manufacture of oxalic acid, formic acid, etc., book-binding, calico-printing, laundry work, all require it. In Germany and Belgium it is made chiefly from the potato ; in Russia, from wheat ; in the United States, from maize (Indian corn) ; and in England, from imported rice, from wheat and from the potato. We also import from tropical countries sago, arrowroot and tapioca, which are starches derived from certain exotic plants.

The uses of starch as gum or paste, and in surgery for stiffening bandages, are too well known to need more than a passing mention here.

A characteristic property of starch is to introduce an intense blue color when in contact with iodine, but this color is evanescent. Many years ago a violet-colored ink was produced in Paris and was known for a period as " the ink of the forty thieves " The writing made with this ink faded and disappeared when the document was kept for some time shut up in a box, or when it was heated before a fire. In 1858 the writer of this article made an analysis of that ink in the laboratory of Professor Pisani at Paris, and found it was composed of starch and iodine. When its composition was made known to the authorities it was forbidden to be manufactured ; and the Paris detectives were for some time actively engaged in tracking individuals who manufactured or used this ink for fraudulent purposes.

Wheat starch is generally preferred to potato starch by bookbinders and in the laundry, because, they say, it is not so apt to clog the ironing tools, and because wheat starch can be kept longer without spoiling, so that it does not lose its adhesive qualities so soon. Some blue color, such as cobalt blue, or Prussian blue, is often added to starch for laundry use ; the blue shade thus produced destroying the yellow tinge of imperfectly bleached linen or cotton, and sometimes a little borax is added to produce more gloss.

Over 300,000 tons of potato starch are annually manufactured in Germany ; the best quality is very white and glossy, but the second quality is more or less colored. The former consists of the first deposit in the settling vats, the latter of the second deposit, and is sometimes quite brown.

Calico printers can only use the purest starch, which is quite devoid of acid, alkali, lime, and other impurities. They test for acid by printing on colored cotton a pattern of starch paste, and observing whether any change of color occurs.

Efforts are being made to improve the manufacture of starch ; in the first place, to obtain a greater yield ; in the next, to prevent the vile odour of the waste waters after washing the starch deposits.

THIS is the Chinese name of Confucius, the celebrated apostle and philosopher, who established the Chinese religion as well as the moral and political code of China.

On this page is a cut of his portrait, by Larousse, and said to be a faithful picture of the Oriental Pontiff who existed five centuries before Christ. At his feet are two of the grand priests.

A curious fact is that a Canadian product is connected with that epoch and this celebrated man. It is

Chinese Starch.

The Chinese, or "sons of heaven," were usually clothed in white linen. Now, to give white linen its proper beauty, the use of starch is necessary. Laundering, starching and glazing of linen has become in China, not only an art, but an industry.

The secret of the manufacture of this special starch has been unveiled to the present proprietor of Chinese Starch, and by him this famous article has been distributed with enormous success to all parts of Canada.

Canadian laundresses do not now complain; they even find pleasure in their work, the iron glides so smoothly over the board; thanks to that famous auxiliary, Chinese Starch.

This ad. discloses not only an historical fact, but good advice—USE

CHINESE STARCH.

DEPARTMENT OF ADVERTISING SUGGESTION AND CRITICISM

Edited by
W. Arthur Lydiatt,
TORONTO.

NOTE—Herein are discussed the principles and practice of advertising. Subscribers are invited to send Mr. Lydiatt specimens of their newspaper and other advertising, for the purpose of review in this department. Address care of Department of Advertising, THE CANADIAN GROCER.

Does the Money you Save (?) by not Advertising Compensate you for the Loss of Trade you Might Get?

ON several different occasions I've mentioned that I would like to hear from GROCER readers giving some opinions regarding the value of advertising, some of their experiences, both of the profitable and unprofitable kind, and asking me for explicit suggestions on overcoming some of the difficulties with which they meet in endeavoring to extend their trade.

Up to the time of writing I have not been "bothered" any by a large number of interested letters—on the contrary I've been a little disappointed that my readers should have hesitated to write me, as requested. Yet, in an indirect way, I've learned of a few instances where different readers might have secured some very interesting and valuable advice, if they had only taken the trouble to write and ask for it.

Now I am particularly interested in having GROCER readers write me on the subject of their advertising, because, as previously intimated, the bringing into open discussion of the opinions, experiences and difficulties of individual readers is going to make this department most interesting and of the most practical value to all readers.

It has occurred to me that perhaps if I started some form of competition it would awaken sufficient interest to cause a few letters to come in. So I have arranged the "Good Advertising Competition," particulars of which are given this week.

I will continue this competition for several months—just as long, in fact, as GROCER readers show any interest in it.

All ads. which are received will have attention just the same as if sent in the ordinary way.

It is to be hoped that every reader of THE GROCER who takes any interest whatever in advertising will participate in this competition. The smaller storekeepers in hamlets of 50 to 100 population will have just as much chance to win recognition as the grocer in the larger towns and cities, as many of them will possibly have the most interesting experience to tell.

The prizes to be awarded are insignificant when compared with the real value and importance of the points brought out in open discussion through relating the experiences of different GROCER readers.

Good Advertising Monthly Competition.

For the purpose of encouraging readers of THE CANADIAN GROCER to do better advertising and send the results of their efforts to this department for review, two dollars will be given to the reader who shall send in the most meritorious ad. during one month.

Any subscriber of THE GROCER may participate, and any number of ads. may be sent in, an award being made at the end of each month.

Some particulars regarding local conditions and the extent of your advertising should accompany each lot of ads., including a statement as to the results accruing from the ads. submitted.

Ads. outlining special sales or new ideas in merchandising are desirable, as are also regular ads. of a superior order of merit.

Don't think your ads. are not sufficiently good to win a prize. Try anyway. If at first you don't succeed, try hard to write a specially good ad., run it in your local paper and then enter the competition again. It will be but a friendly contest, and I hope all will participate.

In case only one ad. shall be received in any one month and it does not, in the opinion of the editor, possess sufficient interest to merit it, an award need not be made. However, it is not expected that this contingency will arise.

All correspondence should be addressed to W. Arthur Lydiatt, care of CANADIAN GROCER, Toronto, Ont.

When desired, the identity of correspondents need not be divulged.

In the competition for the best ad. sent in during any one month, in order to judge the individual merits of ads. sent me, it will be necessary to know a few particulars regarding the results the ad. produced, the population from which it is possible for you to draw trade—some idea of the extent of your business, and whether you regularly run similar ads. or not. I do not mean that these questions should be answered specifically, but that such general information relating to the conditions under which business is done and the extent of your advertising as is here outlined, shall be given.

Send in as many ads. as you like during the month, and if you don't succeed one month, be sure and try the next month, endeavoring all the time to be steadily improving your advertising.

I leave it to readers of THE GROCER to make this competition the interesting and valuable one it can be made, and earnestly invite the co-operation of all in my endeavor to be of real practical assistance to those who take an interest in this department.

It is some time since I received a letter from G. R. Ashwell & Sons, of Chilliwack, B.C., enclosing a circular which they send out every month to all parties on their mailing list, whether customers or not.

There is nothing particularly distinctive about the circular, it is practically a list of prices on the different lines of goods they carry, and if there's anything at all in the circular that ought to be interesting to those who receive it, it will be these prices.

The circular, as a whole, lacks any strong characteristic which would impress a reader. It contains no particularly convincing arguments, and though "sale price" is mentioned in several instances, I see no other reference to any special sale.

I would suggest that my correspondent get these circulars up in the form of a "store paper" telling of the arrival of new goods as "news" and, of course, enumerating such special offerings as may be at the time most interesting.

This would be sent each month to every person whose trade it seemed possible to procure.

The remarks re store papers in this department last week will prove interesting in this connection.

I'll be glad to receive some more of these circulars at some future time and hope they may show some improvement, as no doubt they will.

MERCHANTS

Why do you not give 13 eggs for a dozen? Simply because you can conveniently count out 12 eggs which are the standard dozen. Why do you give 17 ounces or more for 1 lb? Simply because on the scales you are using you have to guess and are never sure whether you have just 16 ounces or not. The Toledo Scale Counts the ounces and shows them to both buyer and seller, just as plainly as you count the eggs, so you may give 1 lb. 1 oz. for a pound if you wish, but there is no necessity for your so doing if you use a Toledo Scale, as there is absolutely no such thing as down or overweight on a Toledo Scale.

C. WILSON & SON, Scale Manufacturers,
TORONTO. HAMILTON, MAR. 19th, 1903.

DEAR SIRS:—

I have used your BALL-BEARING COMPUTING SCALE for several years now and I believe it has paid for itself a good many times over during that period. Most of my profits went to my customers in overweights in the past. Now I have a little left for myself.

Yours truly, ——

The First Step

This man is writing for our 1903 catalogue: something has happened in his store to make him think, and when a man gets thinking something generally moves.

This time it's that pound and ounce scale that's going to move; he's tired of having his clerks give overweight.

Now he's finding out what this Nearweight Detector is.

Suppose you do the same thing. Our catalogue tells it all, shows how to

One Year's Advertising FOR $1.00

One hundred forceful, straight-from-the-shoulder ads. for grocers—copy for two ads. a week for a year—for one dollar.

"100 Good Ads. for a Grocery Store" is the title of a book of advertising suggestion for grocers, compiled by W. Arthur Lydiatt, Editor Department of Advertising Suggestion in THE CANADIAN GROCER.

An interesting and instructive article treating with the grocers' advertising proposition is included, together with nearly 100 short, pithy sentences for ad. headlines, show cards, etc.

If you fully realized what a great big dollar's worth this book actually is, you'd hasten to secure a copy before they are all gone.

Subjects Being Discussed at Ottawa

Written for The Canadian Grocer by a Member of Parliament

ON Monday, Labor Day, the House took a holiday, that is to say, it sat for but two hours, and on Tuesday it plunged into general business after a prolonged railway bill of fare since August 11. The vigor with which the tired members took hold of affairs of a general character, the number of short, sharp, pithy speeches made, and the general business-like atmosphere that pervaded the whole sitting was indeed a treat after the monotony of the last ten days of the great debate.

Mr. Fitzpatrick again took up his Act to Amend the Criminal Code, and a lively debate took place over his announcement that he proposed to drop the clause which was to make it a criminal offence to sell to persons under 18 years of age anything in the way of tobacco. It will be remembered that early in the session a great agitation was started by the Women's Christian Temperance Union to the end that the importation, manufacture and sale of cigarettes should be totally prohibited. A resolution to the effect that in the opinion of the House this course should be adopted, was introduced by Mr. Bickerdike, and carried by an immense majority. It was as a partial concession to this vote that the Minister of Justice introduced his new clause in the code. Total prohibition was not granted, but it was proposed to make it very hard for those vendors who sold to the young. While this was not all that the promoters of the movement were urging, it was at least a move in the right direction, and, as such, was acceptable to the vast majority of those members who had supported Mr. Bickerdike's motion. Mr. Fitzpatrick gave as a reason for the withdrawal of the clause that he had received protests from the W.C.T.U. all over Canada against his proposed legislation, because it was not going far enough, and from the trade from all parts because it was going too far. Failing to please either, he proposed to withdraw the section in hope of being able next year at his leisure to frame a much better enactment. Having taken his seat the storm broke out, and member after member, quite irrespective of party, arose and filed his strenuous objection to the withdrawal of the section. It was pointed out that half a loaf was much better than no bread, that Parliament must legislate in its wisdom after hearing both sides, and, irrespective of protests, that the general opinion of the House was in favor of the clause, and that it should stand. So strenuous was the opposition to withdrawal that the Minister finally arose again and promised that this very session, instead of six months hence, he would introduce a new and better clause, and with this the House had to be content.

As a matter of fact a better clause could, surely, without much difficulty, be drafted. As was pointed out by one of the speakers the proposed enactment was very easy of evasion. It only required an 18-year-old boy to become the purchasing agent of a group of younger boys to get round the whole thing. In the opinion of the writer it would be much better to hit at the smoker himself. If a clause were passed making any boy under 18 found smoking cigarettes liable to a fine, and failing that to a short term of confinement, apart, of course, from the regular "prisoners" in a jail, the proper person, to wit, the parent, would be reached, and, after payment of a fine on behalf of his erring offspring, we venture to assert that parental authority would be so exerted that a repetition of the offence would not happen very soon. The whole trouble nowadays seems to be the lack of home discipline. We venture to say that even 30 years ago legislation of this kind was totally unnecessary, because the father of that day took good care to see that his child did not do what was bad for him. Now, however, it is quite different, and Young Canada does about what he likes, or, perhaps, just what he likes, till Old Canada's pocket is touched, but just at that point Old Canada wields the rod with unabated vigor and Young Canada is made to feel that the way of the transgressor is hard. Of course the difficulty lies in the imprisonment in the alternative. To almost all of us it would seem not only hard but inadvisable to put a young lad in jail for what is after all not a crime or even an immoral act, for what is more in the nature of an offence against public health, and yet if it were simply the imposition of a fine, with no punishment in the alternative, the average lad, who is of course blissfully free from the cares of property, would go scot free, for his father would not put up for him once in ten times, unless to save him from a worse fate. If the parent did not have to suffer for the boy's offence he would not greatly worry about the matter, and hence would not be very likely to give that home "instruction," the lack of which is really the cause of the whole trouble. We will wait with interest to see how the clever Minister of Justice will steer clear of these various reefs and quicksands.

Then up came the question of the increase of judges' salaries, always a vexed one, in which members divide freely in opinion, the farmer representatives usually setting their faces against any rise, and the professional and business men favoring it. The tendency was most noticeable in this debate, and opinions seemed to vary from the view that a judge was a pampered plutocrat, to the opposite that he was starved to death and so inadequately provided for that it was a positive disgrace to the country. One gentleman, an advocate for a retention of present rates, pointed out that whenever there was a vacancy there was a rush for the position, and, as he expressed it, the Minister of Justice did not have to appoint a commission to find a man to take the job. This is undoubtedly true, but where this gentleman missed the mark was that he quite eliminated the question of fitness. There are no doubt tens of thousands who would undertake the duty of Premier of England or President of the United States, but there are certainly not even scores truly fitted for the performance of the functions of those high positions. We are inclined to think that with regard to the county judgeships there is plenty of good material to be had at or about present prices, if we choose to bring the question down to a purely commercial basis. The position of county judge is for the most part an easy one, the incumbents are not at all hard worked, and their place of residence being for the most part in towns of moderate size, the expense of living is not so great as it is in the cities. Even in their case, however, a moderate increase, say of four or five hundred dollars, would not be out of the way, when we consider how the rewards for all forms of work have advanced in the last few years, as also the cost of living. The High Court judges are undoubtedly entitled to better pay, and it is in the interest of the country that they should get it. Before them come the more important cases, both civil and criminal, and for their posts we require the best the land can furnish. It is a notorious fact that whenever a vacancy occurs on the High Court Bench it is impossible to get the leaders of the Bar to accept the position, for the very good reason that a leading lawyer makes easily from twice to three times the amount now offered for a judicial salary. We have indeed been fortunate in securing very fair men for the positions even as it is, but it is increasingly difficult to get them. When we consider the comparatively small number of superior court judges, a very small amount would provide an increase of say $2,000 each, which is the very least they should receive. The position of these judges is important, not only because of the heavy cases coming before them, but also because their judgments form precedents for and become binding upon the judges of the courts below—the county courts. As we have from six to eight county court judges to one superior in rank, we can form some idea of the importance of this aspect of the case.

In this busy day Sir Wilfrid took a hand by introducing his resolution to provide a yearly subsidy of $133,333.33 for ten years to procure direct steamship service between Canada and France, twelve trips in the Summer and six in the Winter. This is not the first time an effort of this kind had been made, for $100,000 as a yearly subsidy had been offered to a syndicate, but found too small. There will be little, if any, opposition to this grant, since its object is to increase trade with a country which is capable of becoming a very large consumer of Canadian products, and with which as yet we have not been doing the trade we should. Under the French treaty we enjoy certain advantages in the fish and lumber trades, but these we lose when we do not ship direct. We know that both these lines can be very largely developed. We have by no means reached the limit of our fisheries' output, and if it turns out that in Hudson and James Bay we have rich undeveloped fisheries, France should be able to take a large quantity produced from that source when we have rail communication established with those inland seas. As for lumber we must recollect that that includes one of the products, pulp. If we have not reached the limit of our fisheries, we have certainly only got to the beginning of our riches in pulp. France is one of the largest consumers of this product. We are about to build railways through a region which we have every reason to believe is covered by the finest spruce forests anywhere to be found, and when in say four or five years the construction is completed, Canada will undoubtedly become the largest pulp producer in the world. It is well to make a humble beginning against the day when this new channel of trade will be required, and even as it is, our present resources are equal to a very considerable drain.

On Tuesday the members found mailed to each a copy of what may be considered the first campaign leaflet of what is said to be the coming election. It consists of but a few lines, in which "Cox can't wait" figures twice, and which would not be very objectionable but for a part which reads "See the Sifton Yacht and Sutherland Mansion—Shout Greater Canada, there is money in it." We sincerely hope that the campaign, if campaign there is to be, will be fought on broad issues, and not on personalities, which so disfigured the fights of earlier times. The reference to Messrs. Sifton and Sutherland undoubtedly means something, or it would not be put there. Taken with the context the innuendo is clear enough—it is that these gentlemen are unlawfully enriching themselves at the public expense. If they are doing so why do their opponents not make use of parliamentary machinery and unearth their wrong-doing, as has been done time and again in our history—if they are not, then why make the burden of public life heavier by seeking to blacken character. The fact is, Mr. Borden, the courteous and broad-minded leader of the Opposition is away, but for which we much doubt if the document would have been allowed to see the day. Such publications naturally stir up political rancor, from which this Parliament thus far has been extremely free, and it is indeed sincerely to be hoped that the Liberals will not reply in kind, seeking, as is usual in such cases, to "better their instruction."

About the Redistribution measure we shall not attempt to say very much. Where political lives are at stake, as is always the case in such measures, there is always an intensity of feeling, and those who have followed the politics of Canada for the past twenty years will well remember the exciting and acrimonious debates which followed the introduction of the Conservative measures in 1882 and 1892. It is probably pretty well conceded that to follow county boundries is a wise and fair thing to do, removing, as it does in very large measure, the temptation to legislate for direct political advantage. But even within county boundries there are often cases where a line dividing a county into two seats if run from north to south means one seat for each party, which if run directly from east to west means two seats for one party. In such a case it is hardly to be expected that a Government will not take advantage of its political majority to get the better of the deal, and to this extent no doubt the present party in power has been a gainer by the measure.

A HISTORICAL CAUSERIE.

IT is a never-failing source of interest to turn over the files of an old newspaper, provided the paper has been a power in its day. To be able to say, "Dear, dear, and that is how a still unforgotten incident struck those to whom it was a living fact," is a pleasure to the ordinary human being. In the same way it is interesting to note the old doings of a manufacturing house which has been a power in the land, and a glance through the old show-cases of a firm of this class recalls many a partly forgotten historical incident.

One of the most interesting of such is now on view at the Crystal Palace, London, Eng., and belongs to Messrs. Batty & Co., of "Nabob" fame. Founded in 1824, for over half a century the firm celebrated many an event by issuing a new sauce; and the case referred to contains sample bottles of these forgotten condiments with their original labels.

In the early years of the firm's existence, an event occurred which marks the third period of halcyon days for Great Britain, the accession of the late Queen Victoria; there is a sauce bottle with a beautifully engraved head of the young Queen. About this time there is a curious bottle called The United Army and Navy, the navy being pictured with the doings of an officer's squad impressing recruits. There is also a very good portrait of "the Duke," which the books of the firm show to have been very popular indeed.

Coming a little way down the roll of years, there is "The Princess Royal," issued in celebration of the young Princess' birth. There is the "Guildhall," the label being the city coat of arms; and there is "Jenny Lind," the singer whose name aroused more extended interest than any other before or since.

The next bottle to attract attention is "The Universal," a curiously-shaped bottle, the label being a drawing of the original 1851 Exhibition, the bottle neck rising from out the centre transept, the lower part of the label being full of figures and vehicles, the ladies in crinolines, and the men in bell bottoms. Almost next to it is one, "The New Volunteer Rifle Corps," issued when excitement ran high over the massacres in the Indian Mutiny; there is a freshness about the sentiment of this, recalling, as it does, the citizens drilling in Finsbury Fields, not far from the site of the firm's original factory. Then comes "The Garibaldi," an Italian flask-shaped bottle, with a highly-colored label, the patriot's red shirt, from which a well-known ladies' garment was named, being most conspicuous.

A few years give us "The Royal Danish," with portraits of our present King and Queen; to be followed by "The Grand Duchess Marie," "Highland Sauce," contemporaneous with some celebrated pictures of the late Chas. Keene; and a "Colonial Sauce," which depicts the colonies as the granary and larder of the Old Country, thus foreshadowing the new policy, which, no matter what we may individually think of it, is still (alas or fortunately) very much in the air.

Whatever may be thought of the good taste or otherwise of making use of historical persons and events to provide attractive labels, with which to sell comestibles, they become very interesting after a lapse of years. All those mentioned were issued during the first 50 years of the firm's existence, and form but a small part of their list; such celebrated doctors as Kitchener and Southwood Smith contributing recipes, which, with care in manufacture and business methods, then far in advance of their contemporaries, made the name of Batty of world-wide fame.

The firm has been under new management for some months past, and it will be interesting for the Canadian trade to know that Mr. J. C. Burlingham, the general manager, is going to make great efforts to do increased business on this side of the water, so that "Nabob Sauce," which for some time past has been in a state of arrested development, may again, before long, command good sales throughout the Dominion. Messrs. Batty & Co. would be glad to appoint an agent in Montreal.

It may be mentioned that only this year (1903) the firm were again awarded the Gold Medal for excellence of quality and packing.

AN APPRECIATION.

MR. RICHARD QUAYLE, who has recently disposed of his general store business at the Helen Mine to The Lake Superior Consolidated Power Co., the owners of the mine, writing "The Grocer" to have his address changed to Ishpeming, says: "I appreciate very much the kind treatment accorded me by the wholesale houses during the year that I was in business on my own account. When I started in I was practically a stranger to them all. Last Fall it became necessary to lay in a Winter supply. (As we cannot get anything in to the mine in the Winter.) My purchases amounted to very nearly seventeen thousand dollars, but I did not have a particle of trouble getting all the goods I wanted. I never sent an order to any house that was turned down, but, on the contrary, was filled promptly and without question. The confidence they manifested is surely very gratifying to me." Among those who treated me so kindly and with such consideration I would mention Messrs. Eby Blain Co., Thos. Kinnear & Co., of Toronto; and W. H. Gillard & Co., F. W. Fearman Co., and Geo. Tuckett & Sons, of Hamilton; Leitch Bros., Oak Lake, Man.; Gordon, Ironsides & Faresto and Smith Bros., Soo, Ont.; and in dry goods, etc., Jno. Macdonald & Co., of Toronto, and Knox, Morgan & Co., of Hamilton. I think your journal very ably edited, and read it with interest and profit. It is certainly deserving the support of the trade."

Meat Supply for Ocean Liners.

THE enormous quantities of foods of various kinds consumed on the great ocean liners is almost incredible. The 107 great liners of the Hamburg-American, for instance, were in actual service, during 1902, 318 days average each. A total of 4,849,935 rations were furnished during the year, besides 38,990 infant rations. This distribution is about as follows: 2,215 for cabin passengers, 5,679 steerage, 1,029 for the officers' mess, 6,345 for crew and laborers, 308 for soldiers, and 124 for infants per day. A grand total of 3,743,287 lb. of meats of all kinds were consumed. An excellent refrigerating system allows the use of large quantities of fresh meats. The itemized fare for 1902 for this company alone is as follows: 6,196 beef, 2,073 calves, 8,775 sheep, 2,484 hogs, all first-class material; 397,319 lb. salt pork and bacon, 238,438 lb. preserved meat, 26,206 cans of various meat preparations. Specialties comprise 5,797 lb. turtles, 27,276 lb. deer, 351,112 lb. and 50,284 pieces fresh fish, 58,013 boxes and 23,250 lb. prepared fish, 1,113 tons of herrings, 31,316 lb. of crawfish and lobsters, 282,869 oysters, 311,354 lb. and 59,154 head of fowl, 159,256 lb. smoked meat and hams, 81,144 lb. of sausages, 284,248 lb. cheese, besides 11,620 tins meat extract, kaviar, etc.

Cheese Markets.

Belleville, Sept. 12.—At the meeting of the Cheese Board held here to-day, 2,160 boxes were registered, 2,100 white, balance colored. Magrath got 300 at 11⅜c.; Alexander, 90 at 11⅜c.; Watkins, 70; Hodgson, 100 at 11¼c.; 11 3-16 to 11¼c. bid on balance.

Cowansville, Que., Sept. 12.—At the weekly meeting of the Eastern Townships' Dairymen's Exchange here to-day 39 factories offered 1,614 boxes of cheese for 11c. and 71 boxes for 10 15-16c. D. McPherson & Co., 283 boxes for 11c.; Frank Duckett, 444 boxes for 11c.; Fred Fowler, 136 boxes for 11c.; Jas. Alexander, 26 boxes for 10⅞c. and A. A. Ayer & Co., 112 boxes at 10⅞c.; 158 boxes unsold. Hodgson Bros. bought 149 boxes of butter for 19⅜c.; Jas. Dalrymple & Co., 100 boxes for 19⅞c., 142 boxes for 19⅜c. and 84 boxes for 19½c.; Jas. Alexander, 295 boxes for 19⅜c.; Hugh Allen, 35 boxes for 19⅞c., 65 boxes for 19½c. and 190 boxes for 19⅜c.; 380 boxes unsold.

Iroquois, Sept. 12.—Nine hundred and eighty-five cheese, including 40 white, were boarded here to-day. About half sold on board at 11c.; balance on curb at board prices. Sales divided about equally between the buyers, Smythe, Ault, Weir and Johnston.

Cornwall, Sept. 13.—At the Cornwall Cheese Board Saturday 1,574 boxes were boarded, of which 628 were white and 946 were colored. All sold at 11⅛c.

London, Sept. 12.—Only four factories boarded here on Saturday, the offerings being as follows:—Northwood, 190 boxes; Mapleton, 140; Firby, 100; Ballymote, 170; total, 600 boxes. The bids were 11⅛ and 11 3-16c. Northwood and Mapleton sold at 11 3-16c.

French Butter Industry.

WRITING in The Agricultural Gazette, Mr. James Long says:—Butter making in France is very much like butter making in England in this respect—that there are some who realize high prices, and many who realize low prices. A few English owners of Jersey cattle, who are at the same time enterprising people, obtain large yields of butter per cow and high prices per pound. Many others realize moderate prices, and thousands absolutely low prices. In France the most capable makers reach up to 2s. 6d. a pound for their butter. I have known an instance in which 2s. 8d. was obtained; one of the farmers we visited was obtaining about 2s. 2d. On the other hand, the average farmer of the districts around Bayeux and Isigny, which supply their special brand to the Paris market or to private buyers, obtain prices equal to the best produce of England, while the multitude who send their produce to Paris to take its chance, or who supply the blending-house owners, have to be content with just what their butter fetches. The blending-house in France is in one way practically what the creamery is in Ireland; but, instead of purchasing the milk, it purchases the ready-made butter, which, after blending, is graded, chiefly for the British market. Now, it is obvious that if there are three or four qualities of blended butter, there must be three of four qualities made by the farmers. But in all probability, as in England, there are more. The process of blending is not a very delicate process, but it is entertaining if it is not appetising, and a highly edible article is turned out, which is chiefly consumed in London. The mild Norman and Brittany blend is well known in the metropolis, and in my experience it has found its way into many middle-class families and substantial hotels and restaurants, and is there regarded as the supremely right article—I speak of the best brand—being delicate and mild, and always sweet for some days after its arrival.

An English Cheese Fair.

At the August Lancaster cheese fair, says Grocery World, the pitch comprised 65 dairies and 1,129 cheese, an increase of nine dairies and 56 cheese on the corresponding fair last year. The cheese was of a nice even quality, and smartly presented. There was a brisk demand, and a clearance was effected in 20 minutes. The prices ranged from 55s. to 61s. 6d. per cwt. There was a large attendance, including the dealers from Preston, Ulverston, Dalton, and Kendal, besides local buyers.

Advantage of Regularity.

The London (England) Saturday Review urges Canadian shippers to pay more attention to regularity in timing the arrival of their shipments.

Until they do so, it is contended, they will be at a serious disadvantage in fighting their continental competitors, who have adopted the system of weekly arrivals to meet the requirements of customers.

Canadian cheese is undoubtedly the most popular cheese imported, and if shippers would send nothing but mature cheese the extraordinary difference which exists between English and Canadian Cheddar would quickly grow small.

Provision Notes.

The price paid for live hogs at the London market on Monday, September 14, was $5.75 per 100 pounds.

MONTREAL.

A very good business in hog products is reported this week and the market continues fairly steady. The lumbering sections are calling for Canada short-cut mess pork and the prices for same are steady. The demand for Canadian bacon in England is still fairly active, and hence there is a firm tendency on the local market. There is a steady inquiry for smoked meats for the local as well as for the export trade. We quote :

In pork the market is a firm one. Western prices, particularly from Chicago, are quoted higher. On an advancing market Boston prices move more slowly than Chicago. In beef there is little change, but the market is quite firm. Lard is firmer, and higher prices are looked for ; refined has a very good demand. Sausages are now a feature ; domestic supply the market. In fresh beef there is just a fairly steady demand ; domestic is quite freely offered and easier ; it shows a wide range in price ; Western is unchanged. Veal, while offered, is dull. Mutton is little seen. Lamb is an active seller at a low price. Pork is more freely offered. Quotations are :

DAIRY PRODUCE

TORONTO.

BUTTER.—The market is somewhat more firm than at last writing, but no quotable change has been evolved. There is a little stir in finest grades of creamery and dairy, but lower grades are featureless. We quote :

	Per lb.
Creamery prints	0 19	0 20
" solids, fresh	0 18	0 18½
Dairy rolls, large	....	....
" prints	0 15	0 17
" in tubs, best	0 14	0 15
Under qualities	0 11	0 13

CHEESE.—The strong cheese market is still the feature of the provision trade. At the boards on Saturday cheese sold up to 11¾, which was, of course, the tip top. Complaints are still heard that the rise is purely speculative, but persistency with which it is being maintained would warrant one in looking for more substantial reasons. We quote :

	Per lb.
Cheese, large, new	0 11½	0 11¾
" twins, new	0 11¾	0 12

MONTREAL.

EGGS.—There are no quotable changes since last week's report. The market continues firm in tone, the price obtained for straights being 15½ to 16c. For selected new laid stock the prices range from 18 to 19c. There is a very good demand this week.

BUTTER.—The market rules steady to firm in tone. There is a fairly good export inquiry, which is supplemented by a demand on the part of local jobbers. There are no quotable changes since our report of last week and our remarks then still apply. The British market has responded fairly well to the firm feeling here, and exporters are expecting continued good prices. There is a good local demand. Prices obtained for finest creamery are 19½ to 20c.; dairies, 15 to 16c.; large lots, 14¾ to 15c.

CHEESE.—The market continues very firm in tone and more dealers are disposed to follow the market than was the case last week. English operators continue to buy and there is considerable speculative purchasing by local exporters, who believe that Fall cheese will not be much lower than now. The combined purchases of these two factions has led to a lively covering movement by exporters, who were short of September cheese for last half of September and early October shipment. We quote following spot prices :

Finest Ontario	0 11⅜	0 11½
Finest Townships	0 11½	0 11½
Finest Quebec	0 11	0 11⅜

ST. JOHN, N.B.

BUTTER.—There is a good steady sale at rather improved prices. No goods so repays care in its manufacture and no line shows such a wide range in price where the cost is about the same. Poor quality causes a large loss.

EGGS.—There is not a very sharp demand. Supply is not large. There is need of a closer watch on quality.

CHEESE.—Cheese is higher and quite scarce. The export demand takes the best stock in the large cheese. Only twins have a good local sale. The output this year will be quite large from our New Brunswick factories. Quotations are:

Butter, creamery prints, per lb	0 22	0 24
" creamery solids (fresh made), per lb	0 20	0 22
" prints	0 18	0 20
" tubs	0 14	0 16
" tubs, selected, per lb	0 16	0 18
Eggs, new laid, per doz	0 18	0 20
" case stock, per doz	0 15	0 16
Cheese, per lb	0 10	0 11

Norwegian Butter Output.

Nearly all the natural butter made in Norway goes to the United Kingdom, most of the margarine to Denmark ; next come the United Kingdom, Germany, Iceland, and Holland. The new law relating to the manufacture of margarine and margarine cheese came into operation on July 1 last year. One of its most important provisions is that all factories shall put a red band round the package showing that it has been through the hands of a regular controller.

The End of the Great Exhibition.

THE Dominion Exhibition is over. The crowds have departed and the exhibits been removed for another year. In attendance, in the excellence of the displays, and in the national character of the whole exhibition, a new standard has been set. The distinctly Canadian character of the great Industrial is growing every year, and an institution has been evolved which, in its way, as an annual stock-taking and competitive assemblage is without a peer. It is true that the competitive element was not so obviously apparent in the grocery exhibits as it might have been wished. The splendid results of healthy competition are particularly noticeable in the live stock and dairy departments. The animals in the very pink of condition were as carefully looked after and as scrupulously cleaned as could have been imagined, and showed in every line years of persistent effort towards perfection. In the dairy competition the methods were a revelation and the results as near perfection as can well be hoped for. Although the exhibits to which "The Grocer" has been giving particular attention do not lend themselves so readily to competitive tests, it is desirable in the interests of pure food and health and of the progressive classes of manufacturing grocers, that in the future their exhibits should be more than advertising booths, but, with the fullest frankness, should invite expert investigation into their methods and products. Such an exhibition of food products would be of the very greatest interest, and would doubtless produce results comparable in a degree with those above referred to.

The efforts of "The Grocer" in giving to our readers a comprehensive pictorial description of the Dominion Exhibition in so far as it was likely to be of immediate interest to the trade, it is gratifying to note, have met with very marked appreciation. The Exhibition was indeed worthy of more than ordinary attention, and in undertaking the expensive number just issued in the interests of our readers in the provinces most distant from the scene of the Exhibition and of the trade generally, the attempt was made, which happily appears to have been successful, to do justice at once to the Exhibition as a Dominion institution and to ourselves as the voice, and, in this case, the eyes as well, of the grocery trade throughout all Canada.

In the press of matter last week and the short time available for getting out so many illustrations, the cuts of a number of the exhibits described in our last issue were not ready in time for publication. Gillett exhibit, a description of which was given last week, it will be seen from the cut, was most effective, as was also the very

THE METALLIC ROOFING CO.

It would be difficult to conceive of a superior exhibit of the line shown than was made by The Metallic Roofing Co., Limited, Toronto. It is recognized by those acquainted with Mr. Thorn, general-manager of the company, that what he undertakes will be done thoroughly. The accompanying illustration will give an idea of this superb exhibit, but no photograph can do justice to the delicate shading and blending of colors which does so much to popularize sheet metals for ceilings, walls, roofs, sides, columns, caps, cornices, etc. Every part of the building was constructed of sheet metal. The imitation of granite in the columns was so good that one must test it by tapping to distinguish it. In the background were seen high-art zinc and copper work, a specialty of this firm that is winning rapidly extending popularity. The effectiveness of the exhibit was much increased by the presence of one of the large stamping machines, which was kept busy cutting out souvenirs for visitors.

THE QUEEN CITY OIL CO., LIMITED.

The conception of the display of The Queen City Oil Co., Limited, Toronto, was unique. In the background was a miniature oil derrick. On the stand in the foreground were lubricating and illuminating oils of every kind produced from crude petroleum, as well as candles, and other by-products. The clear, watery whiteness of the kerosene and the dull, limpid darkness of the lubricating oils formed a contrast which made the exhibit fascinating to the consumer of or the dealer in oils, either for lubricating or lighting.

the British West Indies, under the direction of The Pickford and Black Steamship Co., of Halifax. Conveniently located near the entrance to the grounds in the same building as the products of New Ontario were the two large pyramids, occupying the centre of the hall, and loaded with all the rich booty of the south. The exhibit was artistically decorated with great bunches of cocoanuts just cut from the tree, together with cocoanut and other palm leaves. On these pyramids were displayed samples of the products of Demerara, Trinidad, Tobago, Granada, St. Vincent, Barbados, St. Lucia, Dominica, Monserrat, Antigua and Jamaica, and included sugar, jams, cocoa, spices, rums, along with liqueurs, orange wine and pimento dram from Jamaica and Dominica and a line of essential oils from the latter island that were really surprising.

The exhibit of sugars from the Barbados was especially good, and a line which must not be overlooked was an exhibit of Jamaica cigars of a very fine quality. As experts consider them the equal of, if not superior to, the Cuban article, there is every reason why preference should be given to the British grown article. Asphalt from Trinidad and manjak from the Barbados are also an interesting and important feature of the exhibit.

The Queen City Oil Co., Limited.

A fine collection of photographs is also shown illustrating the growth and culture of various products as well as the natural scenery of the islands. The photos from Jamaica and Dominica are especially fine.

Altogether the exhibit is an eye-opener to Canadians, suggesting as it does a multitude of lines upon which trade could be developed between Canada and our West Indian fellow members of the Empire. The Pickford and Black company are to be congratulated on the enterprise shown in arranging for and directing this very creditable exhibition.

MANUFACTURERS' AGENTS.

THE question of selling agencies is at times a vexatious one for manufacturers. Complaint has recently been heard that, while at certain selling centres goods find a ready sale with no trouble on the part of the maker, at another centre, with equally good surroundings, a deadly inertia seems to have fallen on trade, and nothing but discouraging results are realized. A change in the system or agent has betimes, in similar cases, changed all this and discovered the source of the trouble, which may have been due to a variety of causes. Manufacturers thus placed would do well to make a thorough investigation into all the conditions before concluding to withdraw from the field altogether, as THE GROCER is informed one or two have recently done.

The amazing variety of lines which are now being offered to the grocery trade make it every day more difficult to introduce a new line or induce a jobber to push it. The introduction of the most meritorious line requires greater publicity, and more persistent effort than ever before. The reason for ill success may rest with the manufacturer in not giving sufficient attention to publicity, or with the jobber in not taking sufficient interest in the success of his client's product.

Special agents who concentrate their whole efforts upon one line have been suggested as a remedy, but this does not appear essential. A man who is capable of making a success of one line, granted a talent for organization, has given warrant for success with more. Indeed, the man who controls a number of lines has in many ways a distinct advantage over the man with only one. Expansion is the key note of modern business, and the success of the departmental stores is a striking refutation of the single line theory.

Indeed, the possibilities of the manufacturers' agent are of the brightest. All that is necessary is first-class business ability and that eternal vigilance which is the price of commercial success as well as of liberty.

We are wont to look upon our English cousins as somewhat behind the times in the matter of hustling, but that is just where we are often most mistaken. Several of the largest factors in London who began comparatively recently in a modest way as agents for one or two lines have reached out so that they now handle practically everything which can be brought under the term groceries, and have built up magnificent connections.

The methods of these successful London factors might well be studied by Canadian manufacturers' agents who have ambitions for larger things. They will supply any article asked for. If not in stock, it will be put in at once. If unknown, enquiries will be made from the many sources of information available in London until the product, no matter its source, is known and made available. In short, they are business men in every sense of the word. Their field is to supply what is wanted or what may be wanted—and they do it. A first enquiry may find them without being able to supply a given article immediately, but never a second.

The immensity of the market makes possible for the London factor what the Canadian agent cannot as yet hope to rival, but he can at least copy that alertness and keen attention to what the trade may require, which has been so successful in the metropolis of the Empire.

PROBLEMS EAST AND WEST.

CANADA has long been crying out for more people to fill in the immense areas that have opened up and are continuing to open up in Ontario, Manitoba and the Territories of the Northwest.

It is one of the commonplaces of our national proclamations to point out what room there is within our borders for scores of millions of people. The last census report was somewhat discouraging. However, we are being enheartened by the immigration of the past two years, and by the good prospects for the future.

The newer sections of Ontario being opened up will attract many settlers, but it is in the Northwest that the great increase of population will be seen. Already men are forecasting what the shifting of the centre of population will result in. One thing is daily becoming more apparent; namely, the establishment of a western sentiment, lusty, insistent, dictatorial. The Territories are clamoring for provincial status; the grain and milling interests are getting to know their strength; Winnipeg is fast becoming a metropolis; at Ottawa the voice of western members is heard more frequently and more attentively.

It is not to be expected that there will be complete harmony between the East and the West. These two divisions of Canada are in the last analysis two individuals, with, in some respects, diverse interests, with but one purse.

When the West outpeoples the East—and the day may not be a remote one—and the western element in the House of Commons grows strong, there are likely to be some revolutionary changes. It is quite possible to imagine far-reaching party disturbances, in which the old lines of cleavage will be forgotten. Much depends upon the attitude of eastern statesmen. It takes time to bring about maturity, sobriety and reasonableness. The West must be humored for a season, guided as much as possible, allowed at times to have its own way. The disciplining of childhood and youth must always be accompanied by compromises.

The part of the older East is patience and wisdom. To deal with the new national problems that are forcing themselves upon us in such a way as to win the confidence, if not always the approval, of the West, will require a sympathy with western conditions and needs. This can be obtained only through intercourse and study. Fortunately the travel westward for pleasure and knowledge grows with each passing season, and every such journey gives inspiration and a truer appreciation of the possibilities and magnitude of Western Canada.

Politics in Canada will become broader, in keeping with our country's expansion. The call for men of large brain, honest and fearless, is making itself heard as never before. The young men east and west who will succeed our present legislators are already born; it is to be hoped that there are many among them earnestly studying Canada's problems, fitting themselves for the work that inevitably will fall to them. It is well to point out that the only greatness the world recognizes is the greatness of service. Let our young men serve their generation, seeking only the country's good. The rewards of true service may seem slow in coming — they generally are—but they are worth the effort.

THE SUGAR QUESTION.

SPEAKING of the bearing on the Canadian market of the recent Sugar Act, which went into effect on September 1, in accordance with the terms of the Brussels convention, a prominent Canadian sugar refiner said that it was rather too early to venture anything definite, as the effect is still problematical.

It would doubtless have a tendency, he thought, to benefit the West Indian Canadian sugar industry to the extent of the bounties that had been abolished.

Many, moreover, anticipate that the abolition of the bounties on beet sugar will have the effect of increasing considerably the consumption of sugar in European countries where beets are grown, for, in order to recoup themselves for the amounts paid in bounties, the governments of these bounty-paying countries until now have taxed the consumer to an extent equal to the bounty. This will no longer be necessary.

SHORT-SIGHTEDNESS OF THE CANNERS CONSOLIDATED.

THE selling terms of the Canadian Canners Consolidated Companies, Limited, which were shown in last week's GROCER to be illegal, reveal a somewhat short-sighted policy. A great amalgamated company practically controlling the Canadian canned goods trade, they could have made a reasonable rate of profit a practical certainty, to say nothing of employing illegal unbusiness-like methods.

Had they been wise, they would have taken advantage of their position as first in the field to cater to the demands of a growing market, and acquire a sympathetic clientele of customers by contenting themselves with reasonable dividends, meting out fair dealing all round. Such a course wisely directed would have discouraged excessive competition and saved the dignity and self-respect of the Canadian Canners Consolidated Companies, Limited, themselves. But such was not the counsel of the Consolidated Companies, and in attempting to squeeze out the 5 per cent. composing their opposition they have placed themselves in a position where they are in danger of running foul of the law and have, at the same time, incurred the displeasure of the greater part of the trade throughout Canada.

No man likes to be dictated to as to how he shall conduct his business, and to attempt to coerce a wholesaler into refraining from handling another factory's goods at the pain of losing any profit he might otherwise gain in an unwarrantable interference and an offence to personality. But the folly of it is that it fails in its object. Indeed, the independent factories are in clover, and find no difficulty in disposing of their output to houses who resent the arrogant dictation of the C.C.C.C., Ltd.

But even supposing that for the moment the device were successful, either or both of two difficulties would doubtless arise. Nothing invites competition like monopoly. It is a shouting invitation to investors who are seeking rich returns. Co-operation, where it is applicable, means the death knell of monopoly, and in the canning industry co-operation has already gained a foothold and made good its entry. The Western Brokerage Co. has recently acquired a factory of its own. Others may follow. Canadian business men are not slow in taking up a good thing. Indeed, from an industrial point of view, we have no hesitation in declaring that a monopoly in the canned goods trades could not be maintained a week.

But conceding that it could, the consumer then comes in. The Canadian tariff makes provision for just such eventualities. Indeed it might be supposed that this case was in mind when power was given to the Government to remove, by order-in-council, the duties altogether when there is reason to believe that prices are being unduly exalted by combines or monopolies. So, even apart from the amendment to the criminal code, the canners were riding for a fall, as their policy was certain to work out to their own disadvantage.

THE POVERTY OF THE RICH.

THIS has been a remarkable year. The cant shibboleth of the socialist that "the rich are growing richer and the poor poorer" has been reversed. The poor have never been so prosperous. Work is plentiful, wages are high, the laborer is affluent, the tradesmen prosperous, and, except for the outbreak of strikes during the early Summer, now happily subsiding, the whole work-a-day world is full of confidence in the future and in easy circumstances for the present. The rich, who toil not nor spin, but flutter around Wall street and kindred resorts, have been hard hit—broke in fact. In New York the consumption of champagne and fancy waistcoats has fallen off tremendously. At a recent regatta bewitching maidens had, lack-a-day, to go unentertained, because the gilded youth who were wont to attend to these little matters were dead broke, while it is recounted that a Toronto broker the other day was unable to meet a draft for 50 cents, the amount of a blacksmith's bill. Indeed, unless there is a rift in the cloud the institution of soup-kitchens for destitute millionaires may become a matter for serious consideration with the approach of zero weather.

After all, the step between poverty and wealth is a short one, and whether it is up or down who can tell? Life in a cottage on $1 a day or life in a palace with $50,000 a year—which affords the greater happiness?

In this game of life the great thing is to play straight and play for all you are worth. The pleasure is in the game. The stakes are secondary.

WHARF AND WAREHOUSE OPENING.

IN response to an invitation from The Boston Molasses Co. to attend the opening of their new wharf and warehouses last week nearly 300 gentlemen, representing the wholesale grocery trade of all sections of New England, also Halifax, N.S., St. John, N.B., Montreal, Que. and Levis, Que., together with many men prominent in banking circles and on the "street," enjoyed a sail down the Boston harbor on board the steamer General Lincoln, leaving Rowe's wharf at 10.30 a.m. and returning to the company's new wharf, where refreshments were served, and after inspecting the new wharf and warehouses, continuing homeward to Rowe's wharf to tie up.

While the weather was threatening in the morning, the day turned out to be perfect, for the sky was overcast, eliminating the glare so trying on the water, and the guests, particularly those from interior places, saw much to interest them in the harbor shipping, the Atlantic liners, coastwise passenger boats, sailing craft, islands, forts, lighthouses, etc., that were pointed out by those more familiar with the harbor.

Thus, comfortably gathered in groups in various parts of the steamer, the trip was most pleasant. Many old acquaintances were renewed and new ones made. Indeed there was more than one reunion and business was, for once, forgotten.

Prominent in the foreground, on the South Boston water front, the sign of the "Boston Molasses" across the end of the dock buildings, that were soon to be inspected, stood out in twelve-foot letters, the largest sign letters ever used in Massachusetts, the work of The Howes Mayo Co., Boston, Mass.

Mr. Felix Taussig, president, and Mr. Edwin C. Stevens, secretary of The Boston Molasses Co., Mr. C. F. Bates, treasurer, Mr. A. E. Brownville, ass't.-treasurer, and other gentlemen connected with the company, were active in promoting the pleasure of their guests, extending them unbounded hospitality.

The General Lincoln made a beautiful landing at the dock, where on disembarking another party was found who had come by carriages direct to the dock. The guests beheld, spread in the open air, long tables with snowy cloths in readiness for what, with the ashes of the pile of seaweed at one side, promised to be a regular old-fashioned Rhode Island clambake. Such in fact it was.

Operators from the studio of Elmer Chickering first took a group picture, after which, under the guidance of Messrs. Taussig and Stevens, the wharf and the vast plant thereon were inspected. The guests were surprised and pleased with the magnitude and completeness of the plant. It is located on what is known as the Commonwealth Land, the wharf and warehouses covering an area of over 300,000 square feet. The pier is 300 feet long and 50 feet wide, and the building, all under one roof, is 850 feet long and 260 feet wide. The storage capacity of the entire plant is 100,000 barrels. The plant is fitted with all modern appliances including a double track railway extending the entire length of the plant, from the Summer street side to the end of the pier. It is finely lighted naturally and by electricity generated on the premises.

The pier has a docking berth on each side 50x200 feet, with a depth of 15 feet at mean low water. On the west side the docking berth is 200x80 feet, with a depth of 18 feet at mean low water. The channel approaching the dock is 18 feet deep.

After the inspection of the plant a photograph of the entire party, arranged along the dock, was taken, after, seats were given at the tables, where a clambake was served in true conventional style, with all the usual accessories and some not so usual.

While the company were re-embarking for the return to Rowe's wharf the band played "God save the King" while the gentlemen from His Majesty's Canadian provinces stood with bare heads.

The return to Rowe's wharf occupied only a few minutes. While she was docking cheers were given for the genial captain of the General Lincoln who bowed his acknowledgments from the pilot house, and then all went ashore, pausing on the wharf to give hearty cheers for The Boston Molasses Co., President Felix Taussig and Mr. Edwin C. Stevens.

Mr. J. C. Rose, of Rose & Laflamme; Mr. Albert Hebert, of Hudon, Hebert & Co.; Gus. Carrier, of A. Carrier & Fils, Levis; L. G. Crosby, St. John, N.B., comprised the Canadian contingent, and all thoroughly enjoyed the hospitality of The Boston Molasses Co.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, September 14, 1903.

AFTER an absence of a couple of weeks your correspondent has returned to find matters very little changed from the position of the market on August 22, when the last report was sent in.

Business is very active in both grocery and provision lines and the changes in prices have been few and unimportant.

On the whole the crop was cut under favorable conditions but the past week has been singularly unfavorable for threshing operations, and Saturday brought a perfect torrent of rain in all parts of the province and territories, and slight snow fall in some sections. Fine weather is predicted for this week.

So far the amount of wheat shipped is very heavily in excess of last year at the same period and the price for cash wheat has been from 16½ to 17 over the price of cash wheat last year at the date. This demand for cash wheat is due to the fact that the old crop was very closely cleared up and millers have been anxiously looking for new wheat. The fact that the crop is lighter than last year and the American markets firm is making prices for all lines of wheat much higher than last year. The dealers claim that the prices here are above export and this will have the tendency of restricting the amount of trading done. Should the present wet weather continue it will no doubt lower the grade, but so far the percentage of No. 1. hard has been very large and the berry plump and well filled.

The canned goods situation presents quite as unsatisfactory a front as it did three weeks ago. Up to date no prices for tomatoes or corn have been received and the indications are that both these lines will be scarce, as unfavorable weather is exposing them to frost. The new pack of raspberries is arriving and other lines are without change. In canned salmon the situation is strong, particularly for sockeye. The present quotations for the new pack are $7.50 f.o.b. coast for the same grade of salmon that is now selling here at $6 per case.

DRIED AND EVAPORATED FRUITS.—The situation is strong and all lines are firm. New apricots range in price from 10½ to 12c.; new peaches, 7½ to 8c.; silver prunes, 8¾ to 9c.; black pitted plums, 8¾ to 9c.; prunes, 4 to 9c., according to size and pack. Raisins, valencias, fine off stalk, $2.30; layers in 28-lb. boxes, $2.50; sultanas 9c.; muscatels, 7½ to 9c., according to the number of crowns; currants, new filiatras, 5½ to 6c., cleaned, 1c. extra.

SUGARS.—Firm in price and with strong demand. Granulated, $4.75 to $4.85, and bright yellows, $4.15 to $4.20. The sale of sugar has been exceptionally heavy, even for the preserving season.

RICE.—The market is unchanged and steady with prices as follows: B. rice, 4⅛ to 4½c.; Japan, 5¼ to 5⅝c.; Patna, 5 to 5⅛c.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

CHEESE.—The market here is firm and advancing. The best grades bring 11c. in Winnipeg. If the present cold wet weather should continue it will curtail the make and prices may go higher.

BUTTER.—For creamery butter the demand is fair and prices range from 17 to 18c. factories for the best grades. In dairy butter, large quantities are going in store and prices are without much change. Round lots of good fresh dairy are worth 11 to 12c. Winnipeg, with 13c. for extra choice lots.

EGGS.—The supplies still continue below requirements and prices have advanced 1c. per dozen, dealers now offering 16c. Winnipeg, subject to candling.

EXPORT CATTLE.

The low price in the Old Country markets is having the effect of retarding shipments from the west as ranchmen are not willing to accept present prices, which are 3 to 3¼c. point of shipment for export steers, and 3½c. for the top of the market.

DRESSED AND CURED MEATS.

BEEF.—Dressed carcasses are a fraction lower this week, and 6½c. is the top of the market for prime meat. Veal is 8 to 9c.; mutton 9c.; lambs 12c.; and hogs 8½c.

CURED MEATS.—The market is strong and active, the latest price list issued being: Hams, sugar cured, 14¾ to 15c.; breakfast bacon, 14½c.; backs, 13c.; shoulders, 9c.; spiced roll, 11¾c.; dry salt, long clear, 11¾c.; smoked, long clear, 12c.; dry salt, shoulders, 9½c.; boneless backs, 12c.

POULTRY.

The supplies to this market are more limited even than usual and are in worse condition. It is impossible at the present to purchase on the Winnipeg market a really choice pair of chickens and there are no geese or turkeys offering. Chickens retail at 15 to 16c.

VEGETABLES.

There is a good trade in all lines of vegetables as householders are now arranging for Winter supplies and pickle factories are taking large quantities. It is a matter of great surprise to visitors from the east to see whole wagon loads of cauliflower, as white as snow, being driven along the streets. There is no province in Canada that can touch Manitoba in cauliflower, celery, cabbages and onions.

We Regard our position as somewhat "unique," inasmuch as our many years experience in the Ceylon Tea trade has been the means of teaching us "some things" concerning it (as we have not worked without studying). That we have made a success of

"SALADA" CEYLON TEA is proof conclusive that the lessons taught us have been well and skilfully applied.

Not a bad proposition for any dealer to confederate his Tea interests with.

What are your views on the subject?

We would appreciate an opportunity to discuss the situation with you.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, Sept. 17, 1903.

GROCERIES.

TRADE continues good, with every indication of excellent Fall business. All jobbers have been busily occupied interviewing the many visitors during Exhibition time, and the results in most cases have been most satisfactory. In canned goods trade continues to maintain itself with prices firming up in face of decreased stocks. Coffee is moving nicely and shows indication of increased handling. Spices are firm, with trade of little interest. Syrups and molasses are uninteresting but still maintain firm prices. Rice is fairly active with good crop prospects and buyers keeping present stocks well drawn upon. Tapioca is featureless. Tea has not been moving freely and buyers are not showing the amount of interest the situation would warrant. The London market continues remarkably firm, the arrivals not being sufficient to keep up stocks. The demand coming to hand is having the effect of gradually reducing spot stocks, with prices consequently firming toward advance. Foreign dried fruits are occupying a good deal of attention, and, in some cases, prices for futures have already made signs of advancement. In Valencia raisins there has been an advance of 1s. per cwt. in the primal markets on the strength of official reports of a crop shortage, the expected crop being estimated at some 500,000 boxes short of last year. The quality, however, is reported as exceptionally good. In currants there is little to note; the higher grades are changing hands at prices that should prove of value to the buyers, the price showing little advance over the minimum fixed by the Government with added costs.

CANNED GOODS.

The situation in canned goods continues somewhat strained. Stocks are greatly reduced, whilst demand continues active, thus making it difficult for jobbers to keep supply equal to demand. The indications at present moment point to a better crop of tomatoes than previous reports. Prices, however, will probably be in advance of quotations. There is also a better outlook regarding corn, but it is not yet advanced sufficiently for final advice. We quote:

COFFEES.

The home trade continues fairly good, there being distinctly better indications of progress than is usually the case. Foreign markets continue firm, and in New York buyers are anxious with sellers reluctant. Prices consequently are firming to advancing point, whilst crop reports mostly denote shortage of results compared with previous estimates. We quote:

SUGAR

The market has been quiet all the week under review and rather an easier feeling has developed.

Transactions in raws have been light, amounting to little over 5,000 bags ex ship and to arrive, at full recent quotations. The situation has been rather abnormal, as it has been felt that U.S. refiners would have readily conceded a further 1-16c. advance if any large quantity of sugar had been brought out, but for the small lots offering there was no disposition to pay over 3 7-16c., duty paid, for basis 96 test. At the moment, buyers have withdrawn from the market, and it is doubtful if next transactions will realize even this price. However, without sellers, the question is not being tested.

Owing to the labor holidays, meltings for the week ending September 9 were only 42,000 tons, being 6,000 tons less previous week. Receipts were also light, being only 24,884 tons, thus reducing stocks for the week by over 17,000 tons, and these are given as 220,517 tons. Exports from Cuban ports by cable were only 5,800 tons, so it is likely receipts at the U.S. ports will continue light, as estimated afloats from all countries are only 185,000 tons, against 315,000 tons last year. Combined Cuban and U.S. stocks were 415,017 tons, against 341,368 tons same time last year. Total stocks of Europe and America at latest uneven dates were 1,824,017 tons, against 1,901,405 tons at same period last year, the decrease being 77,388 tons.

European markets have held firm on basis 8s. 6d. for September shipment f.o.b. Hamburg, while May delivery is quoted as high as 9s. 3d. Former quotation is considerably above the parity of cane sugars in New York and, naturally, there is little business doing in beets.

Java sugars are held as high as 10s. 3d. c.i.f. for the only July shipment cargo unsold, and 10s. c. & f. for September shipment cargoes. September shipments are likely to be 14,000 tons less than same month last year, and the total shipments to the United States from June to September this year will be probably 160,000 to 170,000 tons less than the same time last year.

The refined situation has been quiet so far as new business is concerned and has developed a new phase. On Monday, September 14, The American Sugar Refining Co. reduced prices 10c. per 100 pounds all round, while Howell reduced their prices 5c. per 100 pounds, to same basis as Arbuckle, these two latter being on the net basis, both 5c. per 100 pounds lower than the trust prices. This weakness in New York was followed here next day by a partial decline of 10c. per 100 pounds, the Guild official advice applying to all refineries, with the exception of the Redpath refinery, but just as we go to press, a further circular has been issued, officially reducing all quotations to the foregoing extent. We understand, however, that the Redpath refinery have made no change in their own quotations which places the distributor at a disadvantage of 10c. per 100 pounds in handling this brand. The decline in the United States markets is attributable to the slow demand consequent upon extremely unfavorable weather, but, now that the weather has turned warmer and brighter with the canning season in full swing, it is not unlikely that we may see a quick re-action to former figures. SPICES.

Home trade continues dull and uninteresting. The latest reports to hand from primal markets all denote the situation of pepper as particularly firm, recent buyers on the New York market having found it difficult to effect purchases except at steadily advancing prices. RICE AND TAPIOCA.

Primal reports of rice all point to new crops being equal to anticipation with the yield quite up to estimate. Spot stocks on hand, however, at various centres are reported as low, with buyers in New York keeping market well cleared. Home markets are fairly active with firm prices. Tapioca is uninteresting with no new feature to report. We quote :

TEAS.

Trade on the street has been somewhat slow since our last issue, attributable to some extent to the attention of jobbers being occupied by the many visitors during Exhibition week. The present indications all point to increased firmness, tending towards advance in near future. Information from reliable sources reports increased difficulty in securing acceptance of offers from our brokers, prices ruling in London market being in advance of offers submitted from this side. The reports from London indicate position as substantially unchanged, prices being from 1d. to 6d. in advance of similar period last year, while available stocks are decidedly low and probably lower than is usually accepted, while demand is steadily increasing. FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

Trade has been active in all popular lines since our last issue. Spot stocks are greatly reduced and it is questionable whether they will outlast the run till new season opens. Since our last report valencia raisins have advanced on the primal markets 1s. per cwt. owing to short supply. The official estimate for this season is put at 1,800,000 boxes, while the comparison for ten years puts the average at 2,300,000, thus revealing a deficiency of some 500,000 boxes, while the highest point reached during the same period was 3,468,000, and the lowest 1,808,000. It will thus be seen that in face of a steadily increasing consumption there is every indication of prices ruling firm toward advance, with the present crop estimate at the lowest point for some 10 years. There is a firm market in currants, with high growths showing extra good value. The prices ruling for Casalina, Patria and choice Vostizza are remarkably moderate when compared to the lower growths with a fixed rate for 11s. 6d. f.o.b. primal markets made by the Greek Government. GREEN FRUITS.

The congestion which has characterized the market more or less for a couple of weeks past has for the most part passed away and normal conditions have been reverted to. Pears alone appear to be a drug. Plums have ceased to come in in such large quantities and the late peaches now have the call. Grapes are beginning to occupy a large place in the market and tomatoes are very plentiful. Jamaica oranges in barrels have appeared and are of good quality. California peaches and plums are again off the market, but a few choice Tokay grapes are offered. We quote :

VEGETABLES.

The vegetable market has had a broken week. Trade is good and supplies generally ample and of good quality. Complaint, however, is heard of rot in potatoes. It set in about two weeks ago and now it is very difficult to get good stock. The tuber appears all right at first but in a couple of days the blight appears. Spanish onions and sweet potatoes are the latest arrivals. No material change in prices is noted. We quote :

GROCERIES.

THE jobbing trade reports indicate a very satisfactory trade during the past week, in fact, some of them speak most glowingly of the fine condition of business, and the prospects for a large Fall trade are very bright. A decline of 10c. per 100 pounds in sugar, in effect on Tuesday, while not effecting any increase in sales, has had the tendency to cause merchants to keep their country demands filled up. The preserving season is in full swing, and, naturally, sugar is going out freely. Teas have been selling freely and good invoices are being made. Ceylon and India blacks are in better demand. Japans at 17½ to 20c. are freely booked, while lower grades from 14 to 15½c. are steady. China blacks are unchanged. Ceylon and India greens are turned over readily, and the demand continues to increase. The canned goods situation is unchanged, the Canadian Packers' Association still holding back quotations on tomatoes and beans. Corn is offered at 90c., and good orders taken at that figure. French sardines are getting scarcer every week, and Canadian pack are also ruling higher. Salmon is in good demand and the discouraging reports from the Coast have drawn buyers' attention to same, and, at the strong advance noted last week, orders are being booked, as it is expected that the short catch this year will push up prices still higher. In syrups and molasses nothing has eventuated since last report, the latter being still very high. Pessimistic jobbers look for 50c. prices in Barbados before the close of the year. Spices are unchanged. Rice and tapioca are also quiet and little is doing. Coffee is dull and business quiet. New valencias have come to hand, F.O.S. selling at 7½c., selected at 8c. and 4-crown layers at 8¼c. The direct steamer Bellona, expected in a few weeks, will bring prices down from ½ to ¾c. Currants are expected by same vessel and opening figures are given as about 4¾ to 5c. for fine filiatras, and cleaned fruit at 5¼ to 5½c. California apricots are dearer. Prunes are reported as likely to open up from ¼ to ½c. higher than last year. New evaporated apples are quoted at 6½c. to open, and good trade is anticipated, as reports show the apple crop of England and France a failure, and, with the exception of Germany, the continental crops are only fair. In flour an advance of 30c. per barrel is noted since our quotations last week. It is expected that another advance may be looked for. On Saturday last the Ogilvies jumped up their prices 15c. per barrel, and another advance of 15c. was made on Tuesday, and prices for best are $4.80, and $4.50 for second grade. Hay is coming in very freely and considerably in excess of requirements. Prices, consequently, have slumped, and weaker figures are looked for. Rolled oats, cornmeal and feed are quiet and prices unchanged. In fish, trade is more active, and there is a good demand for all kinds. Lake trout and white fish are plentiful; pickerel and pike are scarcer. There is a much better demand for Canadian fruits, and prices generally rule steady. Californias are now almost off the market. As was predicted in these columns last week, there has been a further advance in beans. It is not likely that the limit has yet been reached. Changed quotations are given below. Potatoes are in good supply, and the market is easier. Honey is still in good supply, and buyers are not anxious to purchase. Evaporated apples are somewhat easier. There is still a good demand in England for Canadian hams and bacon; market is firm. The egg market is strong at present. There is a good export inquiry for butter, and prices rule firm. Cheese continues strong and no weakening is anticipated at present. In hides, there has been some improvement. Better prices are being obtained for lambskins.

SUGAR.

TEAS.

There has been a better demand recently for Ceylon and India blacks and the market has improved locally as well as in London and primary markets. Pekoes and Orange Pekoes are about ½ to 1d. higher and there has been a keener demand for lower grades. In Japans there has been a good demand for teas from 17½ to 20c. There has been rather a falling off in Japans, 15½ to 16c., as Young Hysons are reported as showing so much better value at same figures. No change in China blacks. Ceylon and India greens are being picked up quite freely and the demand is on the increase. The market generally has been active during the past week, some very good lots of Ceylon and India greens having been sold, these being on invoices from garden outputs. We quote:

CANNED GOODS.

In canned goods the situation is practically unchanged. Business is only fair. The Canadian Canners' Association is still holding back quotations on tomatoes and beans. Corn is offered at 90c. with good business and prospects for steady and large trade. New beans are quoted by the Association at 82½ to 85c. French sardines are very scarce and getting more so every week, and very few are being offered. Offers for new French sardines are only accepted subject to pack and no guarantee for delivery. Canadian sardines also are scarce and prices are advanced 15c. per case. We quote:

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

New valencias ex steamship Pretorian are at hand and selling at 7½c. for F.O.S., 8c. for selected, and 8½c. for 4-crown layers. Direct steamer, expected about first week in October, will bring prices down, as some sales to arrive per steamship Bellona have been made at from ½ to ¾c. lower. Currants, to arrive ex Bellona, are expected to open at about 4¾ to 5c. for fine filiatra, and cleaned fruit from 5¼ to 5½. California apricots are dearer. In California raisins no new prices for muscatels are given out yet. An advance of ¼ to ½c. is reported in California prunes on opening prices, which brings them that much higher on last year's cost; the demand is good locally and stocks are reported very light. New evaporated apples are reported as likely to open about 1c. advance over last year's opening prices. The bareness of the English market is given as an active factor in this strong position. Dried apples will, in consequence of the bare English and continental situation, be in good demand. Figs and dates are featureless. We quote:

GREEN FRUITS.

There is a much better demand this week for Canadian fruits, and only fair supplies are on hand. The season for California fruit is now almost over. Canadian peaches have been advanced considerably, but Canadian grapes are somewhat cheaper. Changed quotations are given below. We quote:

FISH.

The demand for fresh fish is improving now that the season has opened and the holidays are over. There is a good trade for all kinds of Western Lake trout and white fish, which are plentiful. Pickerel and pike continue scarce, though this is only temporary and dealers expect a good supply next week. In prepared fish the demand is regular, with nothing new to note. In salt fish the season has not opened yet. Mostly all kinds of salt fish are scarce. We quote :

NUTS.

There seems to be a scarcity locally of Grenoble walnuts and Tarragona almonds and market is strong. Jobbers are looking around on spot for stocks to keep themselves going until new nuts arrive. Market will undoubtedly be quite bare before new stock arrives. Prices will be firm until then. We quote :

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS.

Another advance is to be noted this week of from 10 to 15c. per bushel. The advance is due to the small crop. There is a good demand, but the offerings are light. Further advances may be expected at any time. We quote :

Choice prime, per bushel	1 90	2 10

HONEY.

There is still a large quantity of honey on the market and buyers are not anxious to purchase at prices asked. Prices are very uncertain at present and it is difficult to give exact quotations. Strained white has been sold as high as 9 to 10c. for new and 8 to 8½c. for old. But the values which most dealers quote are buckwheat honey 6c. and clover 6½c. delivered in Montreal. Comb honey is still offering freely, the prevailing prices being $1.25 to $1.50 per case of one dozen sections.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

The market is quiet and featureless. We quote :

EVAPORATED APPLES.

The market is a little easier than last week and, as was predicted, prices have sagged somewhat. We quote :

New, in jobbing lots	0 05¾	0 06
Straight carlots	....	0 05½

POTATOES.

Potatoes are in excellent supply and of much better quality than was expected. The market is easier as a large crop is expected and a sale of 500 bags is reported at 40c. for future delivery. Spot prices are somewhat higher, the prevailing prices for new potatoes being from 60 to 65c. per bag.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

FLOUR.

There is great scarcity at present and the market is very firm with advanced prices. Farmers are holding their grain anticipating higher prices, and millers, who have sold for future delivery, are all having trouble in getting the grain they want, hence the increased prices. We quote :

HAY.

There have been increased receipts of baled hay this week considerably in excess of requirements. The result has been a considerable slump in the market and the tendency is still downward. We quote :

ROLLED OATS.

Trade continues very quiet and there is nothing special to note. We quote :

Rolled oats, in bbls.	3 80	3 85

HIDES.

There have not been any quotable changes of importance since our last report. Lambskins are firmer and it is reported that in some instances as high as 60c. has been paid. The minimum price is now 55c. Other hides remain unchanged. Business shows some improvement all round. We quote :

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

Office of "The Canadian Grocer,"

St. John, N.B., Sept. 15, 1903.

THE wholesale grocery trade are finding business very active. There is not only spot business but Fall orders for canned goods, and dried fruits are being taken. The raisin situation is a most peculiar one. For many years we have depended largely on California for raisins and the demand for seeded has grown to be the large end of the business, California being the only seeded offered. This year the California market has opened so high that the sale from there of raisins will be very small, while valencias and malagas will largely supply the market. As malaga seeded are offered this season we are more independent of California than before.

The growing tendency on the part of many retailers, even those doing a large trade, to ask for the breaking of quite small packages, is a grievance which is found very irksome by wholesalers, especially as a disinclination is shown to pay any advance for the accommodation.

OIL.—In burning oil prices are held at the low figures quoted now for some weeks. There is active sale as season advances. In lubricating oils the market has been quite a firm one. Linseeds are again easier; this is a season of light sale. Turpentine is unchanged. Cod oil is very firm. Local receipts very light. Market is supplied from outside points. We quote :

SALT.—In Liverpool coarse salt the stock held is not large nor are the stocks at outside points. There is a cargo about due, but it is said there will be but light arrivals till the Winter steamers begin to come. In fine, there is no change. We quote :

DRIED FRUIT.—While spot business is not large dealers are interested in futures. The outlook is, that owing to the high price of new California raisins very few will be seen here this season. In seeded, malagas, which are being offered for the first time, are being quite largely sold. Malaga loose are also finding a good demand. There is a feeling that valencias will sell more freely than for some years. New valencias are daily expected. In currants, prices of new goods for direct shipment have shown a steady decline, though there has been no large drop. Prunes have not been as largely bought as usual. Prices rather higher than last year. Apricots are very high. Peaches are little changed. Evaporated apples are firm. We quote :

GREEN FRUITS.—This is an active time. Canadian plums have had a large sale this season but are about done. The Ontario pears received are good. Just now grapes have the call. In Eastern and Californian pears sales are largely over. All California fruits are about done. Apples are large sellers. New Brunswick crop is neither large nor very good. We have chiefly soft apples. Reports from Nova Scotia are for a large crop of all kinds and particularly good fruit. Oranges are dull. Lemons find but a fair sale. The banana season is about over. Berries are about out of the market. In sweet potatoes, good stock is being received. All vegetables are now low. We quote :

CANNED GOODS.—There is little change in the situation. Except in salmon there is little of interest. Sockeyes will be very high and springs above last year, cohoes quite low, pinks as last season. In vegetables, prices on tomatoes and corn have not yet been named, though many have bought and sold independent brands. New strawberries are freely received. Blueberries are scarce. Peaches and pears are quoted at even figures. Domestic sardines are a very light pack. Kippered herring, while not so short, will be below the average. Haddies are but a fair output. We quote :

FISH.—The market is a firm one. In dry cod there have been fair receipts and active sale. Full prices are asked. In pollock, while there is little change, the tendency is upward. Pickled herring are of better quality than usual and full figures are asked. In smoked, new are being received. Prices keep very high. There is rather improved sale for haddies. Variety of fresh fish is small, chiefly cod and haddock. We quote :

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL.—In both Manitoba and Ontario flours the market is a firm one and rather higher prices quoted. Oatmeal and oats both tend to rather fuller figures. Cornmeal is unchanged. Beans are light stock. Prices are higher and the market is firmer. Feed has a fair sale at even figures. Split peas and barley are firm. We quote :

NOTES.

Shelled walnuts have been advanced in price.

Pepper is firm and tending higher. Cloves and other lines of spice have an upward movement.

Mr. Pickett, representative of "The Canadian Grocer," was in the city this week. He reports that he finds "The Grocer" taken by the wholesale and retail trade almost universally throughout the whole province. Speaking of Moncton in particular, he said there was hardly a retailer in that city who was not a subscriber.

The new home of "Red Rose" is rapidly nearing completion. Mr. Estabrooks is hoping to move in early in October.

Canada Cream Cheese is freely offered here.

Cream of tartar, while still high, continues to drop off in first cost.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, September 14, 1903.

THE Provincial Exhibition is now in full swing and the attendance to date has been unusually large. Travellers are all in the city and while house sales are good some wholesale houses claim the interruption of regular business is not being compensated for by buyers visiting the city. The presence of several thousand visitors for a week or more has distinctly benefitted the city retail trade and no doubt when travellers again visit their respective territories they will secure good country orders. The prospects for Fall trade continue excellent. Crops are better than expected and prices are high. Apples are beyond expectations and this province will have a half million barrels for export, and the quality will be better than ever before. The only drawback is the bank fishery, but even here the catch has been a moderate one, and with fishermen getting a dollar a quintal more than last year they will receive a fair renumeration for their season's labors. Exporters are paying $4.50 to $4.75 per quintal ex. vessel for both bank and shore codfish, and in the last month have turned down a large number of foreign orders because they could not secure the fish to fill them. This was due not so much to the shortage in the catch as to the absence of enough sunshine to properly "cure" the fish. Grocery grades of codfish and herring are scarce and very much wanted. There are fair prospects of a good take of fat mackerel this Fall.

Beans have advanced 25 cents per bushel. This came as a bit of a surprise as up to a little while ago jobbers could have secured beans at $1.50 Halifax. Very little, if any, were bought at this price, as jobbers were afraid to operate. Then came bad weather in the bean growing districts of Ontario and in a few days the entire tone of the market was changed.

Cornmeal has advanced 10 cents, and is now quoted at the round figure, $3. This is due to the lateness of the corn crop and the stronger feeling in this commodity. Flour, both Ontario and Manitoba, has again advanced. There is not a very brisk demand and retailers here are slow to realize the position of the market. At present mill prices flour can only be sold here within the range of the following quotations: Straits, $3.90 to $4; ninety per cents., $4.05 to $4.15; eight per cents., $4.35 to $4.45; Manitobas, $5 to $5.10.

There is some improvement in the demand for provisions and the jobbing price on pork is easier at $19.50 for clear and $20 for American and P.E.I. mess.

There has been no change in molasses, but the market is firm. Quite large quantities of Barbados are being sold here for the Quebec and Montreal markets.

Sugar is firm and unchanged. A considerable quantity of European refined is arriving but not so much as in former years. The demand is good, as considerable quantities are now required for preserving the Autumn fruits.

Just at the moment cheese is a little quiet, but any sales made are at extreme figures. In a jobbing way nothing in the shape of choice Septembers can be had for less than 12 cents.

Factories are holding butter for higher prices, for at the figure dealers offer butter gives a less return per 100 pounds of milk than does cheese.

Eggs are in fair demand and light supply. Jobbers are receiving 17 cents for reliable stock.

Tobaccos have advanced. The new prices at which The Empire Tobacco Company's products sell to the trade here are as follows: Red Fox, 43c.; Bobs, 44c.; Old Fox, 47c.; Pay Roll, 6's, 52c.; Amber, 8's, 56c.; Amber, 3's, 59c.; Snowshoe chewing, 57c.

Large quantities of Nova Scotia green fruits are now arriving at the following prices: No. 1 Gravenstein apples, $3; Bartlett pears, $5; tomatoes, 35c. for 6-qt. basket; corn, 15c. per dozen, and very scarce; Niagara grapes, 50c. for baskets and 20c. for reputed halves.

A good supply of Jamaica oranges arrived by last steamer and sold at $7. About 50 per cent. of the Jamaica orange crop was damaged by the storm, but as the crop was unusually large the market is not likely to be much affected. Bananas are higher and The United Fruit Co. have not been filling more than 25 per cent. of the Halifax orders of late.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 12, 1903.

LAST night at the Hotel Vancouver the visiting delegates of the Chambers of Commerce of the British Empire were the guests of the Vancouver City Corporation and the Vancouver Board of Trade at a banquet which had been jointly prepared, under the direct management of the Board of Trade. Friday evening the delegates returned to the city on the handsome new steamer Princess Victoria, which had been chartered by the Provincial Government to take the visitors on that most delightful day's excursion from the city of Victoria, by way of the gulf, through the many small islands off the coast of Vancouver Island to Nanaimo, and thence across the gulf to Vancouver. The steamer arrived in harbor a little after 6, giving the visitors an opportunity of seeing the beauties of English Bay in the evening, and of the magnificent entrance to Burrard Inlet, the inland sea which forms Vancouver's famous harbor, the greatest on the Pacific coast, and one which is destined to hold vast commerce as the trade of the Orient is modernized and developed.

Yesterday the delegates were entertained by the Board of Trade, the time being spent in visiting the various points of interest in and around the city, and seeing what could be seen of the salmon canneries and fish freezing plants of the Fraser River. To this end a trip to New Westminster had been arranged. Some of the canneries are still in operation, and it was arranged that the visitors should see the whole operation of canning salmon as it is done in the big plants of the Fraser, from the taking of the fish from the scows and boats as they are delivered by the fishermen, to the time when the filled tins are taken from the steam cooking retorts and carried in trays to be taken to the labelling room for lacquering and packing in cases ready for shipment.

The big cold storage plants where fish are put up in the fresh state and frozen for shipment to all parts of the world were seen also.

The wholesale grocers have not yet recovered from the rush of orders which have been sent off to Dawson and other Yukon points during the past three weeks or so. Stocks have been badly broken up. In fact it was an impossibility to keep stocks up while such vast quantities of goods were being sent forward. Every wholesale house is now straightening out the stocks which remain with the hope of being able to get them back on a business basis shortly. Even this is difficult as northern shipments are still lively, and likely to be so until the freeze-up. There are always many late orders coming in, and at present there are even a number of buyers from the north in the city looking up supplies for the Winter. This is especially true in the line of vegetables. The Dawsonites are entirely dependent on this market to supply them with such homely necessaries as potatoes, and the market in the north is very fastidious. Any old murphy is not good enough. There must be a careful selection of every tuber which is sent north, as many amateur dealers have discovered to their cost, when they found themselves face to face with the market in Dawson. Potatoes are almost a luxury at all times in the north, and most especially so in the Winter season. Therefore the consumer demands a selected article when he pays a high price for his potatoes.

The Ashcroft potato, a specialty of the dry sandy soil of the interior district around Ashcroft, Spence's Bridge and other up-line points is particularly desired in Dawson. It is the best potato grown in the country, and in fact would be hard to beat anywhere. Whether it is a variety distinct from that grown elsewhere, or that the peculiar conditions of soil and climate have specialized some well-known sort of potato, it is now recognized that the long, smooth oval, yellow-white skinned, and clear-meated potato from Ashcroft cannot be counterfeited. The boiling is the test and potatoes grown elsewhere from seed produced in the Ashcroft district cannot hold their own with the genuine.

It is too early yet to dig the Ashcroft potatoes for shipment north, though one car has arrived on the market here this week. The fully matured stock for shipment to Dawson will not be in for some two or three weeks yet. By that time it is a chance to get them through before cold weather. Small wonder then that Ashcroft potatoes command fancy prices in Dawson at all times.

The grocery markets show but slight alterations this week. The trade has been notified of the withdrawal of all lines of canned goods by the packers of Eastern Canada. No orders are now being accepted, even at open figures. All quotations have been withdrawn for the present. On some lines no quotations have been made at all this season.

California supplies of such canned vegetables as come to this market are at high prices. Tomatoes are now costing, laid down here, $1.33½, and the California shippers expect to advance that quotation. Local wholesalers expect to better that from the east.

All canned fruits from California have advanced in price since first quotations. The position of dried fruits is strong in sympathy. In fact all dried fruits have advanced slightly.

Beans, all varieties of which are supplied to this market from California, have dropped slightly in expectation of new crop being ready for the market.

In fruits, the only really new item this week is the Concord grape supplied the market from Washington. The price is 75 to 85c. per ten-pound basket. California grapes are quoted at $1.75 to $2 for the 20-lb. basket. Crawford peaches are in fairly liberal supply from the State of Washington at 90c. to $1 per crate. There are also some of the Muir variety from California at about the same figure. Bartlett pears from Washington and Oregon are in good supply and of much better quality than the California goods averaged this season. The price is $1.75 to $2 per box, 40 lb.

It is between seasons for apples just now. There are no California apples coming in and Washington, like British Columbia, is almost over for early varieties, while the later varieties are not ready to ship yet. This, of course, is referring to choice goods. A fair supply of some sorts of local apples is at hand at from 75c. to $1.25 per box.

Plums, even local, are almost over for this season. The crop has been very heavy and sold at low figures. Italian prunes are coming in from Washington, but the local crop of Italians are not being marketed to any extent yet.

Produce market conditions are somewhat relieved by receipt yesterday of three cars of eggs from Eastern Canada by The W. H. Malkin Co. Ltd. The market has been rather short recently. Prices are firm at quotations which have been ruling lately. A car of Ontario cheese is also among this week's receipts. Creamery butter is being received in sufficient quantities from Manitoba and the Northwest. There are also some shipments of dairy coming in from the same source. Local creamery butter is up again, the retail price of Edenbank creamery now being 35c. per pound.

TEA REPORTS.

McMEEKIN & CO.'S notes on Indian and Ceylon teas for the month of August, issued from London under date of September 3, report:

INDIAN.—There was a steady tone throughout the month and the demand was quite equal to the supply. All grades remained firm, with a tendency towards advancing prices. The average of public sales for the month was 8¼d. per lb., against 7¼d. per lb. for the corresponding month of last year. The statistics, generally, are of a satisfactory character and the volume of the deliveries shows a fair expansion.

CEYLON.—The indifferent quality of recent months was again apparent, but towards the close of the month there was some improvement. Although medium teas were irregular in the early auctions, the tone generally was strong, with a tendency to advance, especially in regard to teas for price and a few lots of choice character. The average public sale price for the month was 7d. per lb., as against 6½d. per lb. for the corresponding month last year.

GREEN TEAS.—The trade in these was insignificant, only 55 packages of Indian and 229 packages of Ceylon having been printed for auction.

William James and Henry Thompson in their London tea circular for same date say: The bidding this week has been active and the way in which the sales have passed contrasts favorably with what happened this time last year when the heavy stocks held by the trade, the uncertainty as to the extent of the Indian crop, and the disturbances over the clearing house question, all combined to unsettle business. Tea is now evidently wanted by the trade generally and a brisk market may reasonably be expected, for some weeks at all events.

The London August figures are interesting. In the first place stocks of all kinds are fourteen millions less than last year, while deliveries for the past three months show an increase of five million pounds. It is also noteworthy that this increase consists almost entirely of Indian tea, Ceylon showing a decrease of one million pounds, which was counterbalanced by correspondingly heavier clearances of China.

Gow, Wilson & Stanton, writing September 4, say: The report of the director-general of statistics gives the total acreage under tea in India at the end of 1902 as 525,252 with a production of 188,589,261 lb., against an acreage of 524,767, and production of 191,302,773 lb. in 1901. It also states that only 4,464,762 lb. were retained for local consumption, besides 3,480,716 lb. imported from other countries.

INDIAN.—Demand was strong, all kinds selling very steadily, while anything with attractive quality realized full prices.

CEYLON.—Medium teas if anything a trifle dearer, while better class descriptions sold well, last week's rates being maintained for commonest grades. Quality is now beginning to show signs of improvement.

Window and Interior Displays

Timely Hints and Suggestions.

The Competition.

ONLY two and a half weeks remain of the time limit for the window-dressing competition, and those who contemplate entering, but who have not as yet arranged and photographed the window, will need to pay immediate attention to it. The prizes, which are $10, $7 and $5 are well worth competing for, and the additional offer of $2 for every photograph worth reproducing insures the sender against loss. In addition to the chances of obtaining the money, there are the advantages to be derived from the healthy stimulus the entering in such a competition will give to the interest the merchant will have in his windows. Numerous ideas will be seized upon in the preparation of a prize window, that would not be noticed if an ordinary window were being arranged. Although at the moment this stimulus may not be deemed worthy of much notice, in after months its value will be duly appreciated and the continual interest in window-dressing and the ideas gathered will reap their own reward.

PHOTOGRAPHING THE WINDOW.

Many questions have been asked, since the competition opened, concerning the photographing of the window, the great difficulty being the prevention of the reflection in the glass of the buildings on the opposite side of the street. This obstacle to good photographs has prevented many a picture from being taken, and spoiled many others for reproduction.

If the photo must be taken in the day time, it can be considered, as a general rule, that the early morning is the best time, when the light is clear and few pedestrians are on the street. Of course, the hour has much to do with the extent of the reflections, as the shining of the sun on the opposite buildings will absolutely spoil a picture if the light is at all reflected in the window. But provided it is sufficiently early, but still light enough, the face of the opposite buildings will be too dark to cast annoying reflections, and will act as a screen from objects that would catch the light. The best moment can be considered by studying the light the morning previous to the taking of the picture.

Should the early morning prove unsuitable, there is another method which allows the taking of the picture at any hour of the day. Take a piece of black cambric or any cheap black material of a width of about four or five feet more than the window and of a height to be found by experiment. Attach this to two poles, one on each side, and have a couple of boys hold this screen just behind the camera. The object is to hide the buildings which would cast reflections, and the size can be found by tests. This method is very little trouble, proves of uniform success, and the screen can be rolled up and stored away for future use.

To the store with well lit windows—those using gas or electricity—the best photographs can be taken at night. The only difficulty met with in such a picture is the "halation" caused by the lights themselves. To prevent this the lights can be concealed from view (a point that is always observed in the best windows), or non-halation or "backed" plates can be used. These plates eliminate almost all of the mass of light that surrounds the lights themselves. In some windows where the lights are visible they are of such height as to interfere very little with the exhibit, and in such cases the ordinary plates can be used. The exposure for a night window will vary according to the degree of light and the rapidity of the plate, from five minutes to possibly half an hour. The passing of people between the camera and the window will not interfere with the picture, provided they are not allowed to stand.

A letter has been received asking if flashes cannot be used in taking a picture of a window. Outside the window a flash would be of absolutely no use, merely reflecting on the glass and going no further for picture purposes. Inside the window the flash would have to be set off out of sight, and the halation even then would be impossible to prevent. The light, too, from a flash in the window would be cast necessarily on slightly different sides from those seen by the camera. Flashes cannot be used for the window, but for interior work are unsurpassed, unless the light from outside is very good.

THE EXPENSE BUGBEAR.

When some expense is apt to be incurred in the preparation of a window, it is a common thing for that scheme to be abandoned, and another one adopted, which includes only the arrangement of the goods, without outside accessories. If a window is considered as valuable, why cannot the expense be thought of as paying for itself? A display that shows expense, shows extra attention on the part of the merchant, and every spectator is favorably impressed. A window that costs $5 may sell $100 worth of goods, and the moral benefit cannot be estimated. In every case, too, part of the auxiliary fittings can be retained for another display. Cheap windows, when never varied, will bring cheap trade.

A Window Display Competition.

THE CANADIAN GROCER, for the encouragement of tasty window displays, has decided to open a competition for its subscribers. Prizes will be awarded for photos or drawings of window displays and accompanying descriptions of the same. The prizes will consist of:

First Prize - - -	$10
Second Prize -	$7

and $2 for every picture and description which is considered worthy of publication.

The competition, which closes on Oct. 1, will admit of photographs, pen and ink or wash drawings, with good ideas counting more than the picture itself, although, of course, all pictures in order to receive a prize, must be of sufficient distinctness and good workmanship to admit of their publication.

There is no progressive merchant but has at least one window a month that is worthy of entering this competition, and the prizes are so arranged that, even if a window does not win the $10, $7 or $5 prize, it may be awarded a $2 prize, provided only that it is of sufficient merit to publish in the columns of this paper. This award will cover the cost of the photograph and there is no reason why any merchant should not obtain it. The number of photographs or drawings submitted by each store is not limited, nor is the number of $2 prizes; a merchant may win a dozen if his pictures merit them.

Should any intending competitor not know how to take a window picture, this paper will be glad to furnish him with instructions. In general terms, it may be stated that the early morning, when the light is clear, when few people are abroad and when there is the least reflection, is the best time to photograph the display. A good photograph can also be taken at night by the aid of an electric or flash light.

Mark all manuscripts and photographs intended for this department with the words "Window Dressing Competition."

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Contributors are requested to send news only, not puffs of goods they handle, or the arrival of standard goods that everyone has in stock, or that they are offering goods at close figures, or that they have had an unusually large sale this season.

A. F. MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co. state that the weather now permits shipment of country orders of Canada Cream Cheese.

The R. & J. H. Simpson Co., Guelph, have a snap to offer in high-grade vinegars.

The carload of Singapore Canned Pineapple, recently imported by Balfour & Co., Hamilton, are being sold at extremely low figures considering the superior quality of the goods.

A. F. MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., have on the road a large shipment of Bensdorp's Cocoa to supply the demand of the coming cocoa season; shipment to arrive about October 10.

The first shipment of new season's peels is in store with The Eby, Blain Co., Limited.

A shipment of fine French petit pois, all grades and sizes, and French beans, from the house of Delory, is in store with Henri Jonas & Co., Montreal.

New pack peas, corn and tomatoes are in full supply. Lucas, Steele & Bristol are holders.

With new valencias and new peels in store and new currants in sight, Balfour & Co., Hamilton, are making early preparations for the holiday trade.

A. F. MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co. purchased all the prize cheese exhibited at the Toronto Exhibition—some 450 boxes in number—about half white and half colored, which, of course, are the finest the country can produce. Retail grocers wishing to secure a few of the cheese will do well to send in orders at once.

New crop "Patna" rices are quoted at close figures by The Eby, Blain Co., Limited.

Special values in French alimentary pastes are offered by Messrs. Jonas & Co.

Lucas, Steele & Bristol offer Patterson's home-made preserves in glass. Strawberries, raspberries, etc. Quality extra.

Balfour & Co., Hamilton, report a good demand in British Columbia and the N.W.T. for goods of the "Tartan" brand.

The Eby, Blain Co., Limited, are quoting low prices on first shipment new Valencia raisins, arriving this week.

Balfour & Co. have a large and carefully selected stock of green and black Ceylons, Hysons and Japan teas, all new goods and extra values, for the retailer to sell at 25 to 35c.

What is claimed to be the largest consignment of Spanish olives ever received in Canada by any one importer has just been received by Henri Jonas & Co., Montreal. Mr. Jonas visited the olive districts of Spain some months ago, and his selection of all grades of olives is reported as being of the finest, and specially low prices are made to jobbers.

Dearborn & Co., St. John, N.B., are offering new canned strawberries. These are packed under their own label.

Williams' soap for shaving, bars and sticks, may be procured from Lucas, Steele & Bristol.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

The Food Value of White Flour.

Prof. Harry Snyder before the Millers' National Federation at Detroit.

THERE is no other food which can compare with wheat flour in value at ordinary prices. A larger amount and variety of nutritive substances can be procured in the form of wheat flour than from any other food.

With flour at 2½c. a pound, or $5 a barrel, and meat at from 12c. to 16c. a pound (certainly a low figure for meats and a comparatively high figure for flour), 10c. worth of wheat flour contains more proteid nutrients and yields a larger amount of available energy than 10c. worth of any other foods. In other words, the laboring man gets a better balanced food and more for his money when he buys wheat flour than when he buys any other food.

For bread-making purposes, the value of flour depends largely upon the amount and character of the gluten, and the soundness of the original wheat. The process of obtaining the gluten by washing to remove the starch is simple, and can be carried out without the use of expensive apparatus.

The chemistry of flour and bread-making are subjects more worthy of study in schools and colleges than are mythology and ancient history. If more instruction were given in foods, people would be better off healthwise and they would not be so easily imposed upon. The average high school and college graduate knows but little about the value of flour and foods in general. Most text-books upon physiology and chemistry do not treat of the subject of foods as extensively as they should and, as a result, quack literature is too abundant.

Wheat flour is not susceptible to gross forms of adulteration. Less adulteration is practiced in the case of flour than of any other food article. Any tampering with the composition of flour or addition of any foreign material shows itself immediately in the production of a smaller or poorer bread product. Any chemical treatment weakens the expansion powers and affects the gluten which is a sensitive mixture of chemical compounds easily oxidized. As an illustration, if the flour is sterilized at 180 degrees F., the loaf is slightly smaller.

There is no food product which has had a better reputation for honest worth than wheat flour. The roller process of milling has been a step in advance in the production of flour of highest food value, because the granular middlings which were formerly lost are now reduced and recovered in the flour. It is more economical to grind flour by gradual reduction between steel rolls and to pass it through silk bolting cloths than it is to attempt to pulverize it in the human body, and force the coarse particles along the delicate mucous membranes.

The results and conclusions summarized in this series of investigations have been verified by a number of European investigators. Dr. Robert Hutchinson, of the London Hospital and of the Hospital for Sick Children, Great Ormond Street, London, in summing up the work which has been done by different scientists, says: "On the whole, we may fairly regard the vexed question of whole meal versus white flour as finally settled and settled in favor of the latter."

The Golden Wheat Fields.

Like liquid gold the wheat field lies,
A marvel of yellow and green,
That ripples and runs, that floats and flies,
With the subtle shadows, the change—the sheen
That plays in the golden hair of a girl.
A cloud flies there—
A ripple of amber—a flare
Of light follows after. A swirl
In the hollows, like the twinkling feet
Of a fairy waltzer, the colors run
To the western sun,
Through the deeps of the ripening wheat.

I hear the reapers' far-off hum,
So faint and far, it seems the drone
Of bee or beetle; seems to come
From far-off, fragrant, fruity zone,
A land of plenty, where,
Toward the sun, as hasting there,
The colors run before the wind's feet
In the wheat.

The wild hawk swoops
To his prey in the deeps;
The sunflower droops
To the lazy wave; the wind sleeps—
Then running in dazzling links and loops
A marvel of shadow and shine,
A glory of olive and amber and wine
Runs the color in the wheat.

Winnipeg Grain Receipts.

THE Dominion grain inspector at Winnipeg has given out the returns of grain inspected in that city for the year ending August 30 as follows: Wheat, 51,833,000 bush.; oats, 3,054,000 bush.; barley, 565,200 bush.; flax, 655,000 bush.; speltz, 1,000 bush.; total, 56,117,200 bush.

Figures of receipts at Fort William and Port Arthur for the same period are: Wheat, 31,237,823 bush.; oats, 1,608,963 bush.; barley, 345,928 bush.; flax, 16,167 bush. The differences between Winnipeg and Fort William figures indicate local consumption and all-rail shipments.

C. N. Bell, secretary of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, referring to these figures, says he does not think the Canadians fully realize the volume of grain being shipped from Western Canada. The figures show that Winnipeg receipts of wheat greatly exceed those of Chicago or of Duluth. The figures are: Winnipeg, 51,833,000 bush.; Duluth, 42,046,923 bush; Chicago, 37,940,953 bush. Mr. Bell says: "It will now be in order, so far as relates to the grain arrivals at least, to abandon the trite saying, 'Winnipeg will some day be a second Chicago,' for Chicago makes but a poor show compared with this market in wheat handling."

A Wail From Philadelphia.

THE alarm which, as previously noted, has been agitating the American Atlantic ports over the premier position which Montreal is taking in the export grain trade, finds voice in the following circular to shippers at Philadelphia.

"Rate from Chicago f.o.b. north Atlantic ports 7c. per bush.

"Rate from Chicago to f.o.b. ocean steamer Montreal 4c. per bush.

"Difference in favor of shipments through Canadian ports 3c. per bush.

"Here is a fine exhibit. The grain which was formerly handled by the north Atlantic ports and shipped through Duluth, Chicago and various lake ports is now being taken out of the United States by Canadian roads, shipped through Canada and put on ocean steamers at Montreal at 3c. per bush. less than it can be done through New York or Philadelphia. Grain exporters and parties engaged in this business are very glad to handle it at ¼c. per bush. margin. So far as the export grain business is concerned, the north Atlantic ports of the United States might as well be wiped off the map. The ocean freight from Montreal to the United Kingdom and continental ports is practically the same as it is from New York or Philadelphia. Thus it will be seen that the grain shipped from Montreal can be laid down in Europe at 3c. a bush. less than it can when shipped through United States ports.

"The remedy lies with the railway companies. The present basis of 5c. per bush. on grain at and east of Buffalo is prohibi.

tive and farcical. But a few years ago railways were glad to handle this business at 2½c. a bush, and when they got 3c. they thought they were making big money. The all-rail rate on grain for export from the Mississippi River to the seaboard is 16c. per 100. It is but a little while since an export rate of 10c. and 12c. was in operation, and the Atlantic seaboard had a fighting chance for business from west of the Mississippi.

"How long is this state of affairs to continue? The merchants doing business from the north Atlantic ports have worked for a number of years to build up the commerce of their respective ports and to sustain the ocean steamship lines, which are now running at considerable loss. Quite a number of steamers have been taken off, and unless something is speedily done to compete with those Montreal shipments there will be but few steamers running from the north Atlantic ports of the United States. Some of the lines will have to go out of business entirely."

The Invention of Bread.

THE discovery in Egypt of a loaf of bread 4,000 years old or older, a part of which was well enough preserved to make it possible to identify barley as the grain of which it was made, recalls the fact that one of the most remarkable of all inventions is so old that we have not only no account of it, but nothing pointing to it, and so common to-day that we rarely think of it as an invention or a wonder—it is bread.

There have been found in Egypt pictures and inscriptions that carry the history of bread-making very far back, and show us some of the early processes. Yet what they show us is unmistakably bread, and the invention of the process lies far back of that. We can learn from the monuments and records from Egypt, what we might have suspected—that grain was broken by pounding before the art of grinding was invented, and that food was warmed and perhaps cooked with hot stones before ovens were known. But a loaf of bread made from grain pounded to pieces and baked between hot stones is just as much bread as the loaf upon our breakfast table, and the circumstances or process of the invention of the art of making it is still a mystery.

Primitive man spent most of his time as the wild animal does—in seeking food. That grain grew wild and that our hungry ancestors chewed the kernels, as they probably chewed at one time or another almost everything that their teeth could deal with, can easily be imagined. But at what time it occurred to man to make bread, to bake the kernels, mix the resulting meal with water, and apply heat to it, we do not know and can never find out, for man did this so early that it was too old and familiar a story to be recorded when he learned how to make records.

Man ate the flesh of animals for a long period before he found it better cooked than raw, and there is undoubtedly a good deal of history in Charles Lamb's humorous account of the discovery of roast pig. The benefit of cooking was probably discovered accidentally. The step from raw to cooked meat is too long to have been taken by primitive man as the result of reflection or experiment. If man's first taste of roast meat came from animals in a burning forest, it would not have been unnatural for him to try heat on grain. The breaking of the kernels would easily have suggested itself as a relief to his teeth, and mixing the coarse meal with water would have readily occurred to him as a means of making the meal stick together, without which any process of baking or roasting would have been most inconvenient of application. But, unless the cooking of food were discovered accidentally, it was a greater advance on the pre-existing state of knowledge than the most remarkable of the inventions that have distinguished the nineteenth century.—The Practical Confectioner and Baker (London).

Old World Bread Superstitions.

Food is not lightly regarded by the poor of foreign lands who know what it is to feel the gnawing pangs of hunger and who would regard the waste that goes on in the home of the average American workman as nothing less than a mortal sin. Since bread forms the principal part of the diet in many old-world countries, it is naturally held in high esteem.

Nothing can be more beautiful than the act of the Breton peasant who, before cutting his loaf, makes the sign of the cross on it. If he stopped there, expressing his thankfulness for food, that would be well; but superstition carries him much further. If a child is born to him, a crumb of that bread, especially if it be rye bread, is put into the infant's sleeve, and then the chances of the baby's having the colic are diminished. If a cow shows signs of sickness, or a horse is lame, a crumb of the bread is supposed to benefit the animal.

In Bavaria, when you go into the woods, especially that portion infested by spirits, only put a crust of bread in your mouth and no ghost, spirit or witch can trouble you. Many retain an idea of the peculiar sanctity of bread. For instance, it is all right to leave a bit of meat on your plate, but it is wicked to leave a piece of bread. Very good fathers and mothers inculcate that idea, and little children believe then that there is something particularly sacred about bread which a potato does not possess.

Stone Flour and its "Nutty Flavor."

THE milling public at large, says The American Miller, has imagined that the celebrated case of Stones versus Rolls had been fought out in the lower courts, argued on appeal and decided by the supreme court of public opinion. But occasionally someone tries to get the case reopened. Such is the fact now in Australia, where a miller has taken the platform against roller flour. The rolls crush the life out of the flour and the flour crushes the life out of the people, he says; and he draws a picture of dyspeptic and toothless eaters of roller-made flour moving in an ever-increasing procession towards lunatic asylums. And all because the wheat is crushed by metal instead of being ground by stone.

There are not many millers or others who talk in such a strain, but there are plenty who insist that the old-time "nutty flavor" deserted flour when rolls were introduced in the mill. There may be reason in this, in the exclusion of the germ, which is a distinct element of the wheat. But a British baker has gone further, and insists that the old-time flavor was produced by the dirt and trash ground up with the wheat in the old-time mills. He made a collection of 14 different kinds of impurities from a modern roller mill that would have been ground up in the old-time British mills in the proportion of 15 lb. of trash to every 280 lb. of flour.

So, maybe it was dirt and not germ that gave the "nutty flavor." But how is it that roller-made flour from macaroni wheat has this same flavor? Where was the flavor located, anyhow? In the dirt, the germ, or in the wheat?

Cereal Notes.

E. V. Tillson, of Tillsonburg, paid THE GROCER a visit last week.

Over 2,432,000 bushels of grain have passed through the Meaford elevator so far this year.

The Moose Mountain Star predicts a yield of 30 bushels to the acre in that district of Manitoba.

Spencer Bros., bakers and confectioners, St. Thomas, Ont., are about to enter on the wholesale bakery business.

Another big milling firm to adopt the wire hoop for flour barrels is the Pillsbury-Washburn Co. The saving is said to be ½c. to 1c. per barrel.

One of the largest health food concerns in Battle Creek, Mich., purpose building a large factory in Canada early in the coming year.

Manitoba's first wheat shipment was made about 26 years ago. It was then considered a large shipment—some 500 bushels. To-day 42,000 farmers produce from 120,000,000 to 150,000,000 bushels of grain.

It has transpired that one of the leading Manitoba milling concerns have advanced their prices 15c. per barrel, making the price $4.65 for patent and $4.35 for second patent. The advance is made on account of the prices now being paid to the Manitoba farmers for their wheat.

FOREST CITY GOSSIP.

Office of THE CANADIAN GROCER.
365 Richmond street,
London, Ont., Sept. 14, 1903.

THERE is much commotion this week in all branches of the grocery trade in this city, incident to the Western Fair. Travellers have as usual gone out on their regular trips for a few days in the beginning of the week, but will all return home early. Unlike the other wholesale branches of trade, but few purchases are made in the wholesale grocery warehouses by outside merchants visiting the Fair, on account of the frequency with which calls are made by travellers on their respective routes. It is, however, expected that many will visit the houses with whom they deal regularly, but more from courtesy than with the intention of buying goods.

Last Saturday's market was a Western Fair market in every respect. Citizens—ladies predominating—were abroad at an early hour in search of the best the market afforded, and from the endless variety of products on sale it is fair to conclude that they accomplished their object, and that the prices demanded suited in every case the length of the purse carried.

Such a plentiful supply of apples, plums, pears, peaches, etc., has not been reported for many a day. Roots and vegetables were also plentifully supplied, and large sales were effected, presumably in view of the Fair week.

The advance in dairy products was well maintained, and both butter and eggs sold quickly at 2c. higher all round than a week ago. Poultry was largely supplied, and a brisk trade was done. Dressed chickens sold at 50 to 75c. per pair; ducks 70 to 90c. per pair. A few turkeys were offered but the prices demanded were too high for the average housekeeper.

Grain is not so plentifully supplied as has been anticipated, and an increase in the price paid for oats may be noted over that of last week. The prices current for grains at this writing are as under:—Wheat, 72 to 75c. per bushel; oats, 28¾ to 31¼c.; corn, 60 to 65c.; peas, 84 to 90c.; buckwheat, 51 to 55c.; barley, 38½ to 43c.; rye, 53 to 56c.

Bank clearings for the past week at the London Clearing House were $705,519.

* * *

Mr. Arthur Brener, cigar manufacturer, who has been ill with typhoid fever the past two or three weeks, is now rapidly convalescing.

* * *

Mr. Cole, of this city, has taken possession of the oil property and woodyard purchased from Alex. Ewing, of Petrolia. Mr. Cole has also purchased the oil property west of Marthaville, for years owned by Samuel Stokes.

A DEPARTMENT FOR RETAIL MERCHANTS.

A $50 Investment.

THE GROCER is sincerely interested in the tradesman's prosperity, and is glad to be able to suggest from time to time means by which grocers can increase their sales and profits. There is such a thing as increasing sales without increasing profits, and many a firm in its efforts to swell the yearly turnover has overlooked the question of margins, to find some black day that expansion is not always growth, and that a heavy turnover is not always accompanied by a corresponding increase in profits. When the year's balance is struck off the profit and loss account may prove a sad revelation.

There are possibilities, however, of larger sales with satisfactory profits without additional working expense, with comparatively small outlay. Every grocer has time to sell a little more. It then becomes a question as to what lines to push or to make prominent. In this connection we have to suggest that those grocers who have not already done so add a cigar department to their other activities — perhaps not a department exactly, say only a small stock, four or five or a dozen lines, tastefully and effectively displayed in a glass case. The cost for a very small stock of cigars need not exceed $15 to $25. A glass case can be had for another $10 or $15, making the initial investment ranging from $25 to $50. When the revenue from such a small investment is reckoned it will be found that the cigar department pays most gratifyingly.

Cigar selling consumes the minimum of time. "Give me a cigar, please," and in 60 seconds the transaction is completed. There is still another aspect worth noting: Grocery stores are women's stores; men drop in rarely to transact business. This is one of the unfortunate things in the grocery trade, for men are good buyers of many things if they can be interested at all. How often does the wife say to the husband, "You buy so much when you go shopping?" To attract the men is business wisdom.

The whole question can be stated in a few words: Cigar smoking is increasing. Cigars are sold by tobacconists, druggists, fruiterers and others. Then why should not the grocer sell cigars and make the profit that he is, by his lack of interest, lack of business brightness, permitting to be enjoyed by his business competitor?

Saints and Diplomacy.

For a number of years I ran a tobacco plantation in the Island of Cuba, remarked a middle-aged gentleman to a number of friends recently, and at the very outset met with the same difficulty every other manager has had for the last two hundred years. About three times a week was saints' day for all hands, and they'd knock off work to hang around the villages. It did no good to coax or threaten. I simply had to take it out in cussing them. When I first took hold I was waited upon by a priest, who wanted to know what sum I would pay over to him monthly for the benefit of the souls of my people. He had the flock in charge, and it was customary at all plantations to pay a regular stipend; but when the men began to keep saints' days I went to the priest and complained of the interruption.

"Senor, it is the custom and cannot be changed," he replied. "If my people did not respect the saints what would become of their souls?"

I said no more, but when the second monthly pay day came around I was better prepared for the occasion. The priest was on hand for his stipend, as was every hand for his wages, but I gave it out that no one would be paid. Great excitement followed, and pretty soon the priest came to the office to ask why the money was withheld.

"It is St. John's day and I am not working," I replied. "I also have saints to look out for, as I forgot to tell you."

"But you will pay to-morrow?"

"Tomorrow is St. Thomas' day."

"And the day after?"

"Is St. David's day."

Sale of Tobacco on a Sunday in Scotland.

The sale of tobacco was permitted on Sunday in bygone times in Scotland. It was regarded as a necessity, and is referred to in the parochial record of Alyth for 1675 as follows : "This day the merchants of Alyth, being chairged, were called and compeired and promised not to sell any wares to any person upon the Sabbath, between or after sermons, except it be upon necessitie, and that to any sick person, nor to sell unnecessarie things, as they did formerlie, upon the Sabbath, except the neidfull tobacco or bread."

Queens Who Smoke.

The Empress Elizabeth, of Austria, who was assassinated near Geneva, used to smoke 30 to 40 cigarettes daily, either Turkish or Russian, and used also to indulge occasionally in small Italian cigars.

The Czarina smokes cigarettes now and then, and on her desk there are always a couple of golden and engraved cigarette cases, a silver ash tray and a malachite match holder.

The Queen of Italy seldom smokes, but the mother of the King of Spain consumes a large number of Egyptian cigarettes every day.

Former Queen Natalie, of Servia, owns a magnificently jewelled smoking outfit, and is very partial to the habit.

The Queen of Roumania, Carmen Sylva, also owns a large number of gold and silver cigarette cases, but she does not much like the aroma of tobacco.

The Queen of Portugal, on the other hand, is an ardent lover of the weed. She prefers a special brand of German tobacco, which is sent to her especially from Dresden. Her mother, the Countess of Paris, occasionally indulges in an Havana cigarette or two.

At the English court the ladies are strictly prohibited from smoking by Queen Alexandra, who will not allow smoking in her presence. Many fair members of the English aristocracy are far from pleased thereat, because among them are many confirmed smokers.

She Wins.

The plug and cigar with the long cut and snuff
Were arguing as to their merits ;
Till crazed by the noise I spoke sharply enough
To silence their turbulent spirits.
I said, "Now, if you
Would kindly subdue
Your voices and each tell his tale,
I might be enabled to tell who is who
And place you according to scale."

The snuff was first speaker, and strongly laid stress
On the fact that queen, bishop and knight
Who shunned all tobaccos in different dress,
Had used it with royal delight
The plug was the next,
And on the same text
Showed that sailors and soldiers in blue
Would rather relinquish their brandy and smoke
Than give up their regular chew.

"Just picture a German, his pipe in his mouth !"
The long cut began with a frown.
"If I don't give pleasure, no more will I shout
But go way back and sit down."
"You know you all quit
Whenever I'm lit
The moment a gentleman chooses,"
The cigar thus replied, "For you see I am IT,
And so every one of you loses."

But over the uproar a sound we all heard,
The swish of a woman's apparel ;
And every debater his answer deferred,
Which of course put an end to the quarrel ;
A sprite stood beside us
Whose loveliness tied us,
And held us spell-bound in her presence.
She spoke, and her pleading with music so plied us,
We vowed her of wisdom the essence.

"Desist," she remarked, with a smile like an elf ;
"You talk, but know not what you mean.
When men ask for you, it is really myself—
The lady, the fair Nicotine.
For I am the sprite
Who confers the delight
Tobacco affords in its place ;
My breath is the balm and my soul is the calm,
The Gods' kindest gift to the race."

London Gossip.

This week is expected to be a very busy one in cigar manufacturing circles, as the trade make a point of visiting the Western Fair regularly each year. All the manufacturers extend a hearty welcome to dealers whether in the hotel, tobacco or grocery trade, and their best endeavors will be used to make their visit pleasant.

Arthur Brener, of Brener Bros., is confined to his room with typhoid fever. The critical stage, however, has been successfully passed and he is now rapidly convalescing. O. E. and O. R. Brener, who are at present in Dawson City, leave that place the end of the present month for London.

In the parade on Labor Day, which was held notwithstanding the steady downpour of rain, the cigarmakers union made a very attractive turn out, with their white caps and aprons, and were awarded a prize.

The Mutual Benefit Cigar Company, of this city, will have a very attractive exhibit at the coming fair.

Tobacco Notes.

T. J. Horrocks, the Toronto wholesale tobacconist, says that every visitor at his warehouse during the Exhibition referred to the growing demand for the Ronto cigar.

The pipe importations of The W. H. Steele Co., Scott street, Toronto, are well worthy of the attention of our friends in the grocery trade who handle this class of goods.

The sales of "Queen's Navy" cut plug smoking tobacco, manufactured by the Erie Tobacco Company, Windsor, has increased so much of late that the factory has all it can attend to in supplying the demand.

A representative of THE CANADIAN GROCER paid a visit on Tuesday last to the home of the "Bachelor" and "Humber" cigars, Toronto. A. Wilson & Co. have recently made some extensive alterations and additions to their premises, and even with the recent improvements find they are unable to cope with their increased business. With the new additions the factory now extends to Wellington street, and has every advantage as to light and ventilation. The cleanliness and order prevailing in the factory is very noticeable and reflects great credit on Mr. Lotz, the foreman, who has now nearly 100 cigarmakers under his control.

FAILURE OF THE FRENCH SARDINE CATCH.

From U.S. Consul Ridgely, Nantes, France.

I HAVE to report another very bad year for the French sardine industry, of which Nantes is the centre of trade. Last year great misery was entailed upon the fishermen of Brittany and great loss to the packers and exporters by the almost complete failure of the sardine catch, and it has been feared up to the present date that this year would be as bad, if not worse, than 1902. Recently, however, sardines have begun to appear in small quantities off the western coast, and it is now hoped that the catch may improve, but it is almost certain that this will not exceed 25 per cent. of a good, average season. Two reasons are ascribed for the failure of the famous little fish to appear in their usual plenitude. First of these is the excessively cold Spring and Summer; the second is the scarcity and high price of the codfish roe (la rogue), which the fishermen use for bait in attracting and holding the sardines on the fishing grounds. The situation in this respect is quite the same as last year, and much discouragement has been felt in consequence among the thousands of fishermen and packers who exploit the industry. It is also reported here that this year the Portuguese and Spanish sardine catch has been below the normal.

Last year the French catch was less than 20 per cent. of the average, and up to the present date the catch of 1903 has been even worse than that of last year; but, as above stated, the fish are at present beginning to make their appearance and, although the season is too far advanced to hope for anything like an average catch, it is believed that better results will be realized than were at first anticipated.

Sardine fishing is conducted all along the western coast from Brest to La Rochelle, and the best season is generally from about July 1 to September 1. Thousands of fishermen devote all their energies to the work of netting the famous and toothsome little fish, which in this part of the Bay of Biscay are considered of better quality than elsewhere in the Atlantic or Mediterranean, and many great packing factories along the coast buy the daily catch and prepare it for immediate packing in oil. The sardines of the Nantes district, including Brest and Lorient, are famous and are particularly popular in the United States.

An idea of the importance of the sardine industry may be had when the exports to the United States alone are considered. During the fiscal years ended June 30, 1902 and 1903, they reached the following declared value:

From—	1902.	1903.
Bordeaux	$603,326	$411,768
Nantes and agencies	611,338	341,303
Total	$1,214,664	$753,071

SPANISH SARDINES IN FRANCE.

In considering the above figures it should be remembered that of the exports for 1903 about 30 per cent. came out of the surplus stocks of the catch 1901-2. This year, unfortunately, there are no surplus stocks, and, consequently, the great exporting houses are virtually unable to fill any very considerable orders for French sardines at all. In this emergency some of the houses are supplying their French buyers with Spanish sardines, and it is now estimated that fully 200,000 cases of the Spanish product will enter France this year. The total average annual French consumption of sardines is from 600,000 to 700,000 cases, each case containing either 100 quarter boxes or 50 half boxes. The total annual exportation is about 600,000 cases.

Spanish sardines are not exported in any considerable quantities to the United States for the reason that they are very much larger than the American taste demands. For example, in the Spanish quarter box there are only five or six sardines, while the so-called standard American quarter box must contain from 12 to 18. Spanish sardines, while not equaling the French, are considered here much better than the Portuguese article.

PRICES.

Sardine packers claim that in order to do business on a profitable basis they must buy their sardines from the fishermen at from 10 to 15 francs ($1.93 to $2.89) per 1,000, meaning thereby a fish of average size, which counts from 10 to 12 in a quarter box. This indeed was the average price for many years. Last year, however, owing to the failure of the catch and the high price of bait, the price paid to the fishermen was from 30 to 35 francs ($5.79 to $6.75) per 1,000, and this year from 40 to 50 francs ($7.72 to $9.65). As a consequence the price of French sardines to the consumer has nearly doubled. The best-known brands of choice sardines which two years ago sold currently at from 30 to 35 francs ($5.79 to $6.75) per case are now quoted at from 60 to 70 francs ($11.58 to $13.51). The following are the prices at which Spanish sardines are quoted in this market: For cases of 100 quarter boxes, each box containing from five to six sardines, 26 francs ($5) per case; for cases of 100 quarter boxes, each box containing from seven to eight sardines, 28 francs ($5.39) per case; for cases of 50 half boxes, each box containing from 10 to 12 sardines, 37 francs ($7.14) per case.

AMERICAN SARDINES.

While up to this moment France has furnished the United States with choice sardines, there is no reason why, under existing circumstances, cheap American sardines should not find a market in France, provided, of course, they are of as good a quality at least as the Spanish product and a little cheaper in price at the outset. The duty on sardines is 30 francs ($5.80) per 100 kilograms (220 pounds).

EDUCATING AN OYSTER.

"A school for oysters," said a Philadelphia dealer in fish, "is an institution that you would swear could not exist, for oysters are notorious for their stupidity. It is, however, a fact that there are many oyster schools. An oyster's intelligence is limited, but still it has intelligence. Years ago certain wise fish dealers discovered that if you take an oyster suddenly from its subaqueous bed it opens its shell, whereupon the life-giving water inside it all escapes, and the oyster dies. But if you expose an oyster to the air gradually, lifting it out of the water for a few minutes, and then returning it again, it gradually learns that to keep its shell closed when out of the water is the best thing for its health. These investigators found that they could take two oysters, one trained and one untrained, and the trained oyster, keeping its shell closed while out of the water, would live a long time, while the untrained one, opening its shell, would die in a few hours. Therefore training schools for oysters were established. The schools are in appearance nothing more than reservoirs full of water. Oysters are put in them, and the water is drained off and then returned again. It is kept off for a few minutes at first, then for ten minutes, then for half an hour, and so on. Oysters in these schools learn that they will live longest and keep healthiest out of water if they hold their shells tight shut. As soon as they learn this they are graduated, and go out into the world." —Fishing Gazette.

FANCY GROCERIES.

FORMERLY fancy groceries, so-called, could only be indulged in by the wealthy, because of the cost, says a writer in The New York Commercial. The same objections to general distribution hold good now, but many varieties formerly classed as fancy are now considered staples, a little more expensive than some of the older staples, but otherwise selling in a regular way, substantially the same as all groceries.

A considerable proportion of fancy groceries are imported. American manufacturers turn out some remarkable goods, but it must be admitted that they are not so practical in the art of palate tickling as the French, Spanish and Germans.

Some of the new imported fancy groceries, which are selling more and more freely, are fresh figs, pineapples and cherries in maraschino, creme de menthe and creme de rose. The nuts used are chiefly walnuts, filberts and almonds.

The fancy grocery habit is not difficult to acquire, and once it is fastened on a customer the more likely he will be to buy liberally of other articles. But even if a customer gives only his special trade, it would be profitable, because it is a department of the business in which it is possible to obtain good prices.

A wholesaler in talking of the subject said the growth of the fancy grocery business had been one of the phenomenal increases in trade during the past few years.

"Formerly," he said, "it was scarcely possible to sell the average customer any fancy groceries. Now some sort of attractively packed preserves, jellies or pickles will appeal to almost any one. The result is a steadily increasing business in these goods and a corresponding increase in profits.

"Prices range from a few cents to many dollars. The number of products offered increases almost weekly and as the excellence of different combinations of food products becomes better understood we shall have more and more of these goods on our shelves.

"Jobbers were formerly shy of taking them. Now they are anxious to have them, and if you look carefully at any jobber's stock you will find it made up largely of fancy groceries. Some houses handle nothing else, but they appeal to a rapidly increasing number of consumers.

"By all means retailers should keep more or less fancy groceries in stock. But in common with wholesalers merely carrying in stock and never referring to them will not sell them. The average consumer of groceries doesn't know much about such things, and probably would buy if the attractiveness of the goods were called to his attention. Suggestion, when introducing new goods, is essential, and frequently if an article is taken down and shown to a customer a sale will be made, often out of mere curiosity. This is the retailer's part and it only becomes necessary to do something like this to arouse an interest in other varieties.

"I wouldn't advocate any considerable stock. It is better to buy often than to have goods in the store impossible of sale and a counter heavily stocked with fancy groceries creates a wrong impression sometimes."

SUGAR INDUSTRY OF AUSTRIA-HUNGARY

THE U.S. Department of Commerce in a recent bulletin gives the following interesting summary of the beet sugar industry in Austria-Hungary. The need of the Brussels Convention is made painfully apparent in the facts thus brought to light:

EFFECTS OF OVERPRODUCTION.

In the year 1901 there was an excessively large crop of beets and an unusually large amount of unsold sugar on hand, prior to which time an overproduction of sugar seems to have taken place throughout the world, resulting in the unprecedented decline in price to 18 crowns per 100 kilograms ($3.62 per 220 pounds) f.o.b. Aussig, which is the principal shipping point of Bohemia by water transportation. The price further receded until it reached the quotation of 16.40 crowns per 100 kilograms ($3.33 per 220 pounds). Sugar factories, therefore, showed correspondingly bad results generally, and only those favored with exceptional yields or reduced working expenses escaped very heavy losses. The low prices of 1902 had however, the beneficial effect of reducing the area of beet planting about 10 per cent.

DISCRIMINATION IN FAVOR OF FOREIGN BUYERS.

England is the largest buyer of Austrian sugar, and in consequence of the Austrian Government export bounty of 4.60 crowns per 100 kilograms (93c. per 220 pounds) to refiners and exporters and the Government tax, together with the local consumers' tax, amounting to 38 crowns per 100 kilograms ($7.71 per 220 pounds), Austrian sugar is sold in England at less than half the price it is sold to consumers in this country, where it is grown and manufactured, as shown as follows, per cwt. (112 pounds): Present price f.o.b. Hamburg, 9s. 6d. ($2.31); freight and insurance to England, 6d (12c.); English import duty, 4s. 2d ($1.01); total cost of 112 pounds delivered in England, 14s. 2d. ($3.45). At the exchange rate of 24 crowns ($4.87) per pound sterling this is equal to 33.50 crowns ($6.74) per 100 kilograms (220 pounds), while the present selling price of refined sugar in Austria, fixed by the cartel, is 84 crowns ($17.05) per 100 kilograms (220 pounds), leaving the discrimination in favor of England against the home market 50.50 crowns ($11.61).

AREA UNDER CULTIVATION.

The total area of sugar beet under cultivation in Austria-Hungary was stated in May as follows:

District	1901. Hectares.	1901. Acres.	1902. Hectares.	1902. Acres.
Bohemia	150,900	372,723	113,030	279,184
Other parts of Austria	105,200	259,844	91,200	225,264
Hungary and Bosnia	106,600	263,302	99,700	246,259
Total	362,700	895,869	303,930	750,707

The reduction of the area under cultivation would not have sufficed to bring about the change for the better, but fortunately this year's beet crop in both Bohemia and Germany fell far below the average, being in many places 40 per cent. below the preceding year.

CONSUMPTION AND PRODUCTION.

As the home consumption amounts to about one-third of the total beet production, the raw sugar factories receive from the refiners 3.50 crowns per 100 kilograms (71c. per 220 pounds) trust profit, which is of vital importance to them. The statistical figures for Austria-Hungary have been computed as follows:

Description.	1901-2. Tons.	1902-3 (estimated). Tons.
Stock on August 1	168,400	251,400
Production	1,288,000	1,050,000
Total	1,456,400	1,301,400
Consumption	387,500	387,500
Export	817,500	800,000
Total	1,205,000	1,187,500
Stock on August 1	251,400	113,900

THE OFFICE

DEVOTED TO THE OFFICE STAFFS OF BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS

ADVANTAGES OF LIMITED PARTNERSHIPS.

By GEORGE CLAPPERTON.

IT is a general theory of moral philosophers that business pursuits and the accumulation of money have a demoralizing effect upon those so engaged; that they have a tendency to confine effort within circumscribed limits; make men narrow; to engender selfishness, sordidness and greed, and retard intellectual and moral growth. In a restricted sense, there may be some truth in this theory, but, regarded from a broad standpoint, it may well be challenged. The theory is assumed to apply more forcibly to men engaged in the work of corporations. It may be assumed that men engaged in business individually or on boards of directors do not always stop to read the Sermon on the Mount before entering into business contracts, passing on credits, declaring dividends or making up wage schedules. Of course, it must be conceded that the only distinctive classes who uniformly square their lives and business affairs with the Golden Rule are preachers and lawyers. Sincerely, however, it must be said in fairness, that the standard of mentality and moral strength among business men was never so high as it is now in the industrial life of the American people. There never was a time when business men were broader, more generous than now; never a time when men had so much confidence in their fellowmen, and when that confidence was so fully justified.

In the United States Steel Corporation the method is in vogue which fixes a standard of measurement of mentality as accurate and relentless as the standard of physical measurement known as the "Bertillon" system, a milling process by which intellect, ability, industry and character rise to the top, a system which looks to the ranks of men employed for recruits to fill the prominent places in the work of that corporation.

To-day, character is regarded by some of the best economic writers as not only desirable and commendable in individual life, but as a positive factor in the production of wealth.

The work of corporations is done by individuals who carry into their work individual human qualities, good or bad. Men develop in individual or corporate life according to their nature.

The weak man becomes arrogant and over-bearing. A capable and generous man finds broad scope for his powers. The fool and the knave become more conspicuous.

The modern idea of a corporation as an aggregation of persons acting as one body, having perpetual succession, and the advantages accruing therefrom are traceable to the development of the principle of association. The primary purposes of the law of association being to increase and cheapen the products of human effort.

A distinguishing feature of a partnership association is its exemption from annual detailed reports of its business; many men, while they are perfectly willing to make statements for the purposes of taxation and for credit, and open their books for inspection of stockholders, object to having a public record of the details of their business, and think it serves no useful pdrpose in a private corporation, although it might in corporations of a public or quasi public character.

The primary purposes of association and organization in business life when legitimately pursued, are to make products cheaper and more abundant, and this is the problem of civilization.

The practical utility of association in industrial affairs consists in its economic efficiency, the ability to supply human wants cheaply.

The effect of corporate effort, legitimately pursued, is to cheapen wealth, make it more abundant and more easily obtained ,and no individual or class, rich or poor, can afford to diminish the abundance of production; laws should be enacted to prevent in every way the illegitimate exercise of corporate power, but no laws should impede legitimate accumulation or restrict production.

BRIGGS' LEDGER SYSTEM.

MANY manufacturers and retail merchants throughout the Dominion and United States are now using the Briggs Ledger System. The Briggs Ledger System Co., Ltd., who are now located in their new premises, 75 York street, Toronto, claim that the using of their ledger saves the bookkeeper much unnecessary trouble and that he has, at all times, accounts ready for the customer. The firm have many testimonials from merchants speaking very highly of the system, and the demand for the ledgers has very largely increased during the past few months.

CHARTERED ACCOUNTANTS' OFFICERS.

THE annual meeting of The Chartered Accountants of Ontario, held at the Hotel Brant, Burlington, Ont., recently attracted a very good attendance. The election of president and vice-president was deferred. The election of the new council resulted in the selection of Geo. L. Blatch, Ottawa; Wilton C. Eddis, George Edwards, James Hardy, D. Hoskins, C. R. W. Postlethwaite, W. B. Tindall, T. D. Williamson, John H. Young, Ralph B. Young, Toronto; J. W. Johnston, Belleville; F. H. Macpherson, Windsor; and C. S. Scott, Hamilton.

A FACTOR IN BUSINESS RATING.

THE size of his bank account or the value of his assets are not the only things considered in giving a man a rating in the business world. Reputation is also taken into account, and sometimes the word of a man is as good as his bond. Few realize the value of a good reputation as an asset in business. The credit rating of men who have it is often higher than that of men who have a great deal more money, but lack it.

Drop a well-baited fish-line in among a lot of fish and you're pretty sure to get a few bites. Likewise, if you place a well-baited ad. in a well-read paper you'll likely land a few customers.

I HAVE received some more ads. from J. A. McCrea, of Guelph, which are about in line with those previously sent. One feature worthy of special commendation is the arrangement of the headlines, following out the suggestion I made some time ago that whenever possible the headlines should "bulletin" the news of the ads. Note the headings in the ad. reproduced herewith, for instance. On first glance one sees: "McCrea's Favorite Blend Coffee —Forty Cents a Pound—J. A. McCrea," which practically tells the story, the intervening matter giving the further desirable information.

I fancy I can trace an endeavor to write

McCrea's Favorite Blend of Coffee

Is pure, strong, satisfying, has a vitalizing, penetrating odor that makes you feel good even before the Coffee has been drunk. When you wake up spiritless in the morning a strong cup of McCrea's Coffee makes you feel good, enables you to enjoy your breakfast, and starts you off to work like a new man.

FORTY CENTS A POUND

a good ad., sometimes at the expense of its real purport. There is a tendency to discourse at too great length on points which do not bear directly on the actual sale of the goods. In short, there is a tendency to talk too much in a few of the ads. I am drawing the line pretty fine in criticising these ads. thus, but I know that Mr. McCrea is aiming at perfection, and he has reached a stage where this is a point he wants to watch.

He should bear in mind that the prime object of his ads. is to sell goods, and try to confine himself as much as possible to dealing only with those arguments which are calculated to influence the sale of the articles advertised.

I note that Mr. McCrea is now changing his ad. every evening, which is in line with my previous suggestions to him. No doubt he finds this a much better plan.

If you would take one article in your store at a time and dwell upon its excellencies, I think your ads. would be very interesting from one year's end to another. The salesmen would sell you the goods, impress you with their superiority over some other brands, either because of their price or their extra good quality. These same arguments repeated in your ads. will sell these goods to the public—just as they succeeded in placing them on your shelves.

It would be a good idea in advertising staple articles to go into detail occasionally, explaining the differences between kinds and grades.

For instance, butter is not just butter always. There are different brands and makes. The output of some creameries is better than that of others, and there is a reason for it. Sometimes the grocer doesn't know the difference himself, in which case, of course, he could not explain it to the customer, either in an ad. or in the store, if the customer should ask him.

To write a good ad. one must be thoroughly informed upon the article which he is describing or trying to sell. That is a general rule which always holds good. Likewise, no ad. is so good as the one which comes from the pen of a man who has studied his subject, believes in the article which he is offering, and knows why it is better than its competitors.

Nearly every grocer could some day write an ad. about his different brands of butter, laying particular stress on the best brand and telling where it is made, how it is made, how it is packed, showing that its excellence begins clear back to the pasturage upon which the cows feed. The neatness of the factory and the cleanliness of the utensils employed should be depicted. All these things make a good impression, and when you establish a reason for a declaration the reasoning public is more apt to believe that your article is all that you claim for it.

The same line of argument is possible in almost everything the grocer sells, and

Good Advertising Monthly Competition.

For the purpose of encouraging readers of THE CANADIAN GROCER to do better advertising and send the results of their efforts to this department for review, two dollars will be given to the reader who shall send in the most meritorious ad. during one month.

Any subscriber of THE CANADIAN GROCER may participate, and any number of ads. may be sent in, an award being made at the end of each month.

Some particulars regarding local conditions and the extent of your advertising should accompany each lot of ads., including a statement as to the results accruing from the ads. submitted.

Ads. outlining special sales or new ideas in merchandising are desirable, as are also regular ads. of a superior order of merit.

Don't think your ads. are not sufficiently good to win a prize. Try anyway. If at first you don't succeed, try hard to write a specially good ad., run it in your local paper and then enter the competition again. It will be but a friendly contest, and I hope all will participate.

In case only one ad. shall be received in any one month and it does not, in the opinion of the editor, possess sufficient interest to merit it, an award need not be made. However, it is not expected that this contingency will arise.

All correspondence should be addressed to W. Arthur Lydiatt, care of THE CANADIAN GROCER, Toronto, Ont.

no ad. is so interesting to the general reader as that which, in an interesting way, gives him an insight into the origin and history of an article which he is asked to buy.

Oriental rugs are much more highly valued after the painstaking labor and art bestowed upon them are understood. A trip through a factory nearly always so impresses the sightseer that he is more interested thereafter in the article made there than he ever has been before or than he is likely ever to be in a rival commodity.

We are naturally more interested in those things which we know something about.

The merchant cannot take his customer through a creamery, fruit-canning factory, or spice mill except in imagination; therefore, the door of the imagination should be the one used, and used often.

SCARCITY OF CRABS.

FOR those who live along the many arms of the Chesapeake Bay, on both sides, crabs have been the mainstay for a century or two, says the Wilmington, Del., News. Soft-shell crabs and hard-shell crabs have furnished food and bank accounts for myriads of Marylanders. To even hint that the crabs are becoming fewer is to suggest a disaster. To be sure, there was a time when terrapin were supposed to be without number, and the supply was sufficient when only Maryland folk ate terrapin. When the outside world began to realize what the terrapin was worth, the demand crept up rapidly toward the supply point, and now it is found that the men who catch terrapin cannot afford to eat them.

Terrapin are a luxury in the same class as diamonds, and only the wealthy can afford to enjoy them now. Crabs, however, were supposed to be a more plebeian relish, but even crabs are now nearing the point when they will be so scarce that the catchers will hustle them to market and then buy meat with the proceeds, and put the money left over into banks. It is hard to imagine the Eastern Sho' folk cutting off their crabs and sending them all to the great cities. Yet the crab is declared to be steadily entering the lobster class. And everybody knows that lobster salad in Boston has jumped 50 percentum for a "full order" and 60 percentum for a "half portion," and inside of 15 years. To think of crabs going up from 50 to 60 percentum is not encouraging.

A rumor from Rio Janeiro says that an American syndicate is about to purchase the whole stock of Brazilian coffee.

MacUrquarht's Worcester Sauce

Wheat Marrow

"There's luck in the four leaved clover," especially when each leaf contains the name of such standard goods as MacUrquarht's Worcester Sauce, Stephens' Vinegar, Codou's Macaroni and Wheat Marrow.

Each one of the four holds its place steadfastly in the front rank in popular favor, and each one builds for confidence among a grocer's trade.

MERCHANTS

Why do you not give 13 eggs for a dozen? Simply because you can conveniently count out 12 eggs which are the standard dozen. Why do you give 17 ounces or more for 1 lb? Simply because on the scales you are using you have to guess and are never sure whether you have just 16 ounces or not. The Toledo Scale Counts the ounces and shows them to both buyer and seller, just as plainly as you count the eggs, so you may give 1 lb. 1 oz. for a pound if you wish, but there is no necessity for your so doing if you use a Toledo Scale, as there is absolutely no such thing as down or overweight on a Toledo Scale.

Self-wringing Mops and Mop Cloths

Much, very much, depends upon the cloth with which the S. W. Mop is fitted, as to whether it attains its highest value, or, for that matter is, of any value. One of our regular standard Cloths would redeem, in a large measure, a very poor imitation of our Mop; but 'twould be better business acumen to insist upon getting the regular, true with its full value and completeness and thereby give your customers value received in the start.

"Tarbox" Self-wringing Mop

It means better results in the line and greater confidence between buyer and seller. A very large percentage of the better class of jobbers of kindred articles handle our goods.

Subjects Being Discussed at Ottawa

Written for The Canadian Grocer by a Member of Parliament

Ottawa, Sept. 18, 1903.

TO one who is on the legislative spot, so to speak, the existence of a Senate whose members are appointed for life becomes more and more of an anomaly in a country such as Canada. It is with the system, and not with the members of the Senate, that our quarrel lies. Even in their own case their position subjects them to misconception, and even insult. Whenever the Senate, well within its constitutional rights, takes action which is not in keeping with the views of a large section of the community, there are at once imputed to it bad motives, and, on all sides, we hear the cry, "Oh, you would not do that if you had to face the people to retain your seats." It has often been argued that because Ontario gets along well with one House, the whole Dominion might to likewise. The comparison, however, is not a good one. Ontario is a province with kindred interests, the Dominion is a union of provinces with widely different interests. As a check to what might possibly be the tyrannical power of some one province which had grown to mammoth proportions, the British North America Act provides that an equal number of senators shall come from (1) the Maritime Provinces, (2) Quebec, and (3) Ontario. Now, no one wishes to deprive the Maritime Provinces, for instance, (provinces which, by the way, came none too willingly into Confederation) of any safeguard this equal representation in the Senate may give them, but would they not be quite as secure if they elected their senators, instead of having them named by the Crown for life?

To the writer, intimately acquainted with most of the senators, it is a known fact that those gentlemen are of a high order of intelligence, and of a lofty patriotism, but this does not preserve them from attacks which are little better than scurrilous in their nature.

Very recently there has been before the Senate for its consideration the Railway Commission Bill, which Mr. Blair made his great work in the House of Commons. Now, there can be no doubt that the Senate has a right; nay, more, is bound by a duty, carefully to consider this legislation, and to amend and alter it in all such parts as it honestly thinks capable of improvement. The Senate surely means something. It is not a mere empty farce. It is a co-ordinate body of the law-making power. It must act upon even such acts and clauses as pass the House of Commons, or it must acknowledge its utter unfitness, which the able gentlemen who compose it would be very unready to do. And yet because in the exercise of their undoubted rights they have seen fit to alter the cattle-guard clause of the Railway Bill, they are treated to a storm of abuse by some of our contemporaries. As to the merits of this clause enacted by the Commons we propose to say nothing here. We discussed it in an earlier issue. That is not the point we wish to bring before our readers. We are dealing simply with the unjust attack upon the Senate.

One paper begins its article thus: "The Senate, at the instigation of the railways." At the instigation of the railways! What does that mean? It means—it can mean nothing else—that the Senate is so under the influence of the railway corporations that it acts in their interests and at their dictation. But why should this be so? The senator has no election to face, and in this case, the sole one that occurs to the writer, he is in a position to give a more independent vote than his brother of the Commons, who is constantly threatened by this, that, or the other intetest in his county. There are constituencies in Canada where the election depends entirely on the friendliness of a railway company, a company employing hundreds of hands within its limits, in car shops or other works. To such a man a vote on a matter affecting railway interests must always be a serious thing. But to the senator appointed for life, there is no terror in such an exercise of his powers. In what other way then, can the senators be "instigated." Is it because they each have a pass from the railways? This can have no influence whatever, for the excellent reason that every senator receives a pass, be he friendly or unfriendly,—railway-phile or railway-phobe. What, then, is the railways' means of co-ercing these senators? There can be only one interpretation,—that they are "influenced" by gain, to put it with exact plainness;—that they are bought.

To no one can this seem credible. The senators are, to those at all informed as to their personnel, far above so mean a crime. They are simply maligned by such articles as that from which we have been quoting.

Still another contemporary heads an article "Senatorial Insults," and then proceeds to quote from the speeches made by two senators, in which the suggestion is made that in case the law is allowed to stand as passed by the Commons the farmers will have so good a means of "selling" their cattle to the railways, through the damages recoverable by the Act, that there is serious danger that many will wilfully put their cattle in danger's way for the purpose of recovering for their loss to the great peril of the travelling public. We think the argument ill founded, but we fail to see why it should not have been made if those who advanced it honestly considered it sound. The country is entitled to such facts, so esteemed at least by those who make the statements, no matter how unpleasant may be the hearing of them. The farmers constitute by far the largest class in Canada,—will any farmer be found to say that all farmers are faultless? We believe that there is less crime in this great class than in any other considerable body that goes to make up the population of Canada, but in so large a fold there certainly are black sheep, and it is to these, no doubt, the senators in question were making allusion. Certainly they had no intention of branding the whole farming class as dishonest and criminal.

The same paper, The Weekly Sun, heads still another item, "How the Job was Done." It goes on to point out that the senators went into committee in a room apart from the Senate Chamber, in order to give the railway lawyers a chance to be heard. Was there anything wrong in this? The senators are as a rule men with a wide experience of life, accustomed for years past to hear argument and to sift the grain from the chaff. If these gentlemen hear the opinions of the railway lawyers they well know what is worthy of attention. If these lawyers have a good point to make, should that point be excluded simply because they represent the roads? Surely if there be anything in their contentions the country as a whole is entitled to the benefit of them ; but if there be not, then they fall to the ground, and no harm is done. The article would lead one to believe that the action taken was a special favor and concession to the railways, and yet the writer knows that Mr. Cowan, M.P., the champion of the drainage clause, which was so bitterly fought by the corporations, was invited by the senators to address their committee, with the result that his clause was retained. If these senators were bent on committing a wrong at the "instigation" of the railways, why did they not as the same time throw out this drainage clause, and with it the fire clause, also strongly resisted by the railways ? And why did they send for Mr. Cowan, the most dreaded opponent the railway lawyers had to face ? No, it will not hold water. The Senate may have made an error of judgment, but the Senate is not under the thumb of any man or body of men in Canada. Fair play is a jewel ; let us argue as strenuously as we may, but let us not impute bad motives to men who are, peradventure, better than we ourselves.

The session of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, held in Toronto, has been very closely watched by members here, and its doings have revived the interest in the tariff question, which has been somewhat dead since the introduction of the new transcontinental scheme. When a revision of the tariff will come is, of course, uncertain, though no doubt it will not be very much longer delayed, but when it does come, it is a moral certainty that the changes will be up rather than down in the amount of customs in future to be levied.

The Conservative party is a voting unit on increased protection, and a number of the Liberals, while not prepared to break from their party on this issue, for all that, favor a higher tariff, though not pressing it at present, because of the very general prosperity of the country.

But a new element has entered in still further to strengthen the protectionists. Chamberlain's preferential campaign is being narrowly watched by many in the Commons who are no great friends of high protection, but who are sincere believers in a policy of closer trade relations within the Empire. These gentlemen argue that if Britain grants a preference to our food products, she will want a preference greater than she now enjoys as against foreign nations in manufactured articles. Now to increase the present preference, while leaving the duty with regard to all other countries as at present, would undoubtedly close the doors of many factories now working profitably in Canada, and only a mere handful of advanced free traders would be willing to face such a result. These gentlemen then, who favor closer trade with Britain, see that it will be necessary to raise the tariff all along the line practically, and then a further preference to Britain can be granted without depriving our own interests of a moderate degree of protection. The preference to Britain would keep our Canadian manufacturers from taking undue advantage of the higher tariff to enhance prices, for British competition would effect that result, while at the same time practically shutting off the imports from other countries in all those articles which can be made or produced with advantage within the confines of the Empire itself. If this contingent joins forces with the avowed protectionists the joint force will be sufficiently strong to obtain the increase, or at least an increase, and so we repeat that everything points to a raising of the tariff when any revision takes place.

On Thursday the monotony of the Redistribution debate, which by the way has been fairly interesting notwithstanding its length, because of the number of gentlemen who, personally interested, have been drawn into it, was broken by a member who called attention to a newspaper paragraph which he contended bore hardly and unfairly upon him. The incident in itself is not a very notable one, but it is worthy of passing note in order to show to our readers how grossly members of Parliament are misrepresented and maligned at times by certain newspapers, and in the hope that good Canadians throughout the land will be warned not to give too ready credence to press comments and reports when they are damaging to public men. The honorable member criticised by the newspaper in question, said : "Before we proceed with the consideration of this bill in committee, I would draw the attention of the right honorable, the Leader of the Government to the fact that it is very difficult for us to hear what is being said in the Chamber, owing to conversations in the corridor outside this door, and I think it would be well to adopt some means to prevent any undue interruption of that kind." One would surely think this a very reasonable complaint, couched in very moderate language. But what did the offending newspaper make out of this innocent utterance ? It headed a prominently placed item as follows ' "Keep out of the corridor ! Haughton, M.P. does not like the populace. Too many fair visitors, he says, in the building." The item itself, reads in part as follows :

"No one but a member or senator who is endowed with an overweening sense of his own importance and dignity would ever dream of objecting to people having access to the public portion of a building which is not the private property of members but the property of the country. Even when there are so many visitors as during fair week no one minds if there is a little crush in the corridors, though it must be said that the crowds to-day and yesterday do not make anything like the crush that is to be seen in the lobbies when members are leaving the chamber at the close of a sitting or in the corridors on the day of a big debate.

"But it seems there is one member of Parliament who objects to having the people rub elbows with him even though such respectable representatives of the general public as attended the Central Canada Fair. The name of this gentleman is Mr. Haughton Lennox."

Such a twisting of facts as is apparent in the above comment would seem to indicate personal spite against Mr. Lennox, and is no credit to the writer who penned it or the paper which published it. Let us have criticism, and plenty of it, but let that criticism at least be fair, and let us not have an honorable member placed in such a position that in justice to himself he is bound to take up the time of the House in setting right what should never have been wrong.

SUBSTITUTE FOR SUGAR.

U.S. Consul-General Richard Guenther is authority for the statement that a new plant has been discovered in South America which promises to supplant the sugar cane and sugar beet. Scientifically the plant is known as the Eupatorium rebandium, and it contains a large amount of saccharine matter, and a high percentage of natural sugar properties which are easy to extract.

According to Mr. Guenther, a lump th size of a pea will sufficiently sweeten a cup of coffee, as the product made from the plant is from 20 to 30 times sweeter than cane or beet sugar. It is said to be easily cultivated in countries having climatic conditions similar to those of the southern portion of the United States.

There is a comparative absence of bird life in the tea districts of Ceylon, so that caterpillars and other insect pests flourish on the bushes to their no small injury. The cause is not known, and committees have been appointed to evolve means to restore in some measure the balance of nature.

Russian Butter Exports.

THE Russian Department of Trade and Commerce has made the discovery that a large portion of the Danish butter exported to England is in reality a Russian product, and that Denmark merely plays the part of a middleman in this export commodity, writes an Odessa correspondent of The London Standard. Russia's butter exports increased from 1,057,000 poods in 1896 to 2,454,000 poods in 1901, the last year for which the returns have been made up; the figures quoted include the butter exports from Finland. Russia exported to England 171,000 poods of butter in 1896, and 1,173,000 poods in 1901. During the same period Russia's butter exports to Denmark increased from 370,000 to 910,000 poods; while Denmark's butter exports to the United Kingdom increased from 3,810,000 poods in 1896 to 4,771,000 poods in 1901.

The Russian Department of Trade and Commerce asserts that the 41 per cent. increase in the Danish exports to England, as compared with the 10 per cent. increase in the Russian export of butter to the United Kingdom, represents the amount of Russian butter re-exported from Denmark to England as Danish butter. If the Russian butter going to the United Kingdom indirectly through Danish brokers be reckoned with that exported direct from Russia, then England may be said to consume over two million poods of Russian butter annually.

Provision Situation in Scotland.

MR. JAMES LEGGAT, wholesale provision merchant, Glasgow, in a recent interview with The Scottish Trader was led to say:

"The provision trade during the past few weeks has been fairly busy, and this has applied particularly to the cheese department of the business. Since buyers considered that Canadian cheese had reached its lowest figure and had every likelihood of advancing there has been a strong demand for this article. The quality of both the home and Canadian article has been quite up to the average of former years."

Asked if there was any truth in the statement that cheese was being displaced in the market by other articles, Mr. Leggat replied in the negative. "There was," he said, "a slight decrease in the consumption of it, but since we have been getting better quality the demand has considerably improved until now a normal trade is being done."

Regarding the ham trade Mr. Leggat said:—"There has only been a moderate sale for hams in consequence of the extremely high prices. While this state of matters will remain unchanged it is expected that there will be lower prices soon and a better demand created."

"The butter trade," he continued, "has been fairly active all through the summer. This article has unquestionably been the best value of anything in the provision trade, for while hams have been abnormally dear, butter has been about or under the average of the prices of previous years. Margarine has suffered to some extent in consequence of the comparatively low price of pure butter."

Asked if it was the case that the demand for Irish butter was fast decreasing, he gave the reply, "Yes, that is so. There is probably not more than half of the Irish butter disposed of in Glasgow and district now that was sold ten years ago. The business in Irish butter has been declining gradually during these years, and a number of firms have ceased dealing with the article entirely. It is being superseded by the foreign article. The Irish farmer will not become alive to the newer methods of butter production, and continues to make it as his grandfather did. It almost invariably reaches the market in an untidy condition, and often full of hairs, etc. On the other hand, colonial and continental butters always arrive in clean condition, and so long as the present state of matters continues foreign butter will take the first place."

Cheese Markets.

Belleville, Sept. 19.—At the Cheese Board to-day 1,935 boxes registered; 1,655 white, balance colored. About 1,500 sold at 11⅞c.; same offered for balance.

Cowansville, Sept. 19.—At the weekly meeting of the Eastern Townships Dairymen's Exchange here to-day 45 factories offered 2,035 boxes of cheese; 22 creameries offered 1,207 boxes butter. Cheese sold for 11⅞c. to 12 1-16c. Butter for 20⅛c. to 21c.

Watertown, N.Y., Sept. 19.—Large white, five lots, 617 boxes, 11c.; large colored, seven lots, 550 boxes, 11c.; small white, 25 lots, 2,086 boxes, 11c. to 11⅛c.; white, twins, 27 lots, 1,557 boxes, 11c.; colored, twins, 18 lots, 1,117 boxes, 11c.

Iroquois, Sept. 19.—One thousand one hundred and eight colored and forty white cheese boarded here to-day and all sold on the board at 12c.

Cornwall, Sept. 19.—At the Cornwall Cheese Board to-day, 2,346 boxes were boarded, 1,168 white, 193 colored and 85 U.S. All sold on the board at 12c., except one lot of 90 boxes.

Bitter Butter.

The presence of oxide of iron in salt which has been employed for salting the butter causes the latter to acquire a bitter and astringent taste, says a German exchange. Where such deficiencies occur in butter the salt should be analyzed for iron and such containing it rejected for this purpose.

Canadian Butter in Japan.

Advices from Ottawa report that resulting from the Canadian exhibit at the Osaka Exhibition a big butter trade is being developed between the Canadian Northwest and China and Japan. Two new creameries have been started in Alberta. An increased trade is going on with the Yukon. The exports of butter are largely on the increase.

That Cheese Taint.

Advices from Kingston state that bacteriologists are puzzled over the unusual taint which has affected cheese this year, and are putting forth their best energies toward the discovery of the cause. Some say it is due to the unusual cool, damp weather; some say it is due to factory conditions. The latter is denied, for in the most cleanly factories the taint clings to the cheese made. Inspector Publow, of the Kingston School of Dairying, has offered to give $50 and pay all expenses of a cheese buyer in an inspection of the factories, if it was found that any factory in Frontenac was free from the taint. Dr. Connell, Queen's bacteriologist, has made a careful examination, and reported that the taint was the result of a yeast.

CURED meats still maintain the firm feeling which has been ruling for some time. Stocks are light and the demand sufficient to account for the firmness. Stocks of short cut are very low, and some dealers are practically out. There is no change in prices since last quoting. We quote:

MONTREAL.

There is still a steady market all round for hog products. The market continues steady in tone and prices show no change. Hams and bacon are in good demand, both for local and for export trade. The lumber regions are inquiring for round lots of Canadian short-cut mess pork, and prices are a little firmer. We quote:

Heavy Canadian short cut mess pork	$19 00	$20 50
Canadian short cut back pork	19 50	20 00
Canadian short cut clear pork	20 00	20 50
Bacon, Wiltshire, per lb	0 14	0 15
Hams, per lb	0 13	0 14

In lard a very good trade is reported this week. Except for a decline in pure lard there are no changes to report. We quote:

ST. JOHN, N.B.

In barrelled pork, rather higher prices are asked. There is a good steady sale. At this season heavy pork shows increased demand. Beef is unchanged. There is a fair sale. In lard dealers are somewhat at sea. The surprise is the continued low price. A firmer market is expected. American markets show quite an advance. Smoked meats are high. In fresh beef, both domestic and western, rather lower prices rule. Lamb is freely offered and quality good. Prices are low. Veal and mutton are rather dull. Pork has more inquiry and prices are rather easier. We quote:

Mess pork, per bbl	$18 00	$20 00
Clear pork "	18 50	21 00
Plate beef "	13 00	14 00

DAIRY PRODUCE

BUTTER.—The condition of this market is much the same as last week. There has been no change in quotations. The fine grades of dairy and creamery are moving fairly well but the lower grades maintain their sluggish movement. We quote:

MONTREAL.

EGGS.—There has been a decided improvement in the tone of the egg market during the past week, no doubt owing to the desire of the dealers to secure some Fall stock for Winter use. The ruling price here for strictly new-laid stock is 19 to 19½c.; straight stock, 17½ to 18c.; market stock, 16½c.

BUTTER.—There has been a decided improvement in this product since our last issue. Until this week the orders coming in from Britain have all been for prompt shipment, no orders for storing having been given. The result was that when September goods commenced to offer there was not sufficient to go around, and the English importers were forced to take July and August butters to fill the Winter orders, which they always have for Canadian butter. The market has felt the demand, and this week fully half a cent to three-quarters of a cent per pound has been paid over last week's prices. Finest fresh September sell locally from 20 to 20½c.; finest August, 19½ to 20c.; held, 19 to 19½c.; dairy, 15 to 16c.

CHEESE.—The market still continues firm and strong. English importers have shown more confidence and are taking hold at the advance. Locally not many large cheese have been sold, as the trade is well supplied with small Quebec 20-lb. cheese. These are selling at from 12 to 12½c.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

BUTTER.—This is, as a rule, a most unsatisfactory line. Quality runs so irregular and so much poor stock is offered. To almost every shipment there is a tail lot which kills the profit. There is no reasonable excuse for the money that is lost. Prices show no change. Sales are fair.

EGGS.—Prices are as quoted last week. Supply has been rather light. There is a steady demand. Quality is now watched quite closely.

CHEESE.—There is but a light stock. Prices tend higher. The output here will be quite large and the profits of the cheese factories much better than those of the butter factories. For local demand twins are much needed. We quote:

Butter, creamery prints, per lb	0 22	0 24

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association

THE annual meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association was held in Toronto last week, and now a large party of the industrial leaders, who had engaged in the discussion of the many important matters brought before the convention, are being borne swiftly westward, gaining personal knowledge of the boundless markets which are exhibiting such a rapid growth in the Great West—prairie, mountain and coast. The proceedings of the convention cannot but have been of the very deepest interest to every Canadian, but especially so to those engaged in mercantile and industrial pursuits. The numerical growth of the association during the last three years has been marvellous, and the increasingly national scope and influence of the organization has been no less marked.

The problems which are confronting the industrial world in Canada were grappled with and discussed with that vigor and downrightness which is characteristic of men accustomed to dealing with large issues. The reports of the standing committees, upon which the discussions of the convention were largely based, were pregnant with suggestion and eloquent of the time and energy spent in their preparation.

As might be expected, the tariff and labor questions loomed large in the crowd of important matters which demanded the attention of the assembled manufacturers. On these questions there was no uncertain voice. The tariff resolution passed last year at Halifax was re-endorsed and the position of the association as to trades unions defined in the report of a special committee. The reports of the Parliamentary and Railway and Transportation Committees were also replete with interest, as indeed were the proceedings of the convention as a whole.

The members began to arrive Tuesday afternoon and every incoming train bore its quota of manufacturers, heads of firms, managers of industrial plants, all bound for the annual convention where they might meet their fellow leaders in the Canadian industrial world, discuss the conditions and outlook of business, enlist the interest and influence of their fellows in the removal of grievances, express their views upon matters of high policy, and make representations to the Government of the day on questions of grave import to the manufacturing interests; receive an account of the stewardship of the retiring executive and choose the men who should guide the destinies and direct the policy of the association throughout the coming year.

Fine men they were, for the most part, vigorous alike of mind and body. In the corridors and rotunda of the King Edward Hotel gathered in groups or dispersed in pairs, shaking hands in jovial good fellowship, or absorbed in earnest discussion, there was scarcely needed the handsome blue and white enamel pen inscribed with the magic letters, "C.M.A. Annual Convention, Toronto, 1903," to indicate that these were the men to whom were confided the manufacturing interests of Canada.

It was interesting to note the large number of young men represented. The large proportion, and indeed men representing some of the most important interests, were in the very pink and prime of life, and where time had here and there touched one, 'twas but lightly. Much is heard of the wreck and ruin wrought by the killing pace of modern business methods, but there was little trace of it visible either in the faces or figures of the Canadian manufacturers. Whether the salutory influence of the Canadian climate, or the inherited vigor of the Canadian constitution, may be called on in explanation, the fact remains that from Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, or the West, the men bore the weight of their responsibilities lightly, at least from all physical appearances.

Wednesday was section day. The association was not convened as a whole, but much important work was done at the sessions held in camera, where, secure from publicity, family affairs could be discussed with the fullest frankness, and matters decided upon for recommendation or otherwise to the association at large.

RECEPTION AND OPENING SESSION.

The formal opening session and reception was held, by the courtesy of the Ontario Government, in the Legislative Chambers up in Queen's Park. The Chambers were resplendent with a tasteful arrangement of flag decorations and the ladies of the party who, with their lords and masters, were the guests of the Toronto branch, were included in the welcome extended by representatives of the local association, the city and the province. What, however, gave a more than ordinary interest to the function were the addresses of Premier Ross and the Hon. Thos. A. Brassey, M.P., of London, Eng., who, on a passing visit to Toronto, was prevailed upon to remain over and address the association on the trade and fiscal relations of the Empire. Mr. Brassey, long an advocate of Imperial federation, and one who has travelled much in the outlying portions of the Empire with a view to studying the trade conditions, as well as being a member of the Imperial Parliament, was particularly well fitted for the task to which he addressed himself, the discussion of Imperial trade relations from the British point of view, as was indeed also our own distinguished imperialist, the Hon. Geo. W. Ross, to discuss the same question from the Canadian standpoint.

Premier Ross was one of the first to appear on the floor of the House, and for a few moments enjoyed the luxury of undisturbed meditation, reclining in the capacious depth of the clerk's chair. It was not for long, however. Members began to arrive and the Premier was soon chatting and joking with the little circle that gathered round him. The evening was hot and it was late before all the guests arrived, and Chairman Murray called the assembly to order.

Mr. Brassey had, in the meantime, come in and was exchanging confidences with Mr. Ross and a few of the association officers and welcomed them in a felicitous manner on behalf of the Toronto branch of the association. Controller Oliver, acting for Mayor Urquhart, followed, extending the courtesies of the city.

PREMIER ROSS.

Premier Ross, besides representing the Province in welcoming the association to Ontario and the Legislative Chambers, directed himself to the discussion of the industries of Canada and the trade of the Empire. As usual, Mr. Ross was brilliant. His mother wit sparkled as he congratulated his hearers on the ease with which they had attained to seats which he and his fellows were wont to win but hardily. He unreservedly recognized the importance of the association and shrewdly paraded the opportunities Ontario offers for every branch of industry. The unity of interest between agriculturist and artisan were argued and the folly of exporting our raw materials abroad to build up foreign industries instead of developing manufacturing interests at home was deprecated. The manufacturers were incited to aim at the highest standard in all their products, and to seek to surpass all competitors. Nor did the speaker stop with having covered the home market. "Let us turn our faces towards the foreign markets," he urged. There was no reason, in his opinion, why Canadian goods should not compete everywhere with goods made in Great Britain or France or any other country. Turning to Imperial relations, he concluded that Canada wanted nothing but what was for the good of the whole Empire. "We want a preferential tariff," concluded the Premier, "we want British surplus population to people our prairies; we want their capital to develop our resources. Anything they can do for us will prove a good investment for them. For we are the most loyal and the most dutiful of all the colonies. We are energetic and progressive and British. If we cannot have a preferential tariff, or an Imperial federation now, let us have it as soon as possible."

W. K. George, Vice-President.

Mr. C. A. Birge, president of the association, replied to the many words of welcome and then followed Mr. Brassey.

THE HON. T. A. BRASSEY.

The address of the Hon. T. A. Brassey was a remarkable one in its way, and full of suggestion to us Canadians who have grown to be "all Imperialists now." The address of Mr. Ross was brilliant, inspiring, beautifully general and diplomatically silent on the difficult points. Mr. Brassey made no attempt at oratory, but with characteristic British directness asked leave to discuss the question of Imperial trade from the British standpoint and immediately entered upon an analysis of conditions which proved to be thoroughly enlightening, if not particularly encouraging. Like a consciencious surgeon, he never shrunk from probing the very depths of the sore places, and himself a Chamberlain Imperialist he gave a masterful summary of the difficulties in the road of that consummation and frankly placed his ideal as something to be realized only in the distant future.

After extended travel Mr. Brassey had concluded that a permanently united Empire depended upon two principles; first, that every part should have an absolute right of self government, and second, that each part which bears a share of the burdens of the Empire should have the right to share in the control of Imperial expenditure. The burden of defending the Empire was becoming too heavy for the mother land without the aid of the colonies, who should in fairness contribute to the support of what was of so much importance to them. But it was not expected that Canada should contribute until she had a voice in Imperial affairs. This could only come about when the Imperial Parliament was reformed by the institution of a Federal system. Each part of the Empire had also its own particular problems first to work out, Australia and South Africa, on constitutional lines, Canada on industrial.

Coming to the trade question raised by Mr. Chamberlain, he did not think there was much dispute as to the desirability of taking retaliatory measures to prevent Great Britain becoming a dumping ground for German and American manufactures. The question of preferential trade within the Empire was a more difficult one. Immediately there was involved the necessity of placing duties on grain and wheat, and so arranging other taxes as not to increase the cost of living. It would be a great boon for the colonies, but what were the colonies to give in return for this tax on food stuffs? There might be two answers: That they should contribute for the defence of the Empire, or that they should give a substantial preference in their markets to the Mother Country. The first has already been dismissed as for the present impracticable, and in discussing the second, Mr. Brassey put his finger on the crux of the whole matter.

"To-night," he continued, "your Premier, Mr. Ross, spoke of the desire that the sentiment in favor of 'Made in Canada' should prevail, meaning that your ambition should be to supply the entire Canadian market.

"Now, if this is the desire of the Canadian manufacturer, and the Canadian Government should wish to carry out that desire at the expense of the manufacturer in the Mother Country, then, in my opinion, there is no basis for a policy of preferential trade within the Empire. The only justification for a tax on food stuffs is that the colonies will take a larger proportion than they do now of British products. Unless the Mother Country is able to secure a large portion of the trade you now carry on with foreign countries, and at the same time a share of the increased demand which is bound to follow the adoption of an Imperial preference, there is really no solid answer to the question, what will the colonies do?"

Cyrus A. Birge, Retiring President.

Despite the gloomy outlook Mr. Brassey did not despair, but looked forward to a solution of the problem through free and honest interchange of opinion on the question between the Mother Country and the colonies.

At the conclusion of the speeches the guests were entertained to refreshments in a marquee pitched in front of the Parliament buildings.

A BUSINESS SESSION.

The first business session was convened Thursday morning in the banqueting hall of the King Edward hotel, with President C. A. Birge in the chair, and a fair representation of the manufacturing interests present.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

After a summary disposal of a few preliminary items of business, the president arose amid loud applause to deliver his annual address and summary of the association's affairs. The address has been reproduced in full, together with the subsequent proceedings of the convention, in the daily press and we shall be content with touching upon a few of what appeared to be the most vital points brought out in the various reports and discussions.

The president referred felicitously to the former meetings of the association, to the national proportions attained and to the progress which had been made in the last year by the association and the nation. By reference to fiscal returns he demonstrated the important part of our national assets formed by the manufacturing industries and rapidly sketched the important field being filled by the association. Passing to the consideration of trade relations he graphically described the "sturm und drang" which was bringing even conservative Britain to the consideration of a new fiscal policy with the possibility of an Imperial preferential tariff. In this matter Canada's first duty was towards herself. Some Canadian manufacturers were already suffering from the preference we were now giving and no increase could be entertained—withdrawal might have to be considered. Discussing our relations with the United States the point was made that "thanks to Providence and our own integrity we have learned to stand alone and not a vestige of sentiment for reciprocity remains among our people." As to the tariff, the president declared the attitude of the association to be that of demanding a revision. A higher tariff all round was not desired. A fiscal policy of national self defence was the desideratum. Touching on transportation, the project of a new transcontinental railway was endorsed, the railway commission commended and a fast trans-Atlantic service demanded. The attitude of the association on the labor problem was defined. The right of labor to organize was recognized, but freedom on both sides to buy and sell, value to be determined by capability, was laid down as fundamental. Affiliation of Canadian unions with American organizations was denounced as being pernicious. A closing reference was made to the success of the "Made in Canada" campaign and a ringing summons invited the association to advance in the great work they had undertaken.

The president had evidently voiced the sentiments of the members, judging from the hearty accord with which it was received, and the executive instructed to arrange for some tangible mark of the association's appreciation.

RAILWAYS AND TRANSPORTATION

Proceeding with the reports of committees, that on railways and transportation was taken up first. Mr. J. O. Thorn presented the report. The establishment of the railway commission under the new act was commended and attention was drawn to the work of the committee in having rejected by the Governor-General in Council, the objectionable schedule 12 of the joint freight classification. The appointment of a transportation expert for the association was recommended and the importance of direct service between eastern Canadian ports and Australia, and for a fast Atlantic service, were emphasized. The discussion following continued until noon hour.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

After luncheon Mr. J. P. Murray presented the report of the Commercial Intelligence Committee. The report outlined the work done by the committee in the past year and presented for endorsation the resolution on Imperial preferential trade which had been accepted by the Chambers of Commerce Convention at Montreal.

RESIGNATION OF THE COLONIAL SECRETARY.

At this point the resignation of Joseph Chamberlain from the British Cabinet was announced and the following resolution, on the motion of Robert Munro and Geo. E. Drummond, passed and ordered forward to the late Colonial Secretary, Mr. Francis Braidwood, of Montreal, dissenting.

"Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, Colonial Secretary, London, England.

"The Canadian Manufacturers' Association in convention assembled in Toronto desires to express its deep regret that your withdrawal from the British Cabinet has been found necessary. The association has followed your proposals with the greatest solicitude and hopes your efforts to adapt Great Britain's fiscal policy to existing conditions will continue to be vigorously enforced."

CYRUS A. BIRGE.
President.

COPYRIGHT.

The Committee on Copyright, reporting through Mr. W. P. Gundy, received the endorsation of the association in requesting the Premier of the Dominion to communicate with the proper authorities and press for the recognition of Canada's right to make her own laws in reference to copyright.

PARLIAMENTS AND LEGISLATION.

Mr. P. W. Ellis, on behalf of the Parliamentary Committee, submitted an exhaustive report which outlined the work of the committee in opposing legislation detrimental to the interests of the manufacturers and called for a reorganization of the departments of labor both at Ottawa and Toronto, and the incorporation of trades unions.

The report of the Special Labor Committee gave an exhaustive review of the labor question as it appeared from the manufacturers' side and concluded with a declaration of principles which, while admitting the right of labor to organize, advocated the settling of disputes by arbitration, protested against the "unionization" of shops, declared for free contract as to wages, output and apprenticeship, and concluded by demanding the incorporation of Canadian unions free from American control.

Geo. Booth, Treasurer.

LABOR.

The report aroused considerable warmth, and several of the delegates described in vigorous terms their experiences with the unions.

In the evening the visiting delegates attended the Princess Theatre, as the guests of the Toronto branch.

CONCLUDING SESSION.

At the concluding session Friday morning the secretary's report was received and showed a membership of 1,272, a gain of 255 for the year.

THE CONSTITUTION.

The next business transacted was the amending of the constitution, the most important amendment being that raising the fee to $25 for firms employing over 100 hands.

THE TARIFF.

The report of the Tariff Committee, reserved for the last, was presented by Mr. W. K. McNaught. There were five points to the report and in the discussion thereon the political maelstrom was narrowly escaped. The situation was saved by Mr. Robert Munro, who stoutly declared that many a good Liberal was a good protectionist, and naively added, Why shouldn't he be? The report re-endorsed the resolution passed last year at Halifax, expressed a general disapproval of the bounty system, approved of the German surtax, discountenanced any suggestion of reciprocity with the United States and advocated the establishment of a permanent tariff commission.

RESOLUTIONS.

The Committee on Resolutions was the last to report and recommended the exportation of foreign silver coins, that the Government should purchase all foreign goods through regular importers, that the preferential tariff should be amended, that expert appraisers should be appointed, and that a new insolvency law should be passed.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The election of officers was then proceeded with, with the following results: President, Geo. E. Drummond, Montreal; 1st vice-president, W. K. George, Toronto; Ontario vice-president, W. F. Cockshutt, Brantford; Quebec vice-president, Hon. J. D. Rolland, Montreal; Nova Scotia vice-president, D. W. Robb, Amherst, N. S.; British Columbia, John Hendry, Vancouver; Manitoba, E. L. Drewry, Winnipeg; New Brunswick, W. S. Fisher, St. John, N.B.; treasurer, Geo. Booth, Toronto.

R. J. Younge, Secretary.

The retiring president, in a few happy words, abdicated in favor of the new chief, Mr. Geo. E. Drummond, who expressed his appreciation in a manly, straightforward, businesslike way.

Votes of thanks and responses became thick now and it was one o'clock when some one struck up, God save the King, and the convention was over.

In the afternoon the manufacturers and their ladies were entertained to a drive around the city as the guests of the city, and in the evening the annual banquet was given at the King Edward, with the new president, Geo. E. Drummond, presiding, and Lieut.-Governor Clarke, Sir William Mulock, Hon. G. W. Ross, Hon. Wm. Paterson, W. K. George, Hon. T. A. Brassey, and Mayor Urquhart, as the principal speakers.

Mr. Archie Hutchinson, of The St. Lawrence Starch Co., Limited, Port Credit and Toronto, was encountered among the jobbing trade of Montreal this week by a representative of THE GROCER.

HUNTERS' SUPPLIES.

THE hunting season is rapidly approaching. The season for some of the smaller game is already open, and before long the deer hunters will be leaving for the highlands of Ontario. All these hunting parties, which will soon be crowding the Muskoka trains, will need to be supplied with provisions. Smoked meats, tinned goods of all kinds, and other foodstuffs that can be stored in small compass, will be required. The wide-awake grocer will be after this trade. There are few localities from which a hunting party is not sent forth some place or other during the Fall. Many of these parties will be amateurish. The grocer should make himself familiar with the provision outfit required and be ready to give advice and supply the goods to inexperienced as well as to veteran hunters. Men are liberal buyers, especially when they are going off for a lark, and a little judicious attention on the part of the grocer may produce an extra trade of profitable dimensions.

TERMINAL ELEVATOR CHARGES.

THE situation between the western grain dealers and the railway companies with reference to charges in terminal elevators is now at a somewhat acute stage. In the ordinary course of the year's work, and in compliance with the Act, Warehouse Commissioner Castle asked the railway companies to name their charges for cleaning, elevating and storing grain in their terminal elevators. The Act requires that these charges shall be in the hands of the warehouse commissioner before the end of the first week in September, and shall govern for the year without the option of a change. The railway companies complied, raising the rate to ¾c. per bushel, and stating that this amount would include insurance.

The majority of the members of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange have been agitating for some time that the railway companies should insure the grain in their terminals, for the simple reason that no man knows into what one of five terminal elevators his grain may go, and therefore has been obliged to carry insurance on all.

This blanket insurance frequently absorbed all the insurance possible to obtain, and smaller dealers not infrequently found themselves in the position of being unable to get any insurance at all, while possibly some larger dealer was carrying insurance on the elevator in which their grain was stored and had no grain there. But when the announcement of the ¾c. rate was made, practically stating ¼c. for insurance, there was a general howl of disgust. A meeting of the Grain Exchange was called and the matter threshed out, representatives of the railway companies being present. The general opinion of the meeting was that the principle of the railway companies carrying the insurance was right, but the price was decidedly all wrong, and resolutions to that effect were passed and the matter placed in the hands of a committee to deal with. In the meantime the warehouse commissioner notified the railway companies that they had not complied with the Act in furnishing the schedule complained of. The Act required a specific statement of charges for elevating, cleaning and storing, and very specially relieved the elevators from responsibility as to insurance. No reply was made to these notices, and a few days later the commissioner again notified the railway companies that if they did not furnish the schedule as required the whole matter would have to go to the department at Ottawa. Immediately the railway companies declared that the ¾c. rate was their charge for elevating, cleaning and storing, and that if the owners of grain wished, it would also include insurance. This was carrying the war into Denmark with a vengeance, and at a subsequent meeting the Grain Exchange passed a strong resolution calling on the Minister of Trade and Commerce to take action in the matter under sub-section 2 of section 25 of the Grain Act.

Matters continue to simmer, and the feeling against the railway companies is very strong. Dealers are unanimous in declaring the increased rate exorbitant, and the outcome of the appeal to the Minister of Trade and Commerce is awaited with both anxiety and interest. The farmer is the man who will pay if the price is insisted on, for dealers will simply deduct that additional amount from the price paid for the wheat. The Canadian Northern Railway has been the most defiant and persistent in this matter of advancing the rates, and this action has naturally led to much comment throughout the West. This road was supposed to be put in operation to relieve the congestion and facilitate the handling of wheat, and it does seem surprising that it should so very soon show a tendency to grab. The monopoly on terminal elevator sites has been looked upon with disfavor for a long time, and this last action has by no means poured oil on the troubled waters.

JUDGES' SALARIES.

THE bill providing the salaries for judges of the new Exchequer Court of Ontario has passed through its final stages and been sent up to the Senate. Its discussion in the House of Commons elicited at least one interesting suggestion—that of a committee to consider the entire question of the remuneration of Canadian judges.

There is at the present time a growing sentiment in favor of increasing judges' salaries, particularly those of judges of the Supreme Court. Canadian business men entirely endorse such a proposal. They are not slow to realize how much the equilibrium and security of the country depend on the firmness, farsightedness and wisdom of its judges. The salary of judges in the Supreme Court in Canada is in the neighborhood of $7,000, a paltry sum when account is taken of their responsible position, and also of the fact that big business concerns in Canada think nothing of paying their presidents or managers from $10,000 to $60,000 yearly. The present and future success of a business enterprise is in peril unless its manager is a man of keen executive ability and practical sagacity. When such an one is found he is to the director "a pearl without price."

The condition of Canada to-day is one of great prosperity. The good times have reached as far as the agricultural constituencies. When the farmer speaks unhesitatingly in favor of a revision of judicial salaries surely something may be done for the long neglected administrators of justice.

A supreme judgship ought to go in the same class at least with the managerships of business concerns mentioned above. It is a mistake when commercial standards are applied to this calling. Many are unable to conceive of even a county judge as more than a hob-nobbing lawyer, who has his position through political pull. As a result, for every vacancy on the bench there are applicants "tumbling over one another." Is it not high time the standard should be raised and would-be seekers after Government honors made conscious that the Government is not looking for pettifogging lawyers, but for men whose qualifications are strictly in keeping with the dignity and importance of the Bench?

Mr. E. T. Daniels, of E. T. Daniels & Wise, brokers and merchants, London, Eng., is at present at the Queen's, Toronto, on a business tour through Canada.

THE SALT SITUATION.

FOR the past some months the trade has had difficulty in securing sufficient supplies of salt. That the Canadian manufacturers have not been able to supply the demand is an admitted fact. The continued shortage has bred a condition of dissatisfaction which has recently found vent in vague charges through the daily press. The bill of complaint against the salt manufacturers is set forth in the following letter, which explains itself :

Editor CANADIAN GROCER :—

DEAR SIR,—I cannot understand why your paper has not taken cognizance of the situation in regard to salt. We travellers are simply driven wild through the complaints of our customers because the orders for salt, which they had placed in some instances months ago, had not been filled. We have told them repeatedly that the fault is not ours, but lies with the salt manufacturers, but that does not help them, and they do not seem disposed to let us down any easier. The salt manufacturers of this country have organized themselves, as you already know, into a combine. Whether this has anything to do with the non-delivery of salt, I cannot say, at any rate I think there is a strong enough case made out under the circumstances to warrant the intervention of the Government. As you are already aware, there is a clause in the Customs Act, which provides that the Government may, after taking certain procedure, lower the duty, or remove it altogether, on any article on which a combine exists.

My firm informs me that it could buy salt in Michigan, but that if they did so, The Canadian Salt Association would refuse to allow them the customary discount. The farmers throughout the country, as well as the business men, are being put to a great deal of annoyance and inconvenience, on account of the difficulty to secure a supply of salt from the Canadian manufacturers.

Yours truly,

TRAVELLER.

Toronto, Sept. 12th, 1903.

In order to get at the rights of the matter some of the gentlemen prominent in the Ontario salt industry were seen by THE GROCER, and the following statement was handed us as defining the position of the manufacturers :

1. There is no salt combine.

2. There are at least eight different independent firms engaged to-day in the manufacture and sale of salt in Canada.

3. Besides these Canadian manufacturers there is a large amount of British and foreign salt imported, free of duty, amounting to at least two-thirds of the whole consumption.

4. Salt has not been purchasable for 60c. per bbl. for the past eight years. During that time the price of labor, fuel, barrel material in the raw and manufactured state, etc., has increased very considerably. Salt is one of the cheapest articles placed on the market to day. There has been no increase in prices, as obtained to-day, since the beginning of the year.

5. There is a scarcity of salt to-day, and there has been for a few months past. But it is only a temporary shortage, and has been entirely owing to various causes, such as the scarcity of fuel, the scarcity of labor, and unavoidable stoppages to works owing to accidents and large additions and improvements made to some of the plants.

In subsequent conversation a prominent salt manufacturer, while admitting that he was selling under an exclusive contract on the rebate system, explained that customers were allowed to purchase salt where they pleased when orders could not be filled.

As a matter of fact there is no combine, but there is an agreement between the two principal salt manufacturers of Ontario whereby they have adopted the same selling terms, and in order to secure his rebate the wholesaler must take a declaration, with the first two clauses of which, designed to prevent the cutting of prices, no issue can be taken, but of which the third clause reads as follows :

That we have not purchased or sold directly or indirectly any salt but the manufacture or output of The Canadian Salt Co. and R. & J. Ransford.

This is the very principle which THE GROCER pointed out to be dangerous in the selling terms of the Canadian Canners' Consolidated, and the discord it has caused in the salt trade proves the wisdom of the position taken by THE GROCER.

Furthermore, we have been assured by some of the largest wholesale grocery firms in Ontario that they have declined to agree to the above terms, have formed a connection with American firms and are getting their salt from Detroit. The clause is thus working to secure for Americans a permanent instead of what should be but a temporary foothold.

In taking this stand THE GROCER is not opposing trade agreements, alliances or amalgamations, recognizing that they may be of great benefit in affecting economies and in preventing ruinous rate cutting, but it is unalterably opposed to such devices as are aimed against legitimate and healthy competition.

However, we do not ignore the other side of the question, and the views of a gentleman supporting the exclusive contract system, received too late for this issue, will be published next week.

A CANADIAN IDEAL.

PREMIER ROSS sounded the right note at the reception to the Manufacturers' Association in the Parliament buildings, Toronto, Wednesday night, when he declared that in no line of manufacture should Canada be content with anything less than the best. "I want to know," declared the old man eloquent, "that 'made in Canada' is just as good as 'made in Germany' or France or England or any other country," and the applause from the listening captains of industry proved how felicitously the eloquent Premier had expressed the aspirations which have found lodgment in the minds and hearts of our Canadian manufacturers.

This is the line of thought which THE CANADIAN GROCER has long been striving to inculcate. "Made in Canada," a motto which has been tremendously successful, depends for its permanent success upon excellence of the standard which our manufacturers set for their output.

There is more satisfaction in making a good article than in making a shoddy one, and in the long run more money too.

This is particularly true if we are to become, as we fondly and confidently expect, a great exporting nation. A dishonest manufacturer may do an immense amount of harm to a reputation for reliability which has taken years to build up. In the case of fruit, the rigid enforcement of the Fruit Marks Act is having a salutary effect, and similar measures might be taken in other lines if found necessary.

The motto "Made in Germany" has had its immense influence just because the world had been led to believe in the reliability of German products.

As a young country it is our bounden duty to make "Made in Canada" stand for the acme of excellence.

"Nothing less than the best" is a good motto. May our manufacturers ever keep it before them!

It is understood that there is a movement on foot in British Columbia fisheries with a view to placing on the Canadian market domestic canned anchovies, a line which should meet with ready home sale, as well as still further developing our export possibilities.

TRADE WITH THE BAHAMAS.

MR. B. W. ROBERTS, of Nassau, N. P., Bahamas, was a caller on THE GROCER this week. Mr. Roberts is opening a commercial agency in the Bahamas and has been in Canada looking up connections with business men. The population of the Bahamas is placed at 50,000, and they import goods, mostly foodstuffs, to the value of $2,000,000 annually. Their export consists of sponges, sisal fibre, pineapples, oranges and grape fruit. As yet Canada has no direct steamship connection with the Bahamas, and our share of their trade is only nominal. The freight charges from New York to the Islands are ridiculously high, being 63c. per bbl. on flour. As the Bahamas are almost directly in line with our Jamaica service the opportunity seems good for opening up a trade with these southern cousins of ours, especially as the feeling of the Bahamians towards Canada is very friendly. We could use their sisal fibre and fruits and supply them flour, butter and tinned fruits.

BACK FROM THE WEST.

GEORGE E. Bristol, president of The Canada Grocers, Limited, who has recently returned from a month's trip to the West, was seen in his Toronto office Wednesday afternoon by a representative of THE GROCER. Mr. Bristol was struck by the promising trade conditions everywhere prevailing in the West. Everyone was prosperous, he relates, and claimed to be making money. Mr. Bristol's chief object on his trip was to arrange for a new branch of the firm at Calgary. At Winnipeg he was joined by Alexander Turner, of James Turner & Co., and the two proceeded to Calgary, where the latter has undertaken the construction of a large warehouse with 120 feet frontage on Stephens street by 100 feet on Third street. It will be equipped with trackage in the rear for loading and unloading cars and will be leased by The Canada Grocers. The building will be completed by Dec. 6, by which time the stock will be installed and the branch opened for business under the name of James Turner & Co., with Lloyd T. Mewburn, of James Turner & Co., Hamilton, in charge.

At Edmonton Mr. Bristol found conditions as encouraging as at Calgary. Immigration is steadily pouring in in all parts, and a very prosperous future is anticipated for "Sunny Alberta."

Asked as to the snow storm, Mr. Bristol said it was much exaggerated. Producing a map, he demonstrated how small an area proportionately the 250 miles from Moosomin to Brandon touched by the storm really was. He was at Edmonton at the time, and on returning he had talked with men who had examined the fields after the storm. These affirmed that the wheat was but slightly injured, and would grade as No. 1 Northern instead of No. 1 hard, making a difference of but a few cents a bushel. Around Edmonton there had been a good deal of cold, wet weather, but what grain didn't ripen properly might be fed.

A commission merchant in Manitoba writes that he is open for offers of white clover honey.

CONSOLIDATED STORES CO.

There is a rumor being circulated to the effect that The Consolidated Stores Co., reference to whose organization will be found in our Forest City Gossip, are being backed up by The Canada Grocers Limited. Geo. E. Bristol, president of The Canada Grocers, gives an emphatic denial to the rumor. Canada Grocers, he says, are in no way whatever associated with The Consolidated Stores Co.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. report a good demand for "Diamond" crystal salt.

RICE PROSPECTS.

The rice condition for Texas this year is phenomenal, showing 97 per cent., or almost a perfect crop, says The Dixie Miller. The acreage in rice in Texas this year is estimated at 220,000 acres, against 180,000 in 1902, and the probable crop for 1903 will be from 2,000,000 to 2,500,000 barrels, or about ten barrels to the acre. Last year the average yield was about eight barrels to the acre.

The crop in southwest Louisiana is said by prominent authorities to be at least thirty days late, but the stands in all localities present a very pleasing appearance to the eye of the farmer, and the yield per acre promises to be a very satisfactory one. The rice is very heavy and there is a very noticeable scarcity of red.

The crop in Carolina will be about two weeks late this year. The freshets were responsible for a delay in planting, and between ten and fifteen per cent. less than usual was planted this year. The planters say that the crops will not only be late, but short as well.

A bottle was found in Vineyard Haven Harbor recently, containing a live lobster so large that it could not escape through the neck. The only solution is that he entered the trap when small, although how he survived is a mystery.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, Sept. 24, 1903.

GROCERIES.

THERE has been great activity on the home market since our last issue. All general lines have moved freely and trade on the street has been most encouraging. Canned goods have been moving freely and several lines have advanced. Asparagus is now quoted at $3.25, showing 25c. advance. Peas are scarce, with an upward tendency of fully 10c. Salmon is difficult to obtain and is quoted at all round figures—$1.65 and $1.75—and even at those prices, deliveries cannot be guaranteed. Sardines are scarce and quotations show an advance of several cents. Coffee contines to move freely with prices remaining firm. Spices have made headway since our last issue and prices are stiffening to advance. Syrups and molasses are in moderate demand locally with primal markets reporting strong situation. Rice and tapioca is fairly active, with general stocks low and supplies firmly held at fully up prices. Tea is now securing more attention. Advices from foreign markets are all based upon an accepted strong statistical position, and prices for any grade above medium are firming toward advance. Foreign dried fruits are interesting as revealing strong position all round, with present general averages firming toward advancing in favor of last year's high averages. Sugar has been in fair demand. The fall reported in our last issue was not maintained, prices quickly recovering toward previous quotations.

CANNED GOODS.

The home market in canned goods continues firm with great difficulty in keeping up supply in the more popular lines. Asparagus is scarce with price firming up to advance of 25c. Peas are quoted at advance of 10c., while salmon is listed at an easy 25c. advance. Official quotations for new goods are coming to hand slowly, and, in many instances, there is every possibility that supplies will have to be met from across the border. We quote:

COFFEES.

The home trade in coffee reveals no special feature since our last issue. Demand continues somewhat more active than is customary, the run being chiefly on the milder grades. Latest reports from New York denote a weakening market for contracts, whilst prices for actual supplies were unchanged. In milder grades a firmer market is reported consequent, but more active demand; the European advices reporting healthy tone and good demand. We quote:

SUGAR.

The decline in domestic refined noted in our last was short-lived, prices re-acting to former basis of 4.20c. for Montreal granulated and 4.10c. for Acadia f.o.b. Montreal. It is understood that considerable sugars changed nands at the reduced quotations, especially of St. Lawrence granulated, which was not unnatural in view of the existing differential of 10c. per 100 pounds in favor of that brand.

Sales of raw sugars have been made at firm prices, part cargo centrifugal sugars being placed to New York refiners at former figure of 3 7/16c. ex ship, basis 96, duty paid. Business in raws, however, has been light, and, with buyers and sellers both apparently indifferent, there has been no opportunity of establishing a change in the market either way, and, as we go to press, we are able to report a continued firm market though quiet. Holders maintain their former firmness and are asking 1-16c. advance and showing no disposition to meet refiners on current basis.

Meltings at United States four ports for week ending September 16 were 48,000 tons, being equal to the figure of a fortnight previously. Receipts were light, being only 22,593 tons, thus reducing stocks by over 25,000 tons and these were reported as 195,110 tons. Receipts at Cuban shipping ports were again light, being only 2,000 tons, while there were exports of 9,300 tons. Stocks there were reported by cable as 189,500 tons. Combined United States and Cuban stocks are only 50,000 tons more than same time last year and with the afloats to America of 130,000 tons less than same time last year prospects are for continued firmness in American markets. There are only two central factories continuing grinding in Cuba, so there is little sugar being made in the island.

European markets are reported slightly easier, quotation for old crop beets, September shipment, being now 8s. 4½d. f.o.b. Hamburg. This, however, is equivalent to parity of 4.04c., duty paid, New York for 96 test centrifugals, from which it will be seen that cane sugars have still a differential in their favor of 3-16c. per pound.

Combined stocks of Europe and America at latest uneven dates were 1,631,610 tons, against 1,749,493 tons same period last year, the decrease being 117,883 tons.

There are no special indications to report at the moment, the outlook appearing to be to continued steadiness. The demand for refined locally from second hands is fair and prospects are that it will hold good for some time yet.

Just as we go to press we have received advice from New York that a firmer tone prevails in the raw sugar market, with sales of raw at price equal to 3.91c. for 96 test, duty paid, establishing advance of 1-32c. per lb. over previous sales. The market favors sellers. We quote:

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

Rice continues in active demand at firm prices. Reports from New York all denote good business doing, arrivals to hand meeting with ready buyers and stocks well depleted. Supplies were firmly held with sales at fully up prices. Tapioca is in little demand, with prices steady. We quote :

TEAS.

Trade on the street has been distinctly in advance since our last issue at prices which are well maintained on previous quotations. Instances have been in evidence of refusals to accept slightly shaded offers, thus confirming the immediate strength of the London markets.

The reports to hand denote the Indian market as continuing firm with active demand for all high grade and tippy teas, the lower grades attracting but little interest. It is expected that this feature will encourage growers to aim at producing fine teas of the best possible quality. Reports show that there are now only some 24,000 acres to mature which a liberal estimate fixes at twelve million pounds more tea with which to deal, or only one month's United Kingdom consumption.

Ceylon reports denote an active market for all teas showing degree of quality, with prices shading upwards. All offerings were readily competed for and in most cases changed hands.

London reports of China teas denote slow sales, with offerings, in many instances, withdrawn, the limits not being reached.

Java teas were uninteresting, the easier tone of common teas prevailing in general market making offerings of little attraction. We quote :

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

The first direct steamer from Patras for Canada, the Escalona, sailed on the 8th with 1,000 tons gross cargo currants. The second, Bellona, with about the same cargo, was billed to sail on the 22nd. Early shipments via Liverpool are expected at any moment. There is a peculiar situation in the currant market in that good quality fruit is quotable here at an advance on Government minimum of just about the freight charges. As cable quotations still existing favor buyers, considerable business is likely to be done. Valencia raisins are still firm with quality fine, and the crop about the same as last year, when the market went 4 to 5s. beyond present quotations. There is every probability of higher prices. The prices for California muscatels have been made, but the figures being considerably over the prices ruling for Spanish fruit, are too high for business. A big business, however, is anticipated in California seeded, in pound packages. Prices, however, have not yet been made. Last season's California prunes have advanced ½c. and smaller sizes are very scarce. We quote :

GREEN FRUITS.

The heaviest days for the season at the fruit market have passed and arrivals will be gradually lessened—although a large quantity of peaches and grapes are yet to come. The congestion on the market has passed away, and even pears do not now drag. The demand for plums has picked up this week. More liberal receipts of grapes are expected in a few days. Jamaica oranges are surprisingly sweet for the season and perfectly colored. First receipts of dark Cape Cod cranberries arrived on the market a few days ago. Pears are up in price since last week. VEGETABLES.

Trade is good and supplies generally ample and of good quality. Complaints, however, are still heard of the rot in potatoes, but it is not quite so noticeable as last week. Receipts have not been so liberal the last few days. Price of cucumbers is up 10c. to 15c. per basket and pickling cucumbers have also taken a jump of 75c. to $1.75 per 1,000. Onions are 5c. to 10c. firmer. A larger variety of red peppers are on the market and are quoted as high as $1.50 per basket. We quote:

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, September 24, 1903.

GROCERIES.

TRADE during the past week is reported uniformly good and jobbers seem very well pleased with the prospects for an exceptionally good Fall trade. The decline of 10c. in sugar made by one of the refineries last week has been followed by an advance of the same amount. Trade is good as the preserving season is not yet over and sugars are still going out freely. Cable advices tell of a 5 per cent. advance in China greens. Inquiries for China blacks are more numerous this week and the trade is picking up nicely. Ceylon greens and blacks continue in excellent demand. In Japan it is not possible to get orders filled for teas at 15½ to 16½c. In canned goods the situation is still unchanged as The Canadian Canners' Association still withhold prices in tomatoes and beans. In other lines there has been a good trade. There has been considerable excitement during the week in the spice market. All lines are advancing, particularly cloves. The situation is commented on at length below. In rice and tapioca there is little doing at present. The market is quiet and prices are still unchanged. New valencias have arrived and business is somewhat better, in consequence. Reports from Denia tell of a market 1s. higher and predict still higher prices. The trade points, however, to the abundance of sultanas and the good quality of same. They do not think that the firm feeling in valencias can be maintained. Receipts of green fruits during the week have been very light. Californias are about done. Trade in syrups is increasing owing to the high price of Barbados molasses. The egg market is stronger at present, but there is some doubt whether present prices can be maintained. In butter there has also been a decided improvement owing to the English demand and local dealers are of opinion that the present high prices will be maintained. The cheese market still continues firm and strong. There is a good demand for hog products of all kinds. A decline in pure lard will be noticed in our quotations. Trade in fish during the week has been good. The vegetable market is quiet. Coffee market is quiet and steady. In the hide market there is nothing to note except an increased activity in lambskins. A further advance in beans will be noted. Further advances are not unlikely. The grain market is steady. Prices of flour are steady at advances given last week. Evaporated apples are firmer than last week. Potatoes are stronger than last week.

SUGAR

The decline of 10c. made by one of the refineries last week has been followed by an advance of same amount last Saturday and both refineries are quoting $4.20 for granulated. A good business has been done during the week. We quote:

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The trade in syrups is increasing owing to the high prices ruling in Barbados molasses. As regards molasses a local paper this week brought up the subject of adulterated stocks finding their way into this market, to the detriment of the fine goods. It is claimed that this question of the adulteration of molasses should be qualified, that pure cane molasses from different sources of production, in the shape of molasses from the southern states, is used and blended, and the sin lies mainly in representing the product as Barbados. There appears not to be enough of these goods here to in any degree disturb the trade, several jobbers appearing positively indifferent, and again if it were a serious matter the

GREEN FRUITS.

Trade has been fairly good during the past week. Receipts in Canadian fruits are light, just about half the quantity that was marketed previous week. California fruit is about done. In Canadian peaches the late Crawfords are about the only grade on sale. Grapes seem to be in most demand and heavy shipments are reported this week. We quote :

FISH.

Trade is good. Pickerel and pike are beginning to arrive more freely, and the demand for same is good. There is an extra local demand this week on account of the Jewish celebration of the New Year, round pike and pickerel obtaining best call. Only a few lots of No. 1 salt herring have come to the market and they are selling at quotations as under. From present indications at fisheries, good salt herrings are likely to be scarce this season. Dried fish are unchanged. We quote :

The market this week is somewhat firmer than our last report. We quote :

New, in carlots	0	06
New, in jobbing lots	0	06½

POTATOES.

Potatoes are still in fairly good supply but offerings are not quite so large as at the time of our last report. In consequence, prices are, this week, a shade higher. The price for new potatoes is now from 65 to 70c. per bag.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

FLOUR.

There is still considerable scarcity and prices remain firm at the advanced prices quoted last week. This is the season between crops and until the new grain commences to move there can be no established price. In the meantime farmers are holding their wheat in expectation of advanced prices and the market is, in consequence, very firm. We quote :

Manitoba patent	4	80
" first bakers	4	50
" second bakers	3 90	4 10
Winter wheat patents	4 00	4 15
Winter patents		4 15
Straight rollers	3 75	3 85
90 per cent. patents	3 55	3 70
Extra	1 65	1 70
90 per cent. bags		1 80
Straight rollers, bags	1 80	1 85

FEED.

The demand continues very good and since our last report the price of shorts has been advanced. The general tone of the market is firm. We quote :

Ontario bran, in bulk	15 50	16 00
" shorts	19 00	20 00
Manitoba bran, in bags		17 00
" shorts	20 00	21 00
Mouillie	22 00	30 00

CORNMEAL.

Since our last report there have been no changes. We quote :

Gold dust, bags	1 80	1 90
" bbls	3 90	4 00
Ordinary, bags	1 40	1 45

ROLLED OATS.

The demand continues limited and the market is still very quiet. We quote :

Rolled oats, in bbls	3 80	3 85
" " in bags	1 85	1 90

GRAIN.

Since our last report there has been a general increase in the offerings from the country, but the shipments of oats received so far have been of unsatisfactory quality. A great many have arrived hot, owing to the late rains. Since last week there have been some changes which will be noted below. Rye, corn and oats have sagged somewhat. We quote :

No. 1 hard Manitoba		0 93½
No. 1 Northern		0 92
Rye	0 57	0 57½
Peas	0 72	0 73
Corn	0 57	0 58
Buckwheat		0 48½
Barley	0 50	0 51
Oats	0 35½	0 36
Malt	0 75	0 80

HAY.

The demand for hay continues good, but supplies being large, prices have again declined. For the present, prices seem steady. We quote :

No. 1 timothy	9 50	10 50
No. 2 timothy	8 00	9 00
Clover, mixed	7 00	7 50
Clover, carlots	6 50	7 00

ASHES.

Market is firm and unchanged. There is still a good demand for pearls, but few are offering. We quote :

First pots	5	85
Seconds	5	50
Pearls, per 100 lb	6 75	7 00

HIDES.

There has been a little more activity during the past week, particularly in lambskins, prices of which, under competition, have advanced to 60 and 65c. Beef hides are not so sought after and prices in same as well as calfskins are unchanged. We quote :

No. 1 beef hides		0 09
No. 2 "		0 08
No. 3 "		0 07
No. 1 buff sheepskins	0 77	0 79
Lambskins	0 60	0 65
No. 1 calfskins	0 11	0 12
No. 2 "	0 09	0 09¼

RAW FURS.

The local market continues quiet and there will be little activity and no changes until the October sales. The market is, however, very firm in tone. Some changes on the European markets should interest buyers here. Persians have advanced from 25 to 30 per cent. Grey lambs have advanced 10 per cent. Russian sables are from 20 to 25 per cent. higher than last year, while Russian ermines, owing to very great scarcity, have advanced 400 per cent. Fox skins are a little higher. We quote :

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

Office of "The Canadian Grocer,"

St. John, N.B., Sept. 21, 1903.

THE GROCER of September 11 was greatly appreciated by the trade here, particularly because of the article on the Toronto Exhibition, containing the cuts of many of the leading exhibits. It was also a splendid advertisement for those whose exhibits were shown.

Business here is good, sales large, payments regular and markets favorable to the trade. In flour in particular a handsome profit is being made. One line, however, which shows lower values, is cream of tartar, though local prices are not yet affected, as the trade still holds high priced goods. In some lines of spices full values rule. Cloves are much higher.

OIL.—In burning oil there are continued increased sales. The low price and the advancing season are both favorable to business. In lubricating oils firm values rule, though trade is light. In linseed oils prices are lower at present than market warrants, and higher prices are looked for. In turpentine prices are quite high. Receipts of cod oil are very small. Prices show little change but are very firm. Quotations are :

SALT.—The stock of Liverpool coarse salt is not large. A cargo, which has been due for some time, will not affect values. A firm market may be looked for. Buyers should order ex vessel and get advantage of the special landing prices. Stocks of fine salt are light. Full figures are asked. Quotations are :

CANNED GOODS.—There is little of interest. Dealers continue to buy salmon. Three grades are brought here, pinks, cohoes and springs. Very few sockeyes are sold. Prices are higher, particularly springs. Prices on tomatoes and corn have been named by the association, and, as expected, the figures are quite high. Large quantities of outside tomatoes have been bought here at lower figures. Sales in canned vegetables, new goods, have been quite large. Oysters are still high. Sardines, domestics, are a light supply. A fair pack of kippers and haddies is announced. Quotations are :

GREEN FRUIT.—Dealers are very busy. Apples are freely received, and there are almost daily auction sales. Quality is good and prices low. Oranges are scarce but have little inquiry. Lemons command quite full figures. Ontario grapes do not find as active sale as a year ago. The only California fruits offered, except perhaps a few pears, are Tokay grapes. Some nice Ontario peaches are offered. The pasteboard tray is a splendid package. Nova Scotia pears and plums are freely received. Quotations are :

DRIED FRUITS.—Dealers have largely bought their raisins. Because of the very high price very few Californias will be seen. Malaga seeded have been largely bought. Malaga loose have sold freely. There has been but a limited sale of valencias or Malaga layers. The sale of cleaned currants in cartons for direct shipment from Greece has been quite large. Prices are a little higher than last year. The quality is better than New York goods. Dates and figs will be quite low, peels about as last year. New Canadian prunes are offered at prices as yet quite high. Quotations are :

FISH.—Values are firm. In smoked herring the high prices hold. There will be a limited supply. Pickled herring have a steady sale at full figures. Quality is good. Dry cod and pollock are both firm. Haddies still have but light business. In fresh fish the market is confined to cod and haddock. We quote :

NOTES.

The A. I. Teed Co., St. Stephen, has received a shipment of Maconochie's pickles.

Paterson's Camp Coffee is still one of the sellers. Bowman & Cole have just received a direct shipment from Glasgow.

For some weeks Schepp's cocoanut has been somewhat scarce. Increased sales demanded enlarged factory and moving delayed shipments. All orders are now being promptly filled.

"Pure Gold" goods have a very large sale here and large orders for Fall goods are being taken by Robt. Jardine, the New Brunswick representative.

Mr. W. A. Koch, representing The Imported Syrup Co., was in the city this week.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, Sept. 21, 1903.

TRAVELLERS are to-day starting out again upon their routes, having been in the city during the continuance of the Provincial Exhibition. The conditions of trade continue satisfactory and the prospects for Fall and Winter throughout the Maritime Provinces are very encouraging. The effect of the good crops and the high prices is seen in the disposition of wholesale houses to push trade to the fullest extent, and the greater freedom allowed in the matter of credits has enlarged orders in not a few instances. In the English market the price of spruce deals is well maintained, and this, together with the prevalence of forest fires during the Spring in many parts of the provinces, which killed the growth and necessitated the trees being cut this Winter in order to prevent their decay and perfect loss, has led our lumbermen to commence the season's operations at the earliest possible date, and the prospects are for a record lumber output. This creates a good deal of activity in the provision and allied trades.

The Bank fishing fleet is returning poorly fished but with the catch selling ex vessel at $4.55 to $4.65. The fishermen will net fairly good returns.

With a record apple crop, both as regards quantity and quality, the orchardists of the valley are in excellent spirits, and trade throughout that section which was somewhat depressed for the past year is fast regaining its wonted buoyancy. Buyers are numerous and about all the orchards have now been visited by them. They are offering $2 per barrel for all varieties in the orchard, and a large number have sold at this figure. There is great urgency required in the matter of shipments, and in the next fortnight steamers of the Furness-Witty line apple laden will sail from this port every few days. The movement of the enormous apple crop is causing great activity at all stations on the Dominion Atlantic Railway.

Markets are somewhat excited in the line of breadstuffs. The agent for Ogilvie's flour in these provinces received notice last week of another advance of 15c. Ontario millers seem indifferent regarding orders, and, as stocks here are not large, a very firm condition prevails. Jobbers have endeavored to hold the price down as long as possible, but the ideas of the millers have apparently prevailed, and higher prices now rule all around. Cornmeal has also advanced 10., and with damage to the western corn crop by frost, the price will likely be well maintained throughout the season. Beans keep very firm, and none can be had here at present below last season's quotations.

Sugar is unchanged locally, but the market is weaker and the next few days may see a decline. As the Acadia refinery is well supplied with orders it is possible that the present price may be maintained. The molasses market is very firm and under strong control. Jobbers are anticipating an advance in the Porto Rico article. New Valencia raisins have opened a little higher than last year, and so also has salmon.

Provisions are easier and a decline in pork products may be expected when the October pack begins here and in P. E. Island. Mr. Wiley, the manager of The Dominion Packing Co., Charlottetown, was in the city last week. He has made arrangements with the Intercolonial and Nova Scotia railways by which hogs from the western part of this province can be delivered at Charlottetown at a low rate of freight, and he intends shortly visiting the Annapolis valley to try and induce the farmers there to go more extensively into the business of hog raising. Messrs. Davis & Fraser, the Halifax packers, are returning the compliment by erecting a branch establishment at Charlottetown. The Dun pork packing establishment, destroyed in the Musquash fire, is being restored on a much larger scale at St. John, and will be ready to begin packing operations in October.

In fresh meats lamb is dropping in price and coming in very plentifully now that the farmers have more time to kill. Feed is now good, and this always means an improved supply. Lamb is worth 6½c. wholesale here.

* * *

There is a lot of butter now offering, but the market is firm, makers expecting higher prices. Cheese is selling at 11½c. with a very brisk demand for it. Eggs are in very good demand at 17c. by the case.

TEA REPORTS.

GOW, WILSON & STANTON, in their London report of September 11, at hand, say : A rearrangement of the Russian tariff has given a preference of 1 1-16d. per lb. to China over British-grown tea.

INDIAN.—A fairly good demand for all except the poorer liquoring descriptions, which were inclined to favor buyers, although not to the extent of as much as ¼d. per lb.

CEYLON.—There was fair competition, and it was due to a further slight improvement in quality that quotations in many cases were on a fractionally improved basis.

Javas were in fair demand.

William James & Henry Thompson, writing at London September 10, say : The return relating to the tea industry in India of exceptional interest affords additional strength to the views now widely current as to the future, for it shows only about 24,000 acres to mature, or at a liberal estimate 12,000,000 pounds more to deal with, which is equivalent to but one month's consumption of the United Kingdom. Any increase therefore above this in the annual yield must be due to exceptionally favorable seasons or a freer system of plucking.

INDIAN.—The activity shown last week has hardly been so marked, and quotations for low-priced teas have shown an easier tone, a decline of ⅛ to ¼d. taking place on some of the commonest qualities. Medium grades show no change. Quality is beginning to show some falling off. A few fine invoices, as before, realized full rates.

CEYLON.—The quantity offered this week met with good competition, and was in great part sold. Common tea showed an easier tendency, but medium grades were steady, and some of the better qualities went at higher quotations. Reports from Ceylon record a cessation of flush, and light shipments are probable in the immediate future.

WESTERN BUSINESS COLLEGE.

The Western Business College, corner Spadina avenue and College street, is highly regarded by the business community of Toronto. The work of the graduates of this college is very highly spoken of, and they appear to have no difficulty in obtaining good positions.

A car of "Ubero" coffee arrived this week for H. P. Eckardt & Co.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, September 19, 1903.

THE deluge of last Saturday does not appear to have wrought as much harm as was anticipated, although the full results will not be known until the grain is threshed. The storm had the effect of advancing wheat prices 3c. a bushel, but as the weather cleared and became warm and dry the prices dropped and at the closing of the market on Saturday were on a decidedly descending scale. The wheat market is emphatically a weather one and will be subject to rapid fluctuation until such time as fine weather is assured. Prices are at present very much above export values and this is having the tendency to reduce trading. Price of wheat this week has averaged 17½c. higher than the corresponding week of last year.

The grocery and produce trades have not been at all affected by the storm and report trade so heavy that they have difficulty in overtaking it. Prices on all lines are firm with upward tendency.

CANNED GOODS.—At last canners have furnished quotations for corn and tomatoes, and announced that they will not undertake to accept any new orders until the orders at present on hand are filled. It is rumored that the Oshawa factory which sold stock through the west has notified those placing orders with it that not more than 60 per cent. of orders can be filled. The price on tomatoes would make the selling price here $2.45 to $2.50 per case and this is, of course, very high. Corn is also very high and seems likely to be even shorter in supply than tomatoes. The prices of corn will be $2 to $2.05; last year corn sold at $1.85 to $1.90. Peas are quoted at $2 for standards, and $2.10 for sifted. Beans, wax, $1.95. Strawberries, $3 to $3.10; red raspberries $3 to $3.10; black raspberries $3. Cherries, which are scarce, are quoted at $4.90; blueberries, $2.30; damson plums, $2.25; greengages, $2.60; lombards, $2.35; blackberries, $2.35. Quotations for peaches and pears are not yet settled. All of the plums, cherries and blackberries are in light syrup.

RAISINS.—New valencias of the first shipment will be in next week and will be quoted at $2.50; later shipments to reach here will be $1.85 for fine off stalk, $1.95 for selects and $2 for layers. Regular quotations are not yet given on muscatels, but they will be very high, and, valencias, on the other hand, are cheap and of a fine quality. When prices are about even there is a preference for valencia fruit on this market and with muscatels higher their sale is likely to be considerably reduced.

COFFEES.—No advance has been made here but the New York markets are up and jobbers here have not been able to place their orders at tenders sent in, so that later receipts will probably be higher.

FLOUR.—Prices continue at the high figure quoted last week and western millers are confining themselves to domestic trade. Their stocks of old wheat are small. The new wheat is still somewhat problematic from the milling standpoint and mills are turning easy and taking care of home trade. The Ogilvie mill has been shut down for a couple of weeks for the addition of another storey, but will re-open Monday morning.

ROLLED OATS.—Prices have advanced and 80-lb. sacks are now quoted at $1.85. The old crop is well cleaned up and no new oats have yet come into milling hands. There seems to be an apprehension that milling oats will be light. The whole crop is much under that of last year.

BUTTER.—The butter situation, both as to factories and dairy-made, presents no new features for the week. The make at factories this week would be considerably lessened by the storm of Saturday as it came unexpectedly and many cows were out, and the cold rain and wind sent them off milk for some days.

CHEESE. — Manitoba-made is very scarce while the demand is heavy and prices are fancy, as high as 11½c. Winnipeg having been paid. There is a reported shortage in Ontario also and altogether the outlook is for very high prices for this commodity. The factories will, most of them, close at the end of the present month.

EGGS.—The supplies continue to be limited and the demand is heavy. Dealers offer 16½ to 17c. Winnipeg for good stock.

DRESSED AND CURED MEATS.—This market presents very little change for the week. Beef has declined from ½ to ½c. and is now quoted at 6 to 6½c. for tops. Cured meats are in good demand but without change from the list sent last.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B.C., September 18.

DESPITE the constant rush of freight for northern shipment, there will be some shippers whose goods will not get in to Dawson this year. So great has been the quantity of freight delivered by the various northbound steamers to the White Pass Railway at Skagway that the latter company has been unable to transport it to White Horse and thence down the Yukon River fast enough.

The officials of the company here have been notified by wire from the north that there is now there all the freight that can be handled before the close of navigation. The forwarding of perishable freight is requested. From White Horse shipments are forwarded by boat to Dawson in rotation, in order of arrival at White Horse. Exception is made in favor of perishable stuff, which is forwarded ahead of all other classes of freight. It is further pointed out in a circular issued to the trade by The White Pass Co. that as goods have only been billed to White Horse since September 1 shippers must make arrangements to take delivery at that point unless navigation conditions on the Yukon permit of forwarding them. From now on goods will not be received unless so packed as to stand ordinary winter warehousing at White Horse, unless the shippers have arranged for special storage on their own account.

As a great quantity of the merchandise sent round by way of St. Michaels has failed to get up the river, the sudden hurry-up orders issued by the White Pass people have made some shippers look lively. The shipments from here are still as heavy as ever, the Princess May sailing on Tuesday night taking a full cargo, all of which was goods delivered on the wharf before the withdrawal of the through rates. In fact the sheds have never been cleaned up, and there now awaits shipment a large quantity of goods, chiefly food-stuffs, for the Winter supply.

Large quantities of eggs, butter and other produce have been going out from here on each boat. The Princess May had nearly a thousand cases of eggs from one firm this trip. Should the season on the Yukon River be brought to an abrupt close there will be some figuring on supplies in Dawson this Winter, and more than the usual amount of speculating may be looked for. It will be hard, for instance, to expect anything else than that potatoes will be a very short supply in the Klondike capital. The stocks, as mentioned in a former letter, are principally drawn from Ashcroft for shipment north, and it is so early that the potatoes have not been ready to be taken up for shipment.

The movement in canned salmon other than by full cargo shipments is, as a rule at this time of year, very active. Shipments to Australia are growing every year and the S.S. Moana, which sails today, will have several thousand cases consigned to Sydney merchants. The shipments by rail overland are very heavy now also. Receipts by every freight steamer from the north are heavy, the northern coast canneries all sending their pack down in consignments for final shipment from here. Some of the small steamers go direct to the Fraser River where the salmon carriers are loaded for the Old Country. Others discharge at the C.P.R. wharf and the salmon is either sent overland or taken round to the Fraser later to be lightered into the sailing ships.

Two sugar ships arrived in port since last week. One, the Duke of Fife, had 1,600 tons of raw sugar from Salaverry, Peru, for the British Columbia Sugar Refinery, and the other, the Kobe, was from Samarang, Java, and her cargo was 5,370 tons of raw sugar, also for the local refinery. As a rule it takes a tramp steamer coming the voyage from Java from 45 to 65 days to make the trip. The Kobe was out just 35½ days. The Duke of Fife has completed discharging cargo and gone to Nanaimo to coal. She will return to this port to-day to take a large number of Oriental passengers who will return to China and Japan by her. The Kobe will be some days yet before she discharges her cargo—one of the largest cargoes of raw sugar ever received at this port.

Some butter shipments sent to the north from here have been packed in rather a novel manner, though it is not quite new. It has been found that a portion of the Klondike trade demands butter sealed or pickled in such a manner that it will withstand considerable climatic changes. The method adopted with the shipments mentioned is to put the butter up in bricks of one pound, each being, of course, wrapped in paper. The bricks are packed in barrels of 50 or 100 lb., a light sack of cotton being placed like a lining in the barrel and the bricks of butter built in to conform to the shape of the barrel. When it is filled the butter is within the cotton lining and the latter is drawn together and tied. Then the barrel is filled with a light brine and sealed up. It is claimed that butter so packed will remain in perfect condition without change for an indefinite period. The brine is not made so strong that it impregnates the butter, but it forms a protecting medium round the butter. Some butter has been put up for years in pound and two pound tins in a similar manner, but the newer method is to be preferred from several considerations, chief of which might be mentioned the fact that the tins and soldering them hermetically add greatly to the cost, while the packing in barrels is not much more expensive than in the case the tins have to be put in. It is no experiment, several cars having been prepared in this manner.

In the produce market cheese is still reported firm in sympathy with eastern markets. Some Manitoba cheese is still arriving, a shipment of 300 boxes being among recent receipts. The requirements of the market are not heavy at present. Prices are quoted to the trade at 13c. for Manitoba and 13¼ to 13½c. for Ontario.

Butter is firmer as the season advances, and there is no large stock on hand. Supplies from Manitoba and the Northwest are fairly liberal however. Dairy stocks are as full as last season and more plentiful than earlier in the year. It is moving fairly well. Prices are quoted at 21½ to 23c. for creamery and 16 to 20c. for dairy, the latter for choice.

Eggs, that is good eggs, have been scarce on the local market for many weeks, owing to small supply of local fresh and from the heavy northern shipments. The shipping of eggs north has caused a great deal of selecting to be done here as none but first-class goods can stand the expensive freight charges to Dawson. Selection has, therefore, been very close and many culled eggs have been on the market, to such an extent that there seemed to be no good stock kept here for local consumption at all. As there will be no further heavy shipments north this season, there will be a chance to give the market here a little better article. The high price of local fresh still keeps up, 40c. retail being the present price per dozen. At that figure many a small rancher on the outskirts of the city is reaping a profitable harvest of eggs from his poultry runs. The complaint of high prices for wheat and other chicken feeds should not hold when the egg product gets such a price in the season of green food.

Fresh fruit markets are quiet this week. The apple crop of British Columbia is coming in rapidly now. Many lots of cooking apples are offering at low prices, and even pretty choice stock is not high. No apples are coming in from Washington or California at present. Local pears are beginning to take the place of importations. Bartletts, Washington grown, are nearly out, but there are some splendid Bartletts grown in various districts locally, and other varieties are plentiful too. Of course the latter or Winter varieties are not coming in for some time yet.

While plums, local or otherwise, are nearly over, the Italian prune is just coming in, and indications are that the Fraser Valley, especially Chilliwack, will have a large crop to dispose of. Local grown tomatoes continue in liberal supply and at prices quoted last week. The importations are almost confined to grapes and peaches this week. Crawford peaches, Washington grown, are nearly over, and Salways and Muirs will be the only stock after this week. Grapes are very plentiful, large consignments coming in from California, but not in extra good condition, being too ripe. Bananas are still high priced, and a fair quantity moving.

Tea and rice formed a large portion of the bulky part of the cargo of the Empress of India which arrived in port on Tuesday from the Orient. She had 15,663 packages of tea and 6,100 sacks of rice. This is one of the largest arrivals of tea so far this season.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Contributors are requested to send news only, not puffs of goods they handle, or the arrival of standard goods that everyone has in stock, or that they are offering goods at close figures, or that they have had an unusually large sale this season.

A. F. MacLAREN Imperial Cheese Co. are now booking orders for fancy imported cheese, Roquefort, Gorgonzola, Swiss, Pineapple, Edam, etc., to arrive about the 15th of October.

In store with Laporte, Martin & Cie new corn and tomatoes, which are offered to the trade at the first opening price of the Canners' Association.

Balfour & Co., Hamilton, are in receipt of a large consignment of "Clover Leaf" salmon and are now prepared to offer special inducements to the trade.

Laporte, Martin & Cie have still a small quantity of red cohoes and humpback salmon to offer at bargain prices. Also arriving in a few days a lot of red Spring salmon, quality guaranteed; can be retailed at 2 cans for 25c.

"Owl Chop" Japan tea, No. 1, 2, 3 and 4, claimed to be the finest Japans imported, are in store with L. Chaput, Fils & Cie, and as they are going out rapidly handlers of Japans should secure their requirements now.

Buyers of Brazil nuts should communicate with H. P. Eckardt & Co.

Eyssen's Holland cheese in tins may be procured from Lucas, Steele & Bristol.

The attention of buyers is called to the advertisement of Laporte, Martin & Cie, Montreal. Special values are offered by this firm in new currants, peels, Sultana raisins, Malaga loose muscatels and nuts, large consignments of all of these goods being in store and on the way. New valencias also in stock, f.o.s.; selected and 4-crown layers.

Ask Lucas, Steele & Bristol for Patterson's home-made preserves in glass.

L. Chaput, Fils & Cie, Montreal, will be pleased to mail sample of "Ubero" coffee to the trade. Drop a post card.

Lucas, Steele & Bristol have Aylmer honey drop corn in stock. Quality as usual.

New peels, citron, orange and lemon in store with W. H. Gillard & Co. Quality very fine.

Cleaned sultanas, very fine fruit, are offered at low prices by Laporte, Martin & Cie. This fruit is cleaned and packed in Smyrna, and on account of the cheaper labor prevailing there it can be offered at tempting prices.

W. H. Gillard & Co. report arrival of large shipment of Dixon's Carburet of Iron stove polish.

A. F. MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co. have on the road a car of Snider's catsup, Wade's catsup and Sunny Side catsup, three exceptionally good lines.

Balfour & Co. report a very large sale of their "Tartan" Ceylon tea, a specially fine line to retail at 25c.

W. H. Gillard & Co. are offering exceptional values in green Ceylon teas of which they have a specially assorted stock.

Hudon, Hebert & Cie, Montreal, report arrival into store of 500 cases Hickmott's "Golden Crown" asparagus, 2½-lb. sq. tins. This is said to be the largest shipment of asparagus imported into Canada. Prices are satisfactory and quality the finest.

Buyers of high-class table figs should communicate with L. Chaput, Fils & Cie. An assorted shipment of finest quality is expected shortly.

The attention of the trade is called to the advertisement of E. D. Marceau, Montreal, in another part of this issue. The large lot of teas offered are figured at exceptionally tempting prices, and buyers should avail themselves of the opportunity offered.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. received this week a shipment of fancy and choice evaporated apricots.

Dunham's cocoanut packed in dolls' houses may be procured from Lucas, Steele & Bristol.

Laporte, Martin & Cie, Montreal, received last week the first direct shipment of Barbados molasses, 1,000 packages, assorted puncheons, casks and tierces, per barque Devonia, Capt. J. Joliffe. This firm have several more consignments on the way. Though somewhat later in arriving this year than usual, there is a larger quantity on order than for many years past. Laporte, Martin & Cie offer this cargo at very interesting prices.

WHEAT GROWING IN INDIA.

Sir Howard Vincent, says Indian Planting and Gardening, recently asked the Secretary of State for India, if he could state the approximate acreage of the land suitable for wheat-growing in the Empire of India; how much of it was under wheat cultivation at the present time; and how much wheat was exported from India in 1846 and in 1902. Lord George Hamilton replied that the area under wheat in British India averaged about 20,000,000 acres, and in Native States about 2,500,000 acres. It was not possible to say to what extent this area could be increased by substituting wheat for other crops. This would only be practicable in wheat-growing districts, and in them only on lands of the best class, where the soil, rainfall, and facilities for irrigation were suitable. Such lands were already occupied by valuable crops. In 1846 there was no export of wheat from India. In 1901-1902 10,296,000 cwt. of wheat and 720,000 cwt. of flour were exported.

INTERVIEW WITH THE "TEA KING OF AMERICA."

A REPRESENTATIVE of THE GROCER had the pleasure of meeting Mr. P. C. Larkin, of The Salada Tea Co., on Saturday last at his office on St. Paul street, Montreal. Mr. Larkin was on his way to Toronto from an extended inspection trip through the Eastern, Middle and Southern States. Interviewed as to the progress the introduction of Ceylon and Indian teas in the United States was making, Mr. Larkin said: "Last year there was consumed in America 27,000,000 lb. of Ceylon and Indian teas out of the annual consumption of 100,000,000 lb. of all grades and kinds. This figure is remarkable when it is considered that it is only within the last few years that these teas have been introduced to the American public. The Salada Tea Co. has set itself the task of drawing the attention of the American housekeepers to the superior qualities of the teas of Ceylon and India, and though the missionary work has been hard, I can already see a remarkable change in favor of the teas of Ceylon and India. The volume of business turned over by The Salada Tea Co. is enormous and my tour among the different agencies south of the line has shown me that the business is but in its infancy. All of our agencies show marked increases in business, some of them exceptionally so, and the future prospects are most encouraging. 'Salada' tea will be a household word in the United States as it is in Canada, and as the Ceylon and Indian Governments are going to spend a large sum in erecting a magnificent bungalow at the St. Louis Exposition, the quality of the teas of those countries will be demonstrated to the citizens of the great Central and Western States. 'Salada' tea representatives will be found there during the entire exhibition."

Mr. Larkin left for the West on Saturday night.

Window and Interior Displays

Timely Hints and Suggestions.

Seasonable Windows.

IT is probable that the first man who dressed the first window did so under the pressure rather of the demand for a certain line at that particular time, than of the profit and reputation acquired from the abstract fact of having an attractive window. The necessities of the season, rather than artistic or general profit-paying considerations, proved the impelling influences. It may be he had a line of pomegranates which loudly called for consumption, an over-stock of loin-cloths may have preyed on his mind, or a war with a neighboring tribe may have provided a land-office business for stone hatchets. Whatever it was that laid the foundation for the present art of window-dressing, it was a crying demand of the season.

In these days of progress and innovations men are too apt to grasp an abstract idea, irrespective of the necessary surroundings or circumstances that influence it, and working on the bare idea, mutilate and transform it, according to their several characters, until the result is traceable to the idea by the transformer only. Thus it is that the ancient accidents that inaugurated window-dressing and made it a part of everyday business, have been engulfed in the mists of time, and the mere fact that a well-dressed window pays is all that looms up in the mind of very many merchants. So many fancy that all the ear marks of a successful window are contained in the neatly decorated one, and the time spent in scheming out a good design is confined to the effect, rather than to the seasonableness, of the lines exhibited. They do not conceive that very much of the attraction is provided by the demand, or the use, there may be for such articles at that time.

The store window that specializes on rubbers in June, or skates in August, or fly-paper or picnic sundries in January, is going to supply a laugh for the public. The joke is not, however, a bad form of advertisement at times, but it merely advertises the firm, not the goods. The grocery store that displays canned goods in August is not so much out of season, but there is not enough interest in canned goods during the fruit season for it to stop any person to look. The same may be said of a hardware store that trims its windows with guns in December. A gun is an all-year seller, but it has certain months that demand special efforts in its advertisement, and January is not a sportsman's month. It may not be that a certain window will not sell goods, but a vital objection may exist that another window may be more profitable.

The chief consideration then in dressing a window is, what window would be the most profitable; not what window would be profitable. The window that may be profitable now, but not of most value, may be the very window that should be used a couple of weeks later, and if it is used now, its effectiveness a fortnight hence is killed. A couple of weeks' miscalculation in a window display may mean a loss of many dollars to the store, for not only will it be of minor value at the time, but the pressing need of that window a little later will have to be met, as change is absolutely necessary.

When studying next week's trim, the very first point to receive attention should be the demand of the season. Next week may see a new fruit on the market, or a great demand for canned goods and condensed foods. If that is so decorate the window accordingly. Once the line that best suits the season is decided upon, the whole attention can then be concentrated on the arrangement or the effect desired.

An excellent plan for a merchant to follow is to write down week after week, or window trim after window trim, the lines which he has exhibited, or which he has specialized on, with the dates, and, unless better ideas occur or particular events demand a change, this list will save him many a weary hour of close thought after hours. Such a list kept in a safe drawer in the office will facilitate the issuing of orders for window dressing, advertising, and interior decorations. From time to time corrections will be found necessary, as, not at the first attempt, does he find he has selected the most opportune display for the time; but each correction will only make more perfect an already convenient list, and ere long, only events, or, possibly, changes in temperature, will influence him to alter his laid-down plans.

There is a great probability that a grocer may forget that the first or fifteenth of September or the first of November has a close connection with his business; he may not recognize the fact that another date may mean a beginning of a series of sales running in the same line. But if he once makes a note of it as a window trim for next year, he not only increases his trade in that line, but prevents any possibility of lack of preparation for the run on his stock at that season.

Hunting parties are going out every day at this season of the year, and there is sure to be a big demand for all kinds of canned and condensed goods. Excellent arrangements of these goods can easily be made. Catch this valuable trade by catering to it in the display, and by rendering all the assistance possible in suggestions and variety of stock, a class of trade is acquired that embraces also campers and picnic parties.

A Window Display Competition.

THE CANADIAN GROCER, for the encouragement of tasty window displays, has decided to open a competition for its subscribers. Prizes will be awarded for photos or drawings of window displays and accompanying descriptions of the same. The prizes will consist of:

First Prize - - -	$10
Second Prize -	$7

and $2 for every picture and description which is considered worthy of publication.

The competition, which closes on Oct. 1, will admit of photographs, pen and ink or wash drawings, with good ideas counting more than the picture itself, although, of course, all pictures in order to receive a prize, must be of sufficient distinctness and good workmanship to admit of their publication.

There is no progressive merchant but has at least one window a month that is worthy of entering this competition, and the prizes are so arranged that, even if a window does not win the $10, $7 or $5 prize, it may be awarded a $2 prize, provided only that it is of sufficient merit to publish in the columns of this paper. This award will cover the cost of the photograph and there is no reason why any merchant should not obtain it. The number of photographs or drawings submitted by each store is not limited, nor is the number of $2 prizes; a merchant may win a dozen if his pictures merit them.

Should any intending competitor not know how to take a window picture, this paper will be glad to furnish him with instructions. In general terms, it may be stated that the early morning, when the light is clear, when few people are abroad and when there is the least reflection, is the best time to photograph the display. A good photograph can also be taken at night by the aid of an electric or flash light.

Mark all manuscripts and photographs intended for this department with the words "Window Dressing Competition."

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. W. E. Henderson, late with Thos. Wood & Co., Boston and Montreal, has joined the ranks of the Montreal brokers, and will devote his attention to specialties in the grocery line. Mr. Henderson has for many years represented his late firm on the road, and is well known to the trade in the east. He contemplates making a trip to western markets with a view of adding to his list of agencies.

Mr. W. M. Harrison, travelling representative of Salada Tea Co. for the Province of Quebec, was in Montreal this week. To a representative of THE GROCER Mr. Harrison stated that business had been splendid during his last trip in the eastern part of the province and the Gaspe Coast. He has placed "Salada" on the Island of Anticosti, in the gulf.

Mr. John Turnbull, manager The Nasmith Co., Limited, Toronto, was a caller at the Montreal offices of THE GROCER last week. Mr. Turnbull was on his way home after a trip through the eastern states, where he had been looking over plants, machinery, etc., in connection with the new extensive bakery and confectionery works his company are establishing in Toronto. Mrs. Turnbull accompanied her husband on a pleasure trip.

Mr. Stephen L. Bartlett, Boston, Mass., general American agent for Bensdorp's Royal Dutch cocoa, was a visitor to the Montreal market during the past week. In company with Mr. W. H. Dunn, local agent, he visited the jobbing trade, and it goes without saying that many satisfactory orders were taken for this well-known brand.

A SCOTCH VISITOR.

A visitor to THE GROCER offices last week was Mr. David Greig, Glasgow, Scotland. Mr. Greig, who represents D. McDougall & Co., Glasgow, manufacturers of tobacco pipes, fire brick, tiles, etc., is well known to the jobbing trade of Canada, and to a large section of the wholesale grocery and tobacco trade of the United States. He has been a semi-annual visitor to this market for the past 16 years, and his well-filled order book attests his popularity and the excellent quality of his firm's goods. Mr. Greig's information on the subject of clay pipes imparted to the writer was of such an interesting character that it is the intention of THE GROCER to set the facts before its readers at a near date, and it cannot fail to be of interest to its readers. Mr. Greig paid a visit to the great Dominion Exhibition, and expressed himself as pleased in the extreme with the wonderful array of home products and manufactures displayed, and it is his opinion that Scotch and English manufacturers should avail themselves more of the opportunity afforded through Toronto's annual exhibition to place their wares on the Canadian market. After visiting the jobbing trade in Hamilton and London Mr. Greig will call upon his customers in Detroit and Chicago.

clever instance of this enterprise came under notice recently in the handsome and effective little folder advertising his native town which Mayor Smallfield got out for distribution at the Chambers of Commerce Conference at Montreal, a reproduction of which is given below. The folder was in the form of a four-page booklet on heavily coated paper, printed in red and brown, altogether a most dainty little souvenir.

Bread in the Dough State.

By John Kirkland.*

BEGINNING with the composition of dough, next to flour the most important ingredient is water. In quantity this, for ordinary cottage dough made with strong flour, is usually about half the weight of flour; or, in other words, dough consists, roughly, by weight, of two-thirds flour, and one-third water. But for dough making purposes the quality of the water is a matter of some importance. All water for baking purposes must, of course, be free from impurities of all kinds, but in natural waters there are always dissolved certain salts of lime and other minerals, which produce the character in water we call hardness. Hard water, again, may be only temporarily hard if the lime in it is in the form of a carbonate, and it may be rendered softer by boiling, when the lime is precipitated. Water, permanently hard, cannot be so changed, and its hardness is due principally to sulphate of lime. The important point for us to remember, however, is that hard and soft waters have different properties as agents in the fermentation of dough. Soft water is a much better solvent than hard, and as yeast requires all its food to be in solution, and as the maturing or peptonizing of the gluten or dough depends a good deal on the dissolving qualities of the water there, the softer the water the quicker the dough reaches that stage we call ready, assuming other conditions equal. Now, at one time when bakers made their own barm, it was a matter of the very first importance that water used for this purpose should be soft, otherwise there was a considerable reduction in the amount of extract obtained from the malt or other ingredients used, and with harder water the barm would either be weaker, or more malt would have to be used. Again, in the old stone mill days, when flour contained a good deal more soluble matter than modern flour does, it was customary to use harder water for dough than for barm making when it could be obtained.

Of flour the greatest proportion consists of starch—roughly, about sixty-five per cent. The properties of starch, from whatever source it is derived, are much alike, the cells of the various kinds only differing in size and density, the smaller starches, like those of rice and maize, being denser—that is, heavier in proportion to bulk—than those of, say, wheat and potatoes. The density of starch cells has also a good deal to do with the temperature at which they burst, the larger cells, like those of potato starch, bursting, as a rule, at a lower temperature than those of wheat or of rice, etc. Experiments are frequently quoted, ostensibly to show that it might be possible to distinguish the starches one from the other by carefully noting the temperature at which they burst. But the generalizations thus obtained are too inconclusive to be useful, and the most careful experiments only go to show that for a starch from any one source the range of temperature, from the time when the starches begin to burst till they are all burst, has to be very long. In a number of very careful experiments, for instance, which we conducted at the National School, it was ascertained that while some of the starch cells of flour were burst when raised to 140 degrees F., some remained intact until the temperature had been raised to 180 degrees F. Again, on examining several samples of thoroughly baked bread under the microscope, some of the starch cells were found to be still unburst, although the temperature of that bread had probably been as high as 200 degrees F. In Parisian barm, also made entirely with boiling water, a microscopic examination discovers a number of the starch cells not burst. It is evident, therefore, that the method of distinguishing the source of starch by the temperature of the bursting point of its cells is not definite enough to be scientific. Starch cells of flour occupy a medium position with regard to size and density amongst the other cereals, but in flour itself the differences in size of the starch cells are very great; and although they are all more or less round, it is not easy to distinguish with the microscope any starches from another source—such, for instance, as maize, which may have been mixed with the flour as an adulterant, unless they are in considerable quantity.

In all flours there exists a small quantity—about one per cent.—of pure sugar. This natural sugar is in the form known chemically as "cane sugar," not because it has anything to do with sugar-cane, but because it is of the same composition, and possesses the same properties as sugar from that source. Now one of the peculiarities of cane sugar is that it cannot be fermented by yeast, but has first to be changed into a form of glucose, which yeast can ferment. The agent producing this change is the soluble ferment which yeast excretes, called invertase.

We come now to consider the most important constituent of flour, and the constituent that gives dough its character, viz., gluten. The general characteristics of gluten are too familiar to need description. But there are many qualities of glutens, and for bakers' purposes, quality is of more importance than quantity. The ideal quality is that of a gluten that is tough without being coarse and stringy, of yellowish rather than grey color, and that will resist the too rapid solvent action of water or of alterative ferments contained in flour itself; also in yeast and other agents. This resisting action of gluten we call stability. The character of a gluten depends on two things: (1) Its physical condition—state of dryness, etc., in the grain; (2) on its chemical composition.

Warehouse Charges.

Western grain men have been notified by the railway companies that in future ¾c. per bushel will be charged for storage and cleaning of wheat at terminal elevators, exclusive of insurance. This adds a new phase to the situation. It has transpired that after the recent meeting to discuss the elevator charges at terminals the warehouse commissioner notified the railway companies to withdraw their schedule of charges sent in, namely, ¾c. per bushel for handling, cleaning, storage and insurance, on the ground that it did not comply with the act, which calls for handling, cleaning and storage charges only, the act expressly stipulating that the warehousemen should not be held responsible for insurance. Instead of doing as directed by the commissioner, one railway announced the rates through the public press as originally given to the commissioner's office. This has led to an ultimatum to the companies of either withdrawing the schedule or having the whole matter referred to the department at Ottawa, when, if deemed advisable, the Governor-General, by order in Council, has power to annul the whole business. Now the railways retaliate by making the same charges for handling, cleaning and storage only.

Britain's Food Supply.

A British parliamentary return shows annually for each year since 1870 the imported quantities of (1) wheat, wheat meal, and flour; (2) meat, including animals for food; (3) sugar retained for home consumption; and also the countries from which these supplies were derived. In 1870 the total imports of wheat in grain were 30,901,000 cwts., of which were received 10,269,000 from Russia, 12,372,000 from the United States, 2,838,000 from British North America, and 8,600 from British India. Last year there was imported 81,002,000 cwts., of which only 6,540,000 came from Russia, while the United States supplied 43,312,000, British North America 9,527,000, and British India 8,842,000. Australia, in 1870, sent 12,800 cwts. and New Zealand 72,420; last year the respective figures were 4,175,000 and 157,000. In 1900, 18,524,000 cwts. were drawn from Argentina, but last year only 4,315,000. Of wheat, meal and flour only 4,804,000 cwts. was imported, while last year there was received 19,386,000 cwts., of which 15,587,000 came from the United States and 1,943,000 from Canada.

Freight Rates on Grain.

Advices from Winnipeg announce that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company's new freight tariff on wheat and flour will show reductions of importance to growers and shippers, and also to the millers. It is understood that the rates on wheat will be reduced from 2c. to 3c. per 100 pounds.

The 2 Famous Products of the Celestial Empire,
TEA and CHINESE STARCH

The soil of China has for centuries produced tea for the entire world and will continue to do so for many more centuries to come.

Chinese industry produced Chinese Starch a household article in that Empire, for as many centuries as Chinese soil has produced tea.

This marvellous product Chinese Starch was introduced into Canada in 1899, and has bounded into great success and popularity, through its many splendid qualities and the successful manner of advertising. It starches and glazes linen so wonderfully that the housekeeper who has once used it WILL USE NO OTHER. As ironing day approaches, the laundress assures herself of a supply of Chinese Starch, and smiles at the presence of this good friend of the tub and ironing-board.

To those who doubt its superior qualities we say, TRY IT—the expense is trifling—only 10c. per package. Your jobber keeps it; if not, write us direct, or our agents as under.

FOREST CITY GOSSIP.

Office of THE CANADIAN GROCER.
365 Richmond street,
London, Ont., Sept. 21, 1903.

THE normal condition of business in the grocery, provision and fruit trades now prevails. The Western Fair is over and the crowded streets have given place to the ordinary traffic. Travellers have returned to their regular trips, and again come reports of good orders being sent in for prompt delivery. Heavy shipments of sugars to all points along the railroads out of London can be mentioned; and this sugar demand will continue while peaches, plums, pears and other preserving fruits are in season.

Inquiry at retail grocery stores discloses the fact that but few purchases are made in the city by the crowds from outside points during fair week. The vast majority come in simply to view the exhibits and return home. The increased business done by retail grocers is greatest with city customers who at fair time are entertaining visitors and making their stay agreeable.

Many country visitors were in the city during the Western Fair, and many of these dropped in to see the heads of the firms with whom they have been doing business, but few purchases of groceries were made or looked for on account of the frequency with which travellers cover the western part of Ontario.

It is stated that the Western Fair directors will come out about $1,000 to the good as the result of the exhibition just closed. This is considered satisfactory in view of the bad weather on Tuesday. The largest number of admissions on one day was 48,000.

An important action has been brought by a Government inspector under the Fruit Marks Act, which is exciting much interest in this section, not only among farmers and fruit dealers, but with the provision trade, as well as the general public. A shipment of 80 barrels of apples, marked No. 1 or XXX, were not packed with the quality of fruit this brand called for, hence the action. The penalty laid down is 25c. to $1 fine for each package. The hearing has been enlarged for a week

W. H. L.

ORANGES.

CALIFORNIA oranges are likely to suffer from severe competition within a few years, says The New York Commercial. For some time they have had the field almost entirely to themselves a large proportion of the time, and in spite of adverse commercial conditions, have won their way into the most profitable markets in the country. The great freeze in Florida put that productive region out of the way for a time, and California had almost no competition in eastern markets.

Such unexampled opportunity was seized by the growers, and the result has been noted in the enormous increase in orchards planted and in quantities shipped. This season the product is estimated at 28,000 cars, and next season experts say the state will ship fully 35,000 cars, if there is no damage from frost or other untoward influences.

The great size of the crop cannot be comprehended. This year markets have been overloaded at times and prices have declined, but as a rule quotations have ruled moderately high, and reasonably good figures have been paid in the auction room for all good fruit. But late oranges have been benefited by the short peach crop. Not only have peaches been scarce and high, but they have been of poor quality when they did come, a condition which has assisted the orange growers to market their crop profitably.

If there was to be no increase in production anywhere but in California and Florida the situation would not be so grave, even though Florida promises 2,000,000 boxes next season and constantly increasing quantity thereafter. But at best Florida is uncertain. Another freeze may occur at any time in the Winter and spoil the trees for years again. Different climatic influences may work to reduce California's output, all tending in a general way to reduce output. To assist is the natural increase in consumption, due to using the fruit in more ways and more freely in the old ways, and the increase in population. Probably these two states would both find ample outlet for their most liberal yield under ordinary circumstances.

The first danger point is Porto Rico. Situated far below the frost line there is no danger of a freeze. That contingency will never worry growers there. The soil is fertile and naturally moist, requiring no irrigation. Labor is cheap, and will be for years to come. The cost of transportation to New York is 20c. per box.

Against these advantages it will be very difficult for California to contend. There is more or less danger of frost. The largest orchards must be irrigated, adding enormously to the aggregate expense. Labor is scarce and high. Transportation charges are nearly or quite $1 per box. The contrast shows plainly what may be expected later.

The Porto Rico oranges will begin to come along next year. They are propagated principally from cuttings from Florida trees and the fruit is reported to be exceedingly well flavored and juicy, like a Florida orange at its best. The groves are being scientifically cultivated under the direction of some of the best known cultivators who made the Florida orange what it is. American capital is invested in the groves and American enterprise is pushing the project as rapidly as circumstances will permit. The prospect, from the Porto Rico standpoint, is considered very brilliant, but California and Florida growers are reported to be viewing the improvements on the island with some trepidation. The only objection to the Porto Rican orange is that it contains seeds, but if it sells cheaper than a seedless orange of the same size there will be no difficulty in selling it.

Florida will not suffer so severely as California, partly because it will never produce more than a relatively small quantity, and what do come from there are largely in the nature of a special brand. They go almost exclusively to the trade which wants the best. As a consequence it is probable that they will still sell readily, even after the transplanted orange comes from Porto Rico. The question of transportation is important, however, since it costs about 90c to get a box here. The difference in time and more satisfactory service will not count so heavily against Florida as against California. It will take about half as long as the shortest possible time from California to bring oranges from Porto Rico. There will be no delays on railroad sidings and none of the discouraging and frequently unnecessary mistakes which make shipping from California so uncertain.

It will be seen from this that the new American possession is destined to work a partial revolution in the orange industry at no distant day. If it cheapens the fruit and thereby increases consumption there will eventually be a readjustment which will permit every one to make a profit, the nervous California growers included.

GROCERIES BY SLOT MACHINE.

London is having a bad attack of slot machine fever. Its slot machines have multiplied from the original few which dispensed chocolate, stamps and cigarettes to a legion which sell everything, act as post offices and advertising agencies, and generally try to supply all human wants. One company alone now has in service in London half a million machines of 50 or more different types. In the railway stations there are machines which supply candy, biscuits, preserved fruits, tobacco, stamps, matches, briar pipes, cigarettes, cigars and soft drinks. Besides these things, there are in several stations automatic buffets, where all sorts of light refreshments and all sorts of drinks, hard and soft, are vended by slot machines. There is one huge machine called the automatic supply store, which aims to supply most human wants. It delivers pastry, small groceries, candy, tooth brushes, powder, drugs, tobacco, stationery, collars and cuffs, neckties, socks, soap, towels and a few other things.—Grocery World.

WAYS OF BREWING COFFEE.

By M. A. Taft.

IT is surprising the number of ways in which coffee can be made. The name of the coffee pot is legion. In one large shop they have more than 40 different kinds of coffee pots and machines, not including the different sizes, which bring the number up into the hundreds. They range from the one-cup pot, or biggin, to the gallon size. This includes copper, brass, nickel and aluminum pots and machines, fireproof potteries of different kind, china, enameled ware and tin, without considering the more expensive pots and machines of silver, the fancy china pots for serving breakfast coffee or the fine china, silver and gold pots of delicate shape for after-dinner coffee.

There are innumerable coffee biggins in two parts, the upper with the strainers for making drip coffee. One of the newer varieties has an extra part. This is a regular tea kettle of metal, into which the china or pottery biggin is set, so that the coffee may be kept hot while it is making.

Most of the innumerable varieties of coffee machines come from Germany. They are made more or less on the same principle. The water is heated over a lamp beneath, and, rising in the pot, percolates through the coffee and is carried into a connecting vessel or outer part of the machine, where it may be poured off clear and strong.

It is much on this principle that the Viennese coffee pots are made, though they are different in shape. They come in large sizes, and look like nothing so much as the old-time swinging ice pitchers. They have no handles, but a big spout at one side and a porcelain button at the end of this, by means of which the coffee pot is tipped forward. They come in different metals, and a very large one will cost $9.50, which is comparatively inexpensive.

Russian coffee pots are much liked by many people. The wife of a well-known artist makes her coffee at the breakfast table every morning in one of these. This is the barrel-like pot of metal which swings in a frame over an alcohol lamp. It is in two halves, fitting together, and with a small spout and straight handle at the side.

Coffee and hot water are put in, and the pot, with the nose pointing down, set over this lamp. When the water comes to a boil the pot is turned right side up and the water, now on top, drips through the ground coffee in the centre of the machine, and when it has passed through, the coffee, clear and ready to pour, is in the bottom.

A French cafetiere has a metal arrangement on one side and a glass receiver on the other. The water rises up through the coffee on the metal side, and percolates through into the crystal on the other.

An odd coffee pot is of white porcelain, teapot shaped. There is a square standard of white pottery, the lamp in white metal on this, and the white coffee pot set above it. There is a glass cylinder to set on the top of the pot, and the water is carried up through this and falls back into the pot, when the coffee is ready to pour.

In a French restaurant in New York they bring a cup filled nearly to the brim with hot milk to the expectant coffee lover and a tiny metal pitcher, like a creamer, filled with the strongest and blackest of coffee. Half of this, as a rule, will give the milk sufficient strength for the ordinary coffee drinker. Powdered sugar is used for sweetening.

Coffee making with cold water is a convenience in which many women believe. The ground coffee is put into an ordinary coffee pot with the proper amount of water and an egg, if one is used, over night. In the morning the coffee pot is put on the stove, the contents brought to a boil and the coffee is made. The coffee can be made with cold water in the morning.

One of the latest fiats of the coffee lover is that no cream shall be served with coffee. With it the coffee is rich, but the flavor of the cream conceals that of the coffee. Good milk should be used in its place.

A coffee lover has tried every known method of making the beverage. She has made drip coffee and tried innumerable coffee machines, and let her coffee stand over night in cold water. Now she says that no foreign or domestic method equals the old-fashioned coffee.

She uses half an egg for the morning coffee of a small family, moistening with a little cold water after the egg and shell have been added. Then she pours on her freshly boiled water, lets the coffee boil never longer than ten minutes, and serves at once. One secret of making good coffee, she says, is to add a tiny pinch of salt, because the water becomes unpleasantly flat in boiling.

BRITISH SUGAR FACTORIES.

Of the 16 sugar factories which under the Sugar Convention were placed in bond on September 1, six are in Greenock, six in Liverpool, three in London, and one in Bristol. The last-mentioned refinery, says Grocery World, has been shut down for some time, but an attempt, which it is thought will succeed, is now being made to obtain sufficient capital with which to recommence business. There is a doubt as to whether the third factory in London comes within the scope of the Brussels Convention.

Tobaccos, Cigars, and Smokers' Accessories

A DEPARTMENT FOR RETAIL MERCHANTS.

Smoking First Seen by Europeans.

ON or about November 6, 1492, two Spaniards, Rodrigo de Jerez, and a converted Jew named Luis de Torres, belonging to the expedition of Christopher Columbus, returned to the ship of the great navigator, after a mission to a local chieftain in the interior of Cuba. One of the strange sights which had come under their notice was that of natives going about with firebrands, composed of dried herbs, rolled up in a leaf, in their hands. They put one end in their mouth and lighted the other, continually inhaling and puffing out the smoke.

It was not until 1525 that the first exact description of the tobacco plant was given, this qeing by Gonzalo Hermandez d'Oviedo, Viceroy of San Domingo. He is credited with introducing it into Europe, and cultivating it as an ornamental plant in Spain. It was regarded as having medicinal properties of the highest importance, which caused it to be cultivated in various other parts of the continent. Leaves of the plant were brought from Florida to Lisbon, and when Jean Nicot, the French ambassador there, returned home in 1561, he presented some of these plants to Catherine de Medici. Numerous names are given to the plants up to this period, but finally it was termed Nicotiana, a name which has been retained by botanists. The alkaloid of the plant is known as nicotine. It is, of course, the name of the French ambassador which these words perpetuate. The origin of the name of tobacco is a debated question. By some it is supposed to have been derived from the Island of Tobago, but Oviedo, the first writer on the plant, is careful to observe that the name is not given to the herb, nor to the stupor it produces, as some persons have erroneously supposed, but from the Indian pipe, which was Y-shaped, and known as tobago. Tobacco was first brought into England by Sir John Hawkins, in 1565, and Sir Walter Raleigh helped to make it popular by smoking it and encouraging its growth. In 1586 large quantities of tobacco were introduced into England by Ralph Lane, the governor of Raleigh's colony of Virginia. It is said that Sir Walter Raleigh acquired the habit of smoking from his deputies in the settlement of Virginia.

It has been suggested that he smoked as a preventive against the damp and fogs of Ireland, where he was Governor of Kilcolman. It was here that he had the poet Edmund Spenser as a companion in 1586-1587. Raleigh cultivated tobacco near Cork and Youghal. Four yew trees forming an arbor are still standing in the garden of the Manor House of Youghal, where it is asserted that he smoked his first pipe, and enjoyed many more afterwards. The story of Raleigh when smoking being drenched with ale by his servant, because he thought his master was on fire, is a story given in different forms by Elizabethan and later dramatists.

Used Tobacco 121 Years.

MARY McDONALD, the oldest woman in the world, imputes her longevity to tobacco. She is 133 years of age, and since she was 12 she has smoked. Her advice to those who would be centennarians is: "Enjoy at least three pipes of tobacco daily." Mrs. McDonald is an inmate of the home for aged and infirm colored persons in Philadelphia. About her great age there is no doubt, for this matter has been investigated by a committee of the Daughters of the American Revolution. To students of longevity she is no less valuable a mine, for she has thought much of hygiene, and has drawn up a series of "rules of right living."

These are Mrs. McDonald's rules:

"Smoke after each meal, and before going to bed.

"Marry young.

"Rise with the sun, Winter and Summer, but always retire early enough to have had, by sunrise, eight full hours of sleep.

"Drink as little as possible.

"Never take cold baths.

old child. Her height is four feet and she weighs 51 pounds.

No living skeleton in a side show ever had arms more frightfully emaciated than hers. No mummy's face was ever more withered, more lined, more sunken. Yet the little, gnarled hands at the ends of these emaciated arms are strong and capable, and the black eyes set in the wrinkled face shine with intelligence.

She discussed her "Rules of Right Living." Of these she is proud.

"I have used tobacco since I was 12 years old," she said, "and it has been a staff and a comfort to me. I have never smoked excessively. From four to six mild, clean pipes has been my daily allowance always. I have never smoked before breakfast, nor on an empty stomach. I have found that tobacco eases pain, helps the digestion of food, cures insomnia, and lightens sorrow. Therefore I recommend it to the world. Tobacco has made my life long and pleasant, and before I would give it up I would give up food."—Cigar and Tobacco Journal.

How Tobacco is Judged.

COLOR, burn and texture are the three things which the grower of tobacco has chiefly to consider. At present the trade calls for a light cinnamon-brown shade, which must be uniform, not mottled. The leaf when rolled on a cigar and smoked must leave a white or light ash, which does not flake off and fall into one's bosom or over his waistcoat, and it must not "coal," that is, have a black charred ring just behind the ash on the burning cigar. This is sure to give a bad flavor and taste. The leaf also must burn freely, and, when lighted, hold firm for a reasonable time. It must have a soft, silvery texture, glossy surface and the elasticity of a piece of kid, so that it may be drawn smoothly and closely about the cigar. Flavor is not wanted in Connecticut tobacco, for if there be much of it, it is sure to be bad. Perfect burn, color and texture can be got in the northern climate, but a delicate and agreeable flavor has not yet been obtained. Flavor is conditional upon soil and fertilizers. It is desirable, therefore, that the leaf be natural, without taste as far as may be. We get the flavor wholly in the Cuban filler. To obtain these qualities of leaf is the problem of the grower—a much more complicated one than meets the ordinary farmer.

Chamberlain Cigar Poster.

"The Canadian Grocer" was shown this week a handsome new poster now being issued by J. M. Fortier, Limited, Montreal, advertising their Chamberlain cigar. A life-size figure of the popular ex-Colonial Secretary is shown. He is "moulding the Empire." A large globe is opposite him showing the western hemisphere with the British possessions in red. Above is a cut of the Chamberlain cigar, and the words, "You'll enjoy every bit of it." Below, the information is given that "the Chamberlain cigar is the preferential 10c. cigar." This poster is handsomely designed and lithographed in colors, and, as it is the intention of J. M. Fortier, Limited, to placard Canada with this poster, it will soon be familiar to all our readers. It is printed by The Howell Litho. Co., Hamilton, Ont.

"For Maggie has written a letter to give me my choice between The wee little whimpering Love and the great god, Nick 'o Teen.

"And I have been servant of Love for barely a twelvemonth clear.
But I have been priest of Partagus a matter of seven year;

"And the gloom of my bachelor days is flecked with the cheery light
Of stumps that I burned to Friendship and Pleasure and Work and Fight.

"And I turn my eyes to the future that Maggie and I must prove,
But the only light on the marshes is the Will-o'-the-Wisp of Love.

"Will it see me safe through my journey, or leave me bogged in the mire?
Since a puff of tobacco can cloud it, shall I follow the fitful fire?

"Open the old cigar-box—let me consider anew—
Old friends, and who is Maggie that I should abandon you?

"A million surplus Maggies are willing to bear the yoke;
And a woman is only a woman, but a good cigar is a smoke.

"Light me another Cuba; I hold to my first-sworn vows, If Maggie will have no rival, I'll have no Maggie for spouse!"

—Rudyard Kipling.

The Defeat of the Americans.

During the week smokers have been rather astonished at the sudden rise in price of the American brands of cigarettes, says a writer in The London, England, Report. The cut prices have had a longer life than anyone ever anticipated, and I believe the experiment has proved a costly one to the American manufacturers. At any rate they are evidently at the end of their tether and the prices of all the brands of imported American cigarettes have been greatly increased, both wholesale and retail. The extra cost will, however, bear more hardly on the consumer, for the retail express themselves as fairly satisfied with the new order of things, which, they say, leaves them a fair margin of profit.

DEPARTMENT OF ADVERTISING SUGGESTION AND CRITICISM

It costs more to lose business by not advertising than to advertise.

The Making of Good Copy.

SOME writers of display copy, who happen to know a little about type faces, go to a ridiculous extreme in indicating the style of setting. We regret to see that the ad-writing schools teach their students to fill up the margin of their copy sheets with elaborate instructions as to indentions, and to sizes and styles of type. It is to be feared that it will take some of the "graduates" several years to get over this foolishness and learn the wisdom of giving the printer credit for a certain ad-sense and type-intelligence of his own.

The important thing for the ad-student to learn is to prepare his display copy in such a way that the compositor can see at a glance the effect to be produced, without stopping to decipher a lot of fool instructions penciled in a dozen different directions around the margin.

There are, to be sure, occasions where it is desired that type of a certain series and size shall be used. If so, and your copy is going to an office where you know they have that series, it is all right to indicate it. A certain amount of instruction is a help to the printer; but over-do the thing, and it becomes a hindrance.

The ad-writer is peculiarly fortunate who is handy enough with his pencil to lay out an ad in its true proportions. If the sub-heads are to go in a letter half the size of the chief headline, his ad-script shows it at a glance, without any marginal instructions. If a certain line is to go in a condensed letter, the copy itself proclaims it. That is the sort of writing the printer welcomes.

And the writer who can gain proficiency in laying out his copy about the way it ought to look when set up, helps not only the printer, but himself also. He is enabled to see what he is doing, and can study the display effect of his work before it goes to the case. As to indentions, it surely requires very little skill to write the copy so that it shows for itself where it is to be indented.

The ad-school that will do its students the most good is the one that will teach them to make good, plain, self-instructive ad-script, and not to get too gay in making marginal notes for the sole purpose of showing that they have been to school and learned the difference between gothic extended and old style antique.

Slouchy Advertising.

The time has gone by when the business man can afford to be slouchy in his dress, or when he will not lose trade by untidiness in his store and in the arrangement of his goods. These are instinctively recognized by the customers as defects and as marks of inefficiency. It is the same with his advertisements. If they are slouchy, carelessly prepared, crude in expression, ill-arranged typographically; if words are awkwardly and incorrectly used, the impression is produced upon the public that he does not fully understand his business. The ad, like the man, should be alert, urbane, well dressed, neat, dignified and good mannered.

It should be a gentlemanly ad, both as to its appearance and its manner of expression. It should be plain, but not uncouth; dignified, but not stilted; familiar, but not frivolous. It should avoid all stale and hackneyed phrases. It should not slop over merely to fill space. It should be neither sloppy nor slobbery. When it has said its say, it should stop. It should be neat, concise, compact telling of the story.

It should be fresh every day. People will not look with favor upon a merchant who fails to change his linen in accordance with the demands of cleanliness and neatness, and it will also fall away in its regard for the merchant who fails to change his ads.

A man is known by his clothes,
A store by its advertisement.

Don't dress your store in a shoddy advertisement.

Be sure that you have plenty of sound, strong wool. Don't advertise "all-wool" in an "all-cotton" way.

These requirements of modern advertising are most frequently and most successfully complied with by those merchants who, at fixed intervals, take up the subject of their advertising, and lay aside other tasks until it is attended to in a thorough manner, or by those who employ specialists to do this work for them.

What is Your Policy?

To have a clearly defined policy along the lines of the following extract from a Marshall Field ad must certainly insure success, if closely followed. These are real ideals for any retail store.

A FEW OF THE IDEALS OF THIS STORE.

"To satisfy every customer with every purchase.

"To see that every transaction is completed in an entirely satisfactory manner.

"To sell only goods of a dependable quality.

"To make every individual sale—every quotation—a forerunner of further business.

"To prove conclusively and beyond any question that our prices are absolutely the lowest.

"To build this business for the future as well as for the present.

"To perfect an organization which will have the highest place in commercial history.

"To make shopping a pleasure.

"To eliminate errors to the fullest possible extent.

"To improve each week, each day, in methods and system.

"To make every employe feel that he or she is a factor in the progress of the business.

"Many other points might be mentioned for which we are daily striving—but they are all included in this: To do just right every transaction—to anticipate the highest expectations of the public in every way which is possible to a great store."

THE FIRST SHIPMENT OF RAISINS.

A messenger hurried into the office of "The Canadian Grocer," Toronto, a few days ago, with a box of Valencia raisins on his shoulder. He said they were from T. Kinnear & Co. and were from the first shipment of new season's Valencia raisins to reach Toronto this season. The fruit was of the selected variety and was of most excellent quality. This, however, the trade has no doubt discovered by this time.

THE COUNTRY FAIR.

ONE hears it said that the larger fairs are killing the smaller ones. If people say this it follows that they think it. It will be very unfortunate, however if the glamor of the large fair blinds our eyes to the value of the county or township fair.

The big Dominion, provincial and district exhibitions are possible just because the county and township fairs have flourished. The importance of this fact has not been perceived generally. The small fair is local in character, and is of interest chiefly to its own community. It makes for local excellence in stock, grain, roots, fruit, etc.

The stimulus of success develops ambition and fosters larger aims. Thus there are produced exhibitors who outgrow their community and are fitted to enter more severe competitions, where honors won are sweeter and more satisfying. The township fair is, so to speak, a lusty preparatory class fitting for the provincial or national university. Our Dominion Exhibition is the fruition of many years of local fairs.

The local fair is too good an institution to be allowed to die out. Comparisons can be very unfair and very hurtful. To compare a county fair with a provincial and to draw discrediting conclusions is most unjust. They are not in any sense competitive ; the one is the extension of the other. The strength of the larger is the strength of the smaller. Injure one and you hurt the other. Encourage the small fair and you insure the excellence and permanency of the big fair.

The stimulus of the small fair to its community has been already suggested. This feature of local exhibitions is not to be ignored. It seems to be inborn with us to strive for superiority over our fellows. In our games, in our living, in our business, competition is a primal law. At fair time this open and declared competition is permitted. There is, however, a preparation more or less prolonged for this annual occasion, and the good work of fitting up stock, of providing creditable exhibits of roots, fruits, grain, of better dairying, etc., has been a first-class education in everything pertaining to excellence. No man or woman honestly strives to attain to better things without there being an enrichment of the most enduring sort —the growth in ability, in appreciation, in genuine education.

There is still another aspect of the local fair worth noting : It provides manufacturers and others with a fine opportunity for demonstrating new implements, machinery, dairy apparatus, building features, home equipment, etc. The local public have both the temper and the leisure to investigate these offerings. Quite apart from sales made, the instructive character of such displays is of very great value. The country fair partakes of the nature of a school session in which, though there be many instructors, much good knowledge is imparted and acquired.

Time was when fair days were banner business days for local merchants. Accounts were scored, Winter purchases made, and the day's receipts went well up into the hundreds. But times have changed. Country folk visit town more frequently ; money is handled freely throughout the entire year ; credits are neither so long nor so general as they once were ; the distribution of business is more even. Moreover, the faculty of being able to take a day or so off for enjoyment has seen a wonderful development, and the strenuous life allows itself some indulgences. Fair day has come to mean a day at the fair rather than a "settling-up day."

The big fair lasting a week or a fortnight can attract only those exhibitors with time and means at their command. The country fair lasting a day or so prohibits none from entering the lists. The big fair yields richer rewards and distinction. But in its significance and in the sincerity of the interest evoked, the provincial fair exceeds not a whit the humbler local fair.

NEW SOLUBLE TEA.

A NEW soluble tea is out, and the Soluble Tea Syndicate, Limited, has been organized in India to produce and sell it ; it has been patented in India, and at present is applied only to Ceylon tea. The idea and patent in the main belong to J. Roger, who, of course, expects to reap a fortune by the widening use of the tea, which he hopes to effect by its introduction to armies, which, it is thought, will like it so well, for its convenience at least, as to find it indispensable. Mr. Roger will begin, it is understood, with the military authorities in India. Two continental armies have already agreed to give the tea a trial.

It is said that one can carry enough of the powder in the waistcoat pocket or belt to make one or two hundred cups, or the equivalent of several pounds of tea. The equivalent of a large chest of 100 pounds of ordinary tea can be carried easily with one hand, like a biscuit box. The powder will dissolve in cold water or water of any temperature, and make cold tea without a kettle or teapot, or even heat at all, which should recommend it for army use, especially on expeditions, or in out-of-the-way places.

Mr. Roger started the tea tabloid, and the firm he sold that invention to made a very good thing of it during the South African war. The tea tabloid invention was only a step toward the ultimate object he had in view, a soluble tea powder that would make tea with water of any temperature. For years all attempts failed, till Mr. Roger got Kelway Bamber, a well-known authority on the chemistry of tea, to interest himself in his ideas. It was thought a chemical or chemical process would be necessary, but the chemical process failed utterly, as the tea, though excellent in every other way, would not keep. Three years ago, however, another process was hit on purely mechanical, and so the present soluble tea resulted.

"SWEET POTATO" SUGAR.

THE island of Formosa will soon become, under the wise economic administration of Baron Kodama and Dr. Goto, says The Straits Times, one of the great sugar-producing regions of the world. Sugar is made there from the sweet potato. There is an almost unlimited market throughout the Eastern world for sugar, and the Japanese administration in Formosa is wisely availing itself of the splendid opportunity for developing and supplying this market. It is estimated that at least one-half of the island is adapted to the growing of the sweet potato for sugar manufacture. The climate is moist and favorable, and the soil is as fertile as that of the Hawaiian Islands or of Java. The range of temperature is from 75 to 100 degrees Fahrenheit. The sugar section extends from the middle to the southern end of the island, and in this section rain occurs every day from May until the latter part of September, which is the growing season, and then there is no rainfall whatever until the following May, affording a perfect season for harvesting. The first sugar company was established about two years ago. In 1901 the product of sweet potato sugar was 20,000 bales, and last year it was estimated that it would reach 60,000 bales. The profits of the industry are encouraging, as one acre of land will produce 10,000 pounds of potatoes—worth about 80 yen, or $40 (gold)—and manufacturing expenses are only 75c. for 1,000 pounds of sugar. Wages are low, a laborer receiving only about 12 to 16c. a day. In such circumstances there is no reason for astonishment at the rapid development of the industry.

Subjects Being Discussed at Ottawa

Written for The Canadian Grocer by a Member of Parliament

POLITICIANS pay pretty close attention to the meetings of various organizations, be their present size small or great, for one can never tell but that from a "cloud no bigger than a man's hand" may grow a storm that means wreck and ruin. Hence it is that while the gathering of so powerful an organization as The Manufacturers' Association attracts a great deal of notice and discussion here, the smaller meeting of The Farmers' Association is by no means overlooked. Members have not forgotten the rapid growth of the Patrons of Industry, and how that party melted old party lines as if by magic, bringing about the unexpected in so many counties that had for years been considered the safe preserve of the one party or the other.

The labor men had made overtures to the farmers for co-operative work, and the platform of the Trades and Labor Council came under discussion in consequence. Its planks are certainly radical and advanced enough to suit the most demanding in that line, and while on some of them all progressive men may stand, we fancy that there are others which are nothing less than chimerical in character. Nor can we imagine that any very close union can be formed anyway between the farmers and the labor men. On the great subject of tariff there will always be a good deal of difference between them. The labor man will continue to favor high protection, which will mean big profits for the manufacturer, a share of which he has learned very well how to wring out of his employer, while the farmer, the consumer of these same goods, will always set his face to a moderate tariff, one which, in his opinion, will keep the manufactories going as consumers of his raw material, but which will not unduly enhance the cost of ,the manufactured product to him.

Two of the planks of the labor platform are of more than passing interest. (1) the right of recall of representatives by the voters, (2) the abolition of war. Let us treat of them shortly in their order.

It is argued by the supporters of this platform that members frequently go back on the pledges made when seeking election. But who is to be the party or parties to say just what exact pledges have been made, and who again is to decide what constitutes a breach of them? Under our constitution a representative of the people in the Dominion House can hold his seat at the outside for only five years. In actual practice we know that a Parliament seldom lives out its allotted span, and we fancy we are about right when we say that four years is a fair average for the length of a member's lease. At the end of that time he must again face his electors, and if he has indeed been untrue to the pledges he has made, his fate is in their hands. It is then not a few who pass upon his conduct, but the whole body of his electors. We feel that, as it is, the independence of members is somewhat hampered, in the case of weaker brethren, by the fear of what their electors may do to them if they cast a vote in a certain way. On the spot, with full information before him, a member, if educated and intelligent as a representative should be, is in a far better position to judge of a subject than are his people reading newspaper articles of sometimes very little value. It is his duty, we conceive, to use his best judgment in a case of this kind, and he is no true friend of the men who sent him to Ottawa if he gives a vote against what he really thinks to be right, merely to secure a few supporters in his next contest from some prejudiced and ill-informed class.

As to the abolition of war, that sounds very well, but how is it to be accomplished? No man likes a war for war's sake. It means financial loss to him who stays at home, and bodily suffering to him who goes to the front. But how, again we ask, do our friends propose to abolish war? Are we to give up all preparation for national defence in hope that our good example will be followed by a host of states, civilized and semi-civilized? Is moral suasion to bring all the other nations of the earth into line? Or is there any great difference after all between police protection in private life and national protection in public life? We know that it is wrong to steal, murder, and burn, and yet there are still many in the community who commit these crimes, and hosts of others who would do so but for the protecting arm of the law. We know that war is horrible and wicked, but we are equally sure that it is raging now in many quarters, and that for centuries past the world has never been altogether at peace. Yes, it sounds well, this abolition of war, but we fear that until the millennium comes and the disturber of all peace is chained for a thousand years, the abolition of war will be something for debating societies to discuss, rather than for practical men to undertake.

The meeting of the Executive of the Lord's Day Alliance here has aroused much more interest among parliamentarians than would have been the case under ordinary conditions. The decision handed out a few weeks since by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, to the effect that the Ontario Lord's Day Act is ultra vires, caused uneasiness at the time in those members whose political sagacity anticipated the very action taken by the alliance, an application to the Dominion Government for legislation similar to that enacted by Ontario and declared beyond her jurisdiction.

* * *

There is nothing which arouses such bitterness as a moral or religious question thrown into the political arena. But a few years ago, treating of time in the life of nations and not of individuals, dogma was backed up by the strong hand, and Catholic slew Protestant, or Protestant slew Catholic, according as the one or the other was in the ascendant, while both very impartially doomed to the tar barrel or the horse pond poor old half crazed women, yclept witches. To-day milder counsels prevail, but even in this 20th century less liberality is shown in allowing for the opinions of others on questions religious or semi-religious than one could well wish. The alliance man or the prohibitionist is dubbed "crank" and often "hypocrite" by him who holds opposite views, while he in turn is called drunkard, reprobate, and infidel, by his zealous opponent. This being the case, the politician naturally dreads the appearance in the political field of a question such as Sunday observance. He knows that he will be characterized in every section of his county, and that by men so firmly convinced of the correctness of their own views that they impute insincerity, if not worse, to the unfortunate candidate who does not share them.

In Canada we have different races and religions. What to the Scotch Presbyterian and the English Methodist seems grevious sin to do upon the Lord's day, is looked upon by his fellow Canadian of German Lutheran or French Catholic origin as harmless amusement and even necessary recreation, while between the two stands the Anglican Communion, less strict than the former, but more exacting than the latter. Now the Dominion Parliament cannot legislate for a territorial part or a single religious denomination. What law it passes must be for the Dominion as a whole. In this has been the difficulty with regard to temperance legislation, nor are the divergent views to which we have alluded confined to race and religion alone. Territorial differences also exist. The west is notoriously less strict in matters of Sabbath observance than is a part at least of the east, and legislation which would be accepted with marked approval by Ontario would be met with a storm of protest in British Columbia and the Territories. This being the case, the members of the alliance will do well to frame their request in a spirit of moderation, if they wish for legislative fruit. Even in Ontario public opinion is not so strict as it was a quarter of a century ago, when to "whustle on the Sabbath" was a grievous crime. Toronto, Toronto the good, church-going Toronto, which more than once rejected Sunday cars, at last accepted them, and if we may judge from the traffic returns she has passed from the coldly suspicious stage in which she first regarded them, till now she may be said to hug them to her bosom. The church-goers themselves make great use of the cars to conduct them to their favorite places of worship, and to the doors of one sacred edifice we wot of, an edifice in which many years ago glue was poured upon the keys of the then new organ that the "kist o' whustles" might be prevented from giving forth its impious sounds, scores of sedate and pious folk are carried Sunday after Sunday by the once hated agency. Quebec as a province will not support stringent Sabbatarian legislation—we know the fate of the temperance ship when it struck upon the rock of her almost solid opposition—the west will not stand for it, while a score of counties in Ontario and half as many in the Maritime Provinces would be against it. Let us hope that our friends will recognize these facts and acknowledging that half a loaf is better than no bread accept at the hands of Parliament such a law as will be well received all over Canada, a law which, while it may not secure the Calvinistic Sabbath, will at least save us from the turmoil and moral dangers of a "European" one.

During the dying hours of the N.T.R. debate, the Opposition submitted many amendments, among which was one by Mr. Bennett, reading in part as follows: "That no contractor or sub-contractor on the said railway shall employ any Chinese labor or workman in the construction of the said railway, etc. This is of interest to two great classes in Canada, the laborers and the farmers. As to the former, if Chinese labor is excluded there will be all the greater demand for whites. But such a provision, as pointed out by Mr. Thompson, of Haldimand, would bear rather hardly on the farmer. The latter is at present very much put to it to obtain the necessary laborers for his farm work. Now we have already in Canada a considerable number of Chinese in British Columbia, a number not likely to be greatly increased, because only this session Parliament has placed upon them a poll tax on coming into the country of $500 each. The question is not then "will there be a large influx of Chinese in case a clause similar to Mr. Bennett's does not become law," but "are we or are we not to employ the Chinese we already have in the country to do railway construction work?" We know that already there is a shortage in the labor market, the manufacturers in congress assembled have recently announced that they alone could employ ten thousand additional hands—we have already alluded to the lack of farm laborers. Now we know that Chinamen will not alter this state of things, while we are equally sure that they can and will work on railways if given an opportunity. That being the case why prevent those already in the country from working at what they are fitted for? If we do so prevent them what will be the result? The work will have to be done entirely by white labor. Where will that white labor come from? To some extent immigration may supply it, but our country is developing so fast that those who come in are immediately absorbed, either going on the land and creating a new demand for labor in factories and forests to supply the wants of the new markets they create, thus accentuating the present stringency, or engaging in mining operations, on Government works or what not. It just comes to this: In any case we will have to draw to a large extent upon the resources of our already strained labor market, and the heavier the draft the greater will be the difficulty for our manufacturers and farmers to carry on their operations profitably and at full blast. Let us not then exclude the Asiatics already in Canada from doing that work for which they are fitted, and let us give these great classes, the farmers and the manufacturers, a chance.

INQUIRIES ABOUT CANADIAN TRADE.

The following were among the recent inquiries relating to Canadian trade received at the Canadian Government Office in London :

1. Inquiry has been received from a Yorkshire firm for the names of Canadian houses open to buy serges direct from their factory.
2. A Gloucester firm making a specialty of indoor and table games desires to find business openings in Canada.
3. The names of Canadian manufacturers of hosiery and woollen goods desiring representation in Ireland are asked for by a gentleman resident in Dublin.
4. Inquiry is made for the names of owners of crude asbestos mines in Canada.
5. A Paris firm wishes to be placed in communication with producers of Canadian wood pulp desiring to be represented in that city. They are also willing to do business in other classes of Canadian goods, and to act as buyers of French goods for Canadian houses.

[The names of the firms making the above inquiries can be obtained on application to the Editor of THE CANADIAN GROCER.]

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE.

The Canadian Correspondence College, Limited, is an institution chartered under Canadian laws and established with the object of placing superior educational advantages within the reach of all who desire self-improvement. This college is appealing perhaps especially to the business community, with its thorough and practical commercial courses. A technical education is becoming daily more necessary in all branches of life, and it is certainly newhere more necessary than in the business world.

The authorities are making a special effort in advising and helping the younger men and women who are anxious to make the greatest possible success of their life. Particulars are furnished on application.

DAIRY PRODUCE AND PROVISIONS

and Cold Storage News.

Irish Cheese on Glasgow Market.

FOR the first time within the memory of man Irish cheese has been sold this season on the Glasgow market. The cheese came from between Limerick and Cork. It was the make of a former Wigtonshire maker and had all the qualifications of a rich Wigtonshire cheese. Probably what has induced the starting of cheese-making in Ireland, more than anything else, says The Scottish Trader, has been the falling off in the demand for butter. Last year a large quantity of Irish butter was made, so large in fact, that it became a drug in the market.

A future is looked for in the production of cheese in Ireland.

The Color of Eggs.

A correspondent in The Newcastle Journal discusses the color and quality of hen's eggs. It appears that, at a recent local show, there was dissatisfaction because the prizes were not given for brown eggs rather than for white ones, irrespective of size. There is a widespread notion that eggs of a dark brown shade are better flavored and more nutritious than white eggs. It is pointed out, however, that the color of an egg's shell can have nothing whatever to do with the quality of the egg. The egg is already formed, fully constituted as regards yolk, albumen, and enclosing membrane, before it reaches that part of the oviduct wherein it gets the addition of a shell.

Canadian Butter in London.

London advices report a good demand last week for Canadian butter, particularly for fresh arrivals. Prices, however, have not materially advanced, but an early rise is expected. Choicest salt sold for 95s. to 96s. per cwt.; saltless for 98s. to 100s. per cwt. Canadian cheese was in good demand, notwithstanding the regular weekly advance in prices, which are now 5s. in excess of prices a year ago.

Will There be a Shortage?

It appears that there is about only one-third of the butter in cold store in England that there was last year, says Cold Storage. Our imports are about 1,500 tons below last year, instead of 5,000 tons in excess of the previous year as they were twelve months since. As our normal increase of imports for the last ten years averages 8,000 tons annually, there is a shortage of 14,500 tons to be made good by the end of December before we are in the same relative position as last year.

Dairy School Superintendent.

J. W. Mitchell, B.A., of Kingston, has been appointed superintendent of the Eastern Dairy School there. The salary will be $1,500 per annum, dating from September 15. The position was rendered vacant by the resignation of J. W. Hart.

Trade Prospects in Transvaal.

Among the imports into the Transvaal, South Africa, for the first five months of 1903 were: Animals, $1,850,000; butter, $695,000; groceries, $545,000; meats (fresh and cured), $3,210; preserved milk, $695,000.

In the matter of meats at least Canada should be able to look after a good share of this trade.

A Saintly Trader.

St. George, the patron saint of England, was a bacon dealer of Cappadocia, says Grocery. How and why he became the patron saint of England is a mystery. He did good trade in bacon, and made money out of army contracts. There is nothing new under the sun, and perhaps some of the present day contractors, who have made fortunes out of the South African War, may be trotted out as saints some 2,000 years after this.—Grocery, (Eng.)

Cheese Markets.

Belleville, Sept. 26.—At Cheese Board to-day, 2,230 boxes registered, 1,950 white and balance colored; 1,200 sold at 11 3/4c.; 11 5/8 to 11 3/4c. bid for balance.

Cowansville, Que., Sept. 26.—At the weekly meeting of The Eastern Township Dairymen's Association here to-day 34 factories offered 1,340 boxes cheese, 22 creameries offered 1,339 boxes of butter. Cheese sold at 11 5/8c. to 11 7/8c.; butter at 21½ to 22c.

Alexandria, Sept. 26. — This evening 1,355 cheese were boarded, 929 white and 426 colored. All sold at 11 7/8c.

Cornwall, Sept. 26.—At the Cornwall Cheese Board to-day 1,891 boxes were boarded and all sold but two lots at 11 3/4c. to 11 7/8c. The sales were: Hodgson Bros., 591; J. Alexander, 483; Ayer Co. Ltd., 229; Miller & Riley, 414; T. S. Williamson, 24; A. W. Grant, 40; unsold 80.

London Provision Prices.

Thomas Nesbitt & Co., in their prices current of Irish and foreign provisions, dated London, September 14, report: A fair business doing in most classes of provisions.

Butter—A quiet tone has prevailed during the week.
Bacon.—In steady demand.
Hams.—Quiet.
Lard.—In good request at higher prices.
Eggs.—Fair business passing.
Cheese.—Firm and in good demand.

Profitable Trade in Chickens.

A late bulletin issued by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa on the subject of Illustration Poultry Stations reads in part: Within the last few years the consumption of chickens has increased in Canada; the price for plump chickens has advanced. Both the increase in consumption and the advance in price are due to the business of crate fattening chickens. The chickens that realize the highest market price to-day are chickens that are fatted and prepared for market in accordance with the directions issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Chickens from the Ontario and Quebec Illustration Stations were sold a few days ago to Mr. Henry Gatehouse for 12 cents per pound live weight; and to the Canadian Produce Company, Toronto, Ont., for 11 cents live weight. These are profitable prices that can be obtained by any farmer shipping the same quality of chickens to Montreal or Toronto.

Proivsion Notes.

A Woodstock dealer is reported to have received an order for 20,000 chickens for shipment to England.

Last year the value of hogs sold or slaughtered throughout Ontario was $20,154,190. In 1901 the total value was $17,548,490, showing an increase of two and a half millions last year. This total has been raised steadily for ten years, being $8,775,362, in 1892.

The George Matthews Packing Co., Peterboro, have purchased the Leonard property near the C.P.R. track there, and will erect suitable buildings for a cold-storage warehouse, install an artificial refrigerator plant, giving 200,000 cubic feet of cold storage space.

There is nothing special to add to our report of last week. The volume of business in hog products during the week has been very fair and prices are well maintained. For Canadian short-cut mess pork there has been considerable inquiry, and sales are reported at $19.50 to $20 per barrel in round lots. Hams and bacon are in steady demand at unchanged prices. The demand for Canadian bacon on the English market continues good in spite of the liberal imports of Danish. We quote :

Because of the rather easier feeling in the western pork market business in barreled goods has received somewhat of a set back. Buyers are anxious to see which way the market will turn. This is a busy season. Beef keeps quite firm. Smoked meats are high. In pure lard large sales have been made. Ontario shippers continue to quote low figures. In refined lard there is a large sale at unchanged prices. Fresh meats are rather easier. The sale is dull. In beef and lambs stock is freely offered. Pork is in better supply. Veal and mutton are dull, being out of season. We quote :

The decline in the English cattle market has lowered the price of export cattle in the West to 3c. point of shipment with occasionally 3¼ for a specially fine lot. The ranchers are not willing to accept these figures and a goodly number of cattle will remain in the country all Winter.

The supplies of really fat cattle for home consumption are not large, as the heavy rains have kept the grass soft and cattle have not fattened as readily as usual. Range men are beginning to question whether the grass will mature sufficiently to make good winter feed.

Montreal.

EGGS.

The improvement exhibited in last week's market still continues, and higher prices have been paid at country points. The deliveries have dropped off almost completely, with the result that all dealers are anxious for stock. We understand that the common price paid to merchants for straight stock is 15½ to 16½c. f.o.b. Prices have advanced in sympathy on the local market, and 17c. is being secured for market stock, 18 to 18½c. for straight stock. We have inquired regarding the quantity of stock which is held in Montreal, and believe that it is less than for the corresponding period last year. This would in great measure warrant the high prices which are now being paid.

BUTTER.

The advanced price which took place a week ago looks low to-day when compared with the high prices paid at Cowansville and St. Hyacinthe last Saturday when 21½ to 21⅝c. was freely paid by all dealers, and it now looks as if the high price has come to stay. We understand that some of the larger dealers have quietly picked up all the July and August butters at a price which will show the holders a profit. The local price for fresh goods to-day is 21 to 22c., August, 20 to 21c.; held, 19 to 19½c.

CHEESE.

The market in cheese this week is not so firm as at the time of our last report. Although we cannot give any quotable change, there is an easier feeling and also a lack of confidence in the price that was not shown last week. The prices locally in a jobbing way are unchanged, 12 to 12½c. being the ruling price for the class of goods sold on the Montreal market.

St. John, N.B.

BUTTER.

Prices are held quite firm, but for prompt sales quality must be good. A fair quantity is coming forward. There is, as a rule, a drag to butter, except when very scarce, owing to the quantity of poor stock offered.

SAVE 25% on your HOUSE PAINTING.

If the grocers who intend painting their residences this Fall will follow the directions given below and wash the buildings with a solution of GOLD DUST Washing Powder, they will use one-third less paint than if they merely attempted to brush the dust off the house without washing it.

DIRECTIONS.

Dissolve one-quarter pound of GOLD DUST in a pint of water, then add the solution to 4 gallons of hot water; apply with a stiff brush, and follow with the use of a hose. The stronger the hose is turned on the quicker and more effectual the work will be.

The use of less paint can be accounted for by the fact that after washing the house with GOLD DUST it leaves a smooth surface, so that the same quantity of paint will go fully one-fourth further. Furthermore, it leaves no layer of dirt between the paint and the woodwork, and, as a consequence, the paint will wear longer.

We have letters from several of our customers who used this method, and after washing their houses with GOLD DUST they were so well pleased with the appearance of them that they concluded not to paint them at all.

Retail grocers will do well to call this matter to the attention of their customers, as $3.00 worth of GOLD DUST Washing Powder will make the house look as well as the expenditure of $100.00 in re-painting it would.

Any grocer may experiment with a 5c. package of GOLD DUST by emptying the contents into 8 gallons of hot water, which should convince him that it will pay him to continue.

GOLD DUST can be used for any kind of outdoor woodwork that needs renovating.

BUTTER.

The offerings of the week of creamery have been light and prices are firm at last week's figures, that is 18½ to 19c. at factories. Dairy receipts continue large and prices are without change at 11 to 13c., Winnipeg.

CHEESE.

The offerings for the week have been very light, and it is now assured that Manitoba will have to secure a large amount of cheese from Ontario to meet the requirements of Winter trade. Any offerings have been picked up sharply and the price has ranged from 11½ to 12c. during the week.

EGGS.

Demand is lively and receipts moderate. Dealers offer 16 to 17c. Winnipeg for good stock.

TEA PROFITS SMALL IN ENGLAND.

According to reports the tea trade of retail dealers in England has not met with satisfactory profits within the past year, says The Tea and Coffee Journal; indeed it has rather been a trying one. At the annual meeting of Hunters the Teamen, Limited, the chairman said that he had been in business 25 years or more, but he had never experienced anything like the dulness before. For a part of the year the tea market advanced some 15 to 20 per cent., and any advance in retail prices was next to impossible. A small dividend was declared, however, and all "kickers" were silenced by the remark that content might well prevail since all shareholders had already realized 70 per cent. of their capital, which remained extant in company, and there was hope for better times ahead.

FATAL FIRE IN A GROCERY STORE.

A $500 fire occurred in the grocery and hardware store of J. B. Beauchamp, 254 Rachel street, Montreal, on September 17. It was caused by one of the clerks placing a lighted lamp close to the gasolene tank. In attempting to extinguish the blaze Mr. Beauchamp, the proprietor, was so severely burned, that he had to be removed to Hotel Dieu Hospital, where, we regret to learn, he succumbed to his injuries on Saturday, the 26th ult.

DAI NIPPON (GREAT JAPAN).

AN INTERESTING EVENT.

THE dinner tendered by Mr. Shaw T. Nishimura, Canadian representative of the Central Japan Tea Trading Association, to his Montreal friends, at Hotel La Coruna, on Thursday evening, September 24, was an event of lasting interest to all his guests, and a pleasant memory to the host. Room 22 at La Coruna, the beautiful new hotel on Gu- street, was the scene of as pleasant an event as it is possible to arrange, and the guests of Mr. Nishimura were delighted with the perfect arrangement of the decorations, the music, flowers, and the unsurpassable menu. Mr. Nishimura as a host is hard to excel, as the enjoyment and comfort of his guests were in the extreme most fastidiously provided for, and the introduction of some very novel Japanese customs in arranging the seating of his guests, as well as the unique feature of the "lucky lottery" at the conclusion of the dinner, were enjoyed by all. Both these features were entirely new to those present, and were both novel and entertaining. A custom of his native country at social functions of this kind, where it is desirable that seating distinctions are to be avoided, is to number the seats by odds and evens—odds on one side of the table and evens on the other—and the numbers are drawn for by the guests, and so seated. This proceeding was followed out, and, naturally, the novelty put all present into good humor. The menu card was a novelty as well, such mysterious concoctions as T cocktails, Mikado soup, sweetbreads a la Tokio, Yokohama punch, figuring at proper intervals among the entrees, roasts and dessert. Songs, stories, speeches, in English and French, and trade and loyal toasts to King, country and host, were of a high order and drunk with enthusiasm. At the conclusion of the dinner Mr. Nishimura introduced the "lucky lottery" of Japan. This feature caused the greatest merriment, and, everyone entering into the spirit of the affair, carried it out a la Japanese. The "lucky lottery" provides that the winners (and at a function of this sort there are no blanks) must carry home from the feast the object drawn. The staid and solid business men of Montreal, that is those connected with the tea trade, left La Coruna carrying the one a large squash, another a pair of babies' slippers, a third a lady's corset, another a mop, egg plant, scrubbing brushes, lady's undershirt, lady's comb, and so on, and great must have been the surprise of the wives and mothers of the guests next morning to find these strange articles brought home by their spouses and sons.

Among the guests present were Albert Hebert, of Hudon, Hebert & Co.; A. L. Lockerby, of Lockerby Bros.; Mr. Demers, of Demers, Fletcher & Co.; J. Kearney, of J. & P. Kearney; Jos. Ethier, of Laporte, Martin & Cie; Mr. Geoffrion, Mr. Carter; of Carter, Galbraith & Co.; John Carsley, of Carsley's; Wallace Stroud, of Stroud Bros; Mr. Osgood, Mr. Clelland, Mr. Huxley, of Tamilkande Tea Co., and others.

Mr. Alex. Anderson, of the Japan Tea Trading Association, acted as vice-chairman, and ably assisted the host in his efforts to make everyone happy. It was remarked by one of the guests during his speech that this event was the first occasion on which the tea merchants had been assembled together, and the idea of forming a tea association or tea branch of the wholesale grocery trade was taken hold of and may possibly result in the formation of such a desirable section of the trade. It is to be hoped that Mr. Nishimura's pleasant dinner will bear fruit, as an association of tea merchants could be of undoubted value to the trade and bring matters pertaining to this industry more forcibly forward when important features in connection with duties, etc., are brought before the Government.

After singing the National Anthem, and with three cheers for the genial host, who so ably represents the interests of Dai Nippon (Great Japan) in Montreal, the guests wended their way happily homeward.

A TEA BLOCKADE.

ON Saturday morning last the corner of St. Paul and St. Sulpice streets, Montreal, presented a chaotic sight, teamsters and carters of all kinds being jammed up in a seemingly tangled state. Euphonic French expletives collided a la Marconi with forceful English adjectives in the circumambient air, and the passers-by momentarily anticipated the arrival of the patrol wagon. The writer, who happened to pass at the time, was attracted to the scene by the vociferous language of the teamsters and the backing and filling of the wagons, carts and lorries at the corner. The cause of the tumult turned out to be due to the fact that 11 C.P.R. double-horse trucks loaded with "Salada" tea had a few minutes before arrived and lined up on both streets leading to the warehouses of that company, and, as both streets are very narrow and the general through traffic heavy at this point, a congestion resulted. However, after about half-an-hour's manoeuvring, the streets were cleared, and general business allowed to resume its wonted course.

CONFECTIONERY

A Department for Retailers.

Keep First-Class Confectionery.

WHY does the average grocer not manifest more interest in the subject of confectionery? It is a line which in the past few years has shown perhaps more development than any other of the lines carried by the grocer. At the Dominion Exhibition one firm made an exhibit of over five hundred kinds of biscuits, and these along with the chocolates and candies displayed by other firms should suggest to the progressive grocer the possibilities lying dormant in these lines. Of course all grocers keep the regulation crackers and a few of the old stand-bys in fancy biscuits, but what are they doing in the dainty confections with which the market is now being supplied? Here is a line that if energetically pushed should yield a handsome profit in itself, and would undoubtedly bring new and valuable custom.

No better time could be chosen to begin than the present. With the Fall entertaining season approaching and the Christmas holiday season not so very far distant there should be a good opening for the grocer who makes a judicious selection of what the market offers in these lines and takes good care to give it a prominent place in his store, his advertisements and in his business talk to his customers.

Nor should high-class candies be neglected. It is a matter of regret that the trade in the finer classes of candies has to a large extent passed from the hands of the grocers into the hands of the confectionery stores pure and simple and of the druggists. That the straight confectionery stores should do a large share of the candy trade is not to be wondered at, but there is no reason whatever why the druggists should secure the control they have in these lines except that the grocers have not in the past been alive to their interests. Indeed, more than one manufacturer of the better grades of candies has expressed an indifference as to the grocers' trade so long as he held the confectioners' and druggists'.

With the passing of the warm Summer months the keeping of candy in good shape will become more easy and the demand greater.

A neat little showcase filled with choice bon-bons in attractive boxes, such as are seen in the average drug store, would improve the appearance of any grocery and repay for itself many times by the extra sales in a line which has been sadly neglected in the past.

In planning for the Christmas trade the grocer will do well by his business to consider seriously the question of putting in an up-to-date stock of fancy confections and bon-bons.

Confectionery Class.

A confectionery class, under the auspices of the Scottish Association, has been arranged for Coupar Angus, and will commence in September, says The Scottish Trader. The Technical Education Committee of the County Council have voted a grant of £20 towards the expenses, which will pay the railway fares of students in many cases. A considerable number of pupils have entered, and there is every indication that the class will be successful.

Candy Eaters are Abstainers.

CANDY and confectionery to the amount of $100,000,000 are sold in the American home market every year, and to this total of manufacture New York contributes $20,000,000 or one-fifth. Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Illinois are the three other states which contribute largely to the total, which is constantly increasing for three reasons.

These are the lower price of sugar and syrup, the superior excellence of American manufacture, which has made this country independent of foreign imports in this line, and the national taste for sugar and for all articles of manufacture into which sugar enters as the chief ingredient.

The whole foreign importation of confectionery to this country, which was formerly a considerable trade, was less than $75,000 last year.

It is a well-known fact that sugar in the form of candy or sweets is a substitute for alcohol. All abstainers from the use of alcohol in any form are candy-eaters, as vegetarians, almost universally, are as well. The man who ceases to drink develops an uncommon fondness for candy.

The candy-eater who develops a partiality for wine or spirits, or even beer, which contains much saccharine matter, is seen to diminish his purchases of candy. It is in temperance localities that the largest amount of candy is eaten, and the largest patrons of candy stores everywhere are, of course, women—and especially young women and children.

The candy-making interest of the United States now centres in and about New York, where there are nearly 900 candy-making establishments.

As candy-eaters and water-drinkers, Americans stand first.—The Supply World.

Candy Men Arraigned.

THE Executive Committee of the U.S. Candy Trust has been arraigned before a justice on the charge of criminal conspiracy in restraint of trade, says an American exchange. How well the Candy Trust follows out the precepts of its charter can be seen from the publication of a section of it. It says that it was organized "to elevate the moral status of the members and foster friendship and fraternity among them; to render voluntary assistance and financial support to its members in the event of their illness and distress."

The by-laws prohibit any dealer or manufacturer from selling below the schedule, and it is made an offence to show the price list to any person not in the Trust. No member can sell to any person not a member of the Trust, or buy from any person not in the Trust, and heavy fines are provided for any infringement of these stringent rules. If any one was expelled from the Trust it meant shutting up shop, and in the case of many small dealers bankruptcy.

One man was forced to close his store and lose a trade which it had taken him years to obtain, simply because he sold candy to a customer without ascertaining whether he had one of the Trust's cards. Another one was charged with selling candies below the schedule and of supplying a dealer who had been expelled from the Trust.

Scarcity of Peanuts.

Some large confectionery establishments are wondering where they are going to get supplies of peanuts for their candies. Peanuts are being used more and more in candy making, and a shortage in these particular varieties sets confectioners guessing. The candy in which peanuts are used is generally low priced, and an increase in cost of any of the ingredients presents an embarrassing situation. Moreover, it is a condition where no substitute can be employed.

Maryland Tomatoes.

ADVICES from Southern tomato packers report the market as slightly firmer on full standard 3s. at 72½c. f.o.b. factory. Some interests quote nothing available there under 75c. regular. The advices say: "The offerings of full standard Maryland tomatoes in 3-lb. cans quoted a few days ago at 70c. f.o.b. factory had a weakening effect on the idea of holders in some quarters and the market ruled easy. There were considerable sales made at 70c. by one or two packers, but these, it is now believed, have been entirely cleared from the market. We know of nothing to-day that is offered in full standard goods at under 72½c. regular. We incline to think that the market has touched the lowest point and certainly if a frost were to show up an immediate advance would take place.

Coast Dried Fruits.

Mail advices to The New York Journal of Commerce from the coast say of dried fruits: "The market is more quiet, but holders are firm in view of the smaller pack on this coast and a large falling off in the fruit crop east and in Europe. This latter, it is claimed, will take this coast's surplus before the beginning of another season. Those in position to know say that the sales so far foot up quite large and with temporary wants met large handlers east are disposed to hold off and buy as wanted, letting packers on this coast carry the stocks. If this opinion is correct we believe that some of the large distributors at the east will find that later supplies will either be cleaned up or so nearly so as to make it hard to have orders filled. If the reported heavy freeze in the middle west proves to be correct then it is only reasonable to believe that apples and late fruits there have been severely damaged, and if so all dried fruits will be wanted."

French View of Coffee.

The Havre Bulletin de Commerce, in its issue of September 15, says of coffee:

"The correspondent of a Havre house, who in January last estimated the current Santos crop at 8,500,000 bags, wrote under date of August 21 that owing to the inferior rendiment, due to general smallness of the bean, they are reducing their estimate to 7,500,000 bags. As regards the future crop they say in answer to inquiries they received a telegram on August 20 that the drouth had caused no damage so far. They add: The lack of rain would not seriously affect the flowering unless the drouth continued into September. Nevertheless we must not forget that the coffee plantations have already experienced a year of drouth followed by a year of frost, circumstances to which must be added the lack of care, which in former years was so perfect. It is certain, however, that in view of these circumstances crops like that of 1901-2 cannot be expected for a long time to come. From now on we warn you against all premature reports on the subject of the next flowering, because it is not the flowering, which will probably be abundant, but rather the formation of the cherries which influence the prospects of the next crop; but this germination can hardly be appreciated until end of October at the earliest, or in November-December."

California Prunes.

The California Fruit Grower says of prunes: "It is a bad plan to sell short for any particular delivery. Outside prunes are moving on 2½c. to 2¾c. basis, a few Santa Claras on 2¾c. to 3c. basis. Growers in the Santa Clara valley are holding for 3c. basis, and packers are trying to buy on 2¾c. basis. It is the very general opinion that after the shorts secure enough fruit with which to fill their orders this market will settle down, and a slump in prices is looked for. Atlantic seaboard dealers are quoting new crop Santa Clara prunes in 25-lb. boxes as follows: 40 to 50s., 5¼c.; 50 to 60s., 4¾c.; 60 to 70s., 4¼c.; October shipment direct in carload lots f.o.b. California. If via New York delivery will be made in less than carlots and at special prices. One seller advises in view of high prices on early shipments it might be well not to buy a carload, as November shipment can be offered at ¼c. less. New crop Oregon prunes are being offered in 25-lb. boxes New York delivery at 30 to 40s., 6½c.; 40 to 50s., 5¾c. The prune crop of the Santa Clara valley is now estimated at from 50 to 60 per cent. of last season's yield, i.e., 60,000,000 to 75,000,000 pounds of cured fruit."

Fresno Raisins.

Mail advices from San Francisco say: "A representative of The J. B. Inderrieden Co., who has just returned from Fresno, says that it is estimated that the raisin crop in the vicinity of Fresno will be from 15 to 20 per cent. short of the large crop of last year. The packers and brokers failed to come to an understanding as to a uniform practice in dividing commissions, and there is little prospect of improvement from the brokers' standpoint. The packers are receiving only $4 per ton for stemming raisins and there is a smaller profit in seeding."

Brazil Coffee Crop.

The majority of the local trade are now figuring that the yield of the present Brazil coffee crop will be in the neighborhood of 11,000,000 bags, or at an outside figure, 12,000,000 bags, says The New York Journal of Commerce. The smaller yield from the present Brazil crop than was at one time expected and the reports of unfavorable climatic conditions in Sao Paulo for the growth of the 1904-05 crop is changing sentiment, which is steadily becoming more bullish. The fact that there have been no aggressive operations on the bear side of the market also has had a favorable influence; in fact there are those of the trade who express themselves as believing that a prominent interest in coffee, which has been identified for several years past with the bear side of the market, may come out openly on the bull side of the market before the present upward movement of prices is ended.

Southern Rice Crop.

Advices from the south re rice note light receipts on the Atlantic coast where planters are busy harvesting. Some small receipts are expected during the coming week. In the interior, southwest Louisiana, but little has been done except in way of harvesting. Few lots have been milled, and offerings are more in the way of exhibits than for commercial supply. In Texas, the same conditions prevail; last week a "Norther" swept over the rice belt, retarding the maturing of the grain, and it is feared by some that much of the rice will be blasted."

Trinidad Cocoa.

Mail advices from Trinidad dated September 10 say of cocoa: "Deliveries continue extremely limited, and although under the influence of favorable weather the cultivation presents a promising appearance; there is no likelihood of next crop produce being available before the end of the year. The scarcity of supplies combined with cable advices of 2s. per cwt. advance at London auctions since last mail has further strengthened the local market, and there are ready buyers for the small lots offering at $12.75 to $13 for ordinary to good red quality and $13.25 to $14 for superior estates descriptions. Exports for the fortnight amount to 1,350 bags, of which 718 bags went to the United States. Total shipments from October 1 to date amount to 193,812 bags as compared with 167,931 bags for the corresponding period of last year."

PERSONAL MENTION.

Owing to a greatly increased business W. J. Crothers, biscuit manufacturer, Kingston, has found it necessary to enlarge his already large factory and add a lot of new machines.

Mr. I. D. Bradshaw, the Toronto gum man, was in Montreal this week visiting the jobbing trade. Besides his well-known brands of gum, Mr. Bradshaw is a large manufacturer of oiled and waxed paper.

Mr. A. M. Piper, of Todhunter, Mitchell & Co., Toronto, was in Montreal during the week. Mr. Piper is a thoroughly experienced coffee and spice man, having all his life been actively engaged in the business, first in Rochester, N.Y. and later, about twenty-five years in Toronto, and his knowledge and experience is extensive. As a salesman, Mr. Piper's record is an enviable one. He is on his Fall trip through Quebec and the Maritime Provinces.

EVAPORATED APPLES.

A New York firm are in Eastern Ontario contracting for evaporated apples. The entire output of several evaporators has been secured.

TO MAKE CREAM OF TARTAR.

The American Grape Acid Association of California are offering a prize of $25,000 to the person who will devise a satisfactory process of producing cream of tartar from California grapes. It is claimed that the discovery of a process for the utilization of California grapes to produce tartaric acid on a commercial basis would be of inestimable value to California. The United States is a very large importer of grape acids, which are material for cream of tartar, despite the fact that California is a very large producer of grapes. The present value of tartaric acid there wholesale is 31c. per lb.

A NEW MINISTER OF COMMERCE WANTED.

A CANADIAN manufacturer went to England recently to see whether he could not develop trade in the Mother Country. He makes an article of food used in almost every household. He manufactures it from raw material grown on most farms in Canada. The British market for this article is now held by United States manufacturers almost entirely.

He was not familiar with British business men or their methods, and he naturally wound his way to the High Commissioner's office. Being a man prominent in Canadian affairs and bearing good letters of introduction, he was there received most cordially, assured that everything would be done to assist him, invited to banquets, entertainments and everything of that sort that was going on. But when he wanted to get information about, and get in touch with, distributors of food products in London or anywhere else in the United Kingdom, gracious silence reigned in the High Commissioner's office. They were quite sure there were some such people in Britain, but all their efforts to put him in touch with them failed. Finally they gave him the address of a prominent firm which they were quite sure was just the one he wanted. On going there he found a very respectable firm, but one which had not the remotest connection with the trade in food products. And this was the only name they could give him.

In despair he hunted up the Emigration Office. Mr. Preston told him in the fewest words possible that he would help him if he could, but did not know anything about business, that he had better see Mr. Ball, in Birmingham, and then cordially bundled him out of his office.

THE GROCER has for years been urging the appointment of a good man in the High Commissioner's office who has a thorough knowledge of trade affairs there, and who could keep Canadian manufacturers informed and in touch with all possible openings for our trade with Britain—a trade of which we have but a small share of what we could have with a good agent in London.

We believe the Government is strongly in favor of the appointment of such a man. It is only the subbornness of the Department of Trade and Commerce that prevents it. There are many who think it is more than stubbornness, that it is strong hereditary opposition to the interests of the Canadian manufacturers.

The information has been quietly given out that it is Lord Strathcona who is opposed, and that the appointment of such a man would hurt his feelings. THE GROCER is in a position to state positively that the High Commissioner has on at least two occasions, in written reports which have been received at Ottawa, strongly urged the addition of a trade expert of great ability and high standing to his staff in London, and that part of his report, it is said, has never been made public.

One bit of gossip in political circles is that Sir Richard Cartwright is quite favorable to the appointment, but is opposed on this point by his deputy, Mr. Parmalee. An intimate friend of the latter, when in THE GROCER office recently, said that he knew Mr. Parmalee had privately urged the appointment, but must publicly support the prejudices of his chief. An enterprising member of Parliament would serve his country a good turn by setting in motion the proper machinery for finding out whether the deputy is bulldozing the Minister or the Minister is making a scapegoat of the deputy.

The simplest way out of the difficulty now is for the Canadian Manufacturers' Association themselves to establish an agency in London for the benefit of Canadians, and ask the Government to give them a grant to enable them to do so. So long as the Trade and Commerce Department is conducted as it is at present THE GROCER is positive no assistance will be given in this direction.

OUR ATTITUDE TOWARD U. S. TRADE.

SEVERAL United States manufacturers, visiting Montreal and Toronto recently, remarked upon the growing anxiety across the line as to the alarming proportions Mr. Chamberlain's protective tariff issue threatens to assume throughout the British Empire. "A new day must have dawned for Canada," said one of these Americans, "when she no longer cares to consider seriously the question of trade reciprocity with the States."

With the great probability of a preferential trade policy being adopted all over the Empire in the near future, which is undeniably bound to be in the best interests of Canada, our American friends have no just cause for experiencing more than disappointment. It is no less than the spirit taught by their own practical theology—"Every man for himself." There is an additional clause, however, which reads as follows: "And all for the great Empire of which we form a part."

Everyone interested in the development of Canadian manufactures will be glad to know that American manufacturers, who have a large Canadian and United Kingdom trade, realize the importance of retaining the same. In order to do this they will have to establish plants in Canada. Many of them are already looking about for suitable locations for branch manufactories here. From here they propose to supply Britain and her colonies with all products, the raw material for which is to be found in the Dominion.

WAKE UP, CANADA.

ARE Canadians "basking in their own sunshine" and thinking too much of themselves, while their rivals are ousting them from their markets? Mr. Jas. D. Allan, who has just returned from a trip through England, Russia and other continental countries of Europe, has so expressed his opinion in the daily press, and it is to be regretted that there should be grounds to give foundation for the charge.

Mr. Allan instances the place Russia is taking in the production of dairy products for the English market, and speaks in no measured terms of the possibilities of Siberia along this line.

There can be no doubt that the Russian supplies have materially affected the prices of butter and eggs in the English market during the present season. But what is the remedy?

In the first place, as has already been pointed out in THE GROCER, greater care must be taken in placing our butter on the English market in first-class shape. There is always a good demand at profitable figures for first-class butter, but unfortunately our butter has not always been delivered in that condition. British authorities admit that Canadian butter is all right when it leaves the dairy or creamery, but it is not made with a view to the conditions of exportation. It contains too much water for one thing, and for another, no preservatives are used, some of which, says the English authority, are perfectly harmless if used in small enough quantities and prevent the slightest deterioration en route.

In any event it is important that a satisfactory system should be evolved whereby our butter may be systematically collected and placed on the English market without being subjected to the trying ordeal of an uncertain temperature.

As THE GROCER has again and again pointed out, we must be as a nation eternally vigilant if we hope to make and keep a place in the commercial world. Competition was never keener, and although our prosperity is at present greater than it has been it is by no means as great as it should, might and, if we keep eternally at it, will be. There is no use of us wasting our energies congratulating ourselves when our competitors are stealing our markets. We have the greatest of possibilities, and our people in many ways are unexcelled, yet we need to cultivate that keen commercial instinct of our American cousins, which is never surprised by a rival or lulled to sleep by success.

THE CANNERS' CAST IRON CONTRACT.

SINCE last discussing the selling terms of The Canadian Canners' Consolidated Companies THE GROCER has been called upon by Mr. Boulter, of Picton, a gentleman prominently identified with the above company, and one who for many years has been interested in the canning industries of this country. Mr. Boulter naturally unholds the selling terms which have been made by his organization. He argues that the consolidation is a good thing, a contention THE GROCER does not deny, and that the outside men should be in it, a matter with which we have no concern. Mr. Boulter further urges that there is nothing objectionable in the terms, as the wholesaler is not obliged to buy, that altogether the terms are in the interests of, and were requested by, the wholesale trade, and are the same as at present prevail in the sugar trade.

Now, from the point of view of the consolidation the terms may be a good thing, but how the wholesaler is to be benefited by being bound hand and foot to one concern we are unable to discern. What is he to gain from an arrangement which, as is pointed out by our Vanconver correspondent, practically adds a percentage on to the proper price of the goods to be held as an axe over his head in order to make sure that he does not buy any goods from outside factories. The wholesaler is probably the best judge of his own interest, and our advices from all parts of the country, from Halifax to Vancouver, show that almost without exception the exclusive terms are regarded with disfavor by the trade. The contention that the wholesaler is not compelled to buy can hardly be substantiated in view of the fact that the consolidation control somewhere near 90 per cent. of the goods included under the exclusion clause.

As to the terms being the same as are made in the sugar trade, Mr. Boulter is mistaken. Sugar is indeed sold on the rebate system, but as only foreign refined sugars are affected, wholesalers are free to buy from any refinery in Canada, including those in the Maritime Provinces, British Columbia and the numerous beet sugar factories which are springing up all over Ontario. Moreover, the terms do not apply to raw sugars, which may be purchased anywhere. As the Canadian refiners are quite able to supply the demand, and, as is well known, Canadian sugars readily respond to variations on the New York market, the wholesalers are not complaining, though, as one remarked, were they unable to fill orders that would be a different matter.

Mr. Boulter did not seem to appreciate the position taken by THE GROCER in this matter. As stated before, the desire of the consolidation to arrange fair prices and prevent price-cutting has our every sympathy, and we have a lively appreciation of the great opportunity there is for a company of the strength of the Canadian Canners' Consolidated Companies to raise the standard of quality, effect important economies in the matter of buying, selling, specializing, freight, and in opening up new markets, not alone in Canada, but in the Motherland and the world at large, but it is our contention, as already pointed out, that the methods pursued are most unfortunately ill-advised and destined to work out to their own disadvantage.

True, as Mr. Boulter did not fail to remind us, the men who are at the head of the Canadian Canners' Consolidated Companies are well qualified to manage its affairs, but it is just possible that, absorbed with their own plans, they have not given sufficient weight to the point of view of the buyer.

It is merely with the exclusive contract that we find fault and in this we but voice the sentiments of the majority of the wholesale trade, at the instance of whom we were first put in possession of the facts, and for justice to whom, as to the trade at large, we are contending.

A new phase in the working of the exclusive clause is pointed out by our Vancouver correspondent in this week's British Columbia letter. The canners are not undertaking to fill orders to the full extent, corn and tomatoes were early withdrawn and no later orders accepted at all, and yet by the terms of the contract wholesalers are prohibited from stocking from outside factories, under penalty of losing the rebate on their season's purchase from the consolidation. A large Ontario wholesaler expressed the belief that when unable to fill orders the consolidation would not insist on the contract and it seems unreasonable that they should. But the terms as defined by the Canners' letter are plain. "If any goods are subsequently purchased outside of the company no rebate whatever will be made on any goods purchased from us throughout the season."

Our correspondent logically argues that if the consolidation insists on an exclusive contract they are morally bound to fill all orders. This they are confessedly unable to do.

The absurdity of the situation is apparent when the wholesaler is mulcted for the amount of his rebate for buying goods outside the consolidation which cannot be supplied from within.

We agree with the Ontario wholesaler in believing that the canners could not have contemplated this situation in framing their terms.

The inclusion of the exclusive clause in the selling terms was ill-advised from the beginning, and the canners will serve themselves well by seizing this occasion for dropping it. The ill-feeling already engendered in the trade, especially in the outlying provinces, counterbalances any gain which might be derived from retaining the objectionable clause.

From the letter of our Vancouver correspondent it would appear that the British Columbia wholesalers are thoroughly exasperated with the consolidation and would welcome an opportunity of throwing their trade into the hands of California. A private letter from one of the largest wholesale firms on the Coast confirms the account of the situation as described by our correspondent.

The western view of the matter is succinctly expressed in the charge. "It is very evident that the prices have been so framed that it means taking the list as it should be and adding a percentage to compel coming into the combine's exclusive control.

THE IMPORTANCE OF LITTLE THINGS.

THE difference between success and failure is often a mere matter of detail, and the phenomenal growth of some of our most successful business firms is the result, more often than not, of a strict adherence to the old motto, "waste not, want not."

In twentieth century competition economy of production is the keystone of the arch of success, and with our methods of factory production economy may be the matter of but the twentieth part of a cent on any one process. A negligent or ignorant employe may, without knowing it, cause more loss in a day than he can repair in a week, and where employes run into hundreds and thousands the importance of small things will readily be seen to be vital.

But the same is true in business of all sorts, and in none more than in the grocery. The grocer's business is to serve his customers with a great number of articles, many in small quantities and most of comparatively small value. His profit on any one of scores of sales every day is fractional. Yet it is on the aggregate of these that he depends for his profit to pay rent, help and the heavy general expense he is under in the conduct of his business.

At the same time no other retail dealer carries so much stock that is immediately perishable or which deteriorates so rapidly.

All of these circumstances demand an alertness and system which unfortunately is not always found in the grocery. The clerks will be what the proprietor is. If he is scrupulously neat and exact, if he makes use of every bit of waste material, if he is careful in his buying, as in his selling, to see that nothing goes to waste, his clerks will follow his example, or, if he is wise, find other situations. If on the other hand he is untidy in his office and careless in looking after detail he may rest assured that his help will go him one better.

If the grocer has been lax in the past, there is no better time to reform than now. It may be that the disappointing total of last year's business has been the result of numerous small leaks that have escaped attention. In any event, a careful attention to detail and system will be found wonderfully productive of results.

HOLIDAY PRESENTS IN THE GROCERY STORE.

BY an observer of the tendencies in the grocery trade, there are occasionally seen some lines of goods quite foreign to the trade in its generally accepted sense. This is instanced particularly in articles suitable for presents, a line which has recently come prominently to our notice, and in which a very profitable business may be conducted, especially around the holiday season. This holiday line has really no limit. It includes perfumes, writing materials, bon-bons, inexpensive jewelery, toys, games, sporting goods, fancy china, etc., etc. Some of these lines would seem not quite suitable for the grocery store, but the grocer may find them profitable in the next few months.

The fact is that in the smaller towns where the trade is largely dependent upon the farming community, people are most reluctant to part with money when farm produce will take its place. Stationers, druggists and jewelers cannot accept trade, but the grocer is willing to do so, and the farmer will naturally turn to him for what he requires, including birthday gifts, wedding and seasonable presents. With this great advantage the grocer who advertises and displays his articles suitable for presents can do a profitable business, especially around Christmas time, and to the great convenience of his customers.

Avoid Confidential Buying

Use Your Own Good Judgment

Some dealers (not you of course) have a failing in loading-up with every new fangled brand that comes upon the market. Their past experiences in this connection appear to go for naught. There seems to be a sort of chronic fascination about this kind of thing—either it's the plausibility of the salesman, the design of the packet, the postponement of pay-day, or some other allurement. The Tea value and it's selling reputation is given no consideration. They are a kind of "Gold Bricked" into a purchase with the usual result.

Don't blame the seller---just place the responsibility where it belongs, "with yourself."

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, October 1, 1903.

GROCERIES.

A FREE movement in all staple lines is reported for this last week and trade generally manifests a bright tone. In canned goods cohoes have advanced in the absence of sockeyes, which cannot be had at any price. Tomatoes are in lively demand and sales have been closed at $1.20 for guaranteed delivery. The demand for coffee continues fair with prices firm for Rios. Spices continue active with an upward tendency in cloves and pepper, with indications of sharp advances on some lines shortly. An improved demand is reported for molasses and syrups, while Barbados have made a sharp advance to 45c. Rice and tapioca are unchanged with an improved demand for rice. Tea is gaining some interest and shipments of good quality China and Japan have been readily taken up. Dried fruits are generally strong, Valencia raisins in particular having aggregated advances of 2s. since a week ago. In sugar nothing of note has transpired and values hold the firmness which was developed last week.

CANNED GOODS.

The canned goods situation continues very interesting. Sockeye salmon are impossible to get. It is said that some canners have offered a bonus of $1 a case for permission to default in filling orders. The explanation of this is the high price in the Old Country. We hear of Fraser Rivers selling at 32s. per case ½-lb. flats, 27s. 6d. for 1-lb. flats and 26s. to 27s. for 1-lb. talls. Cohoes have advanced 10 to 15c. since a week ago. There is a great demand for canned tomatoes and orders have been accepted at $1.20 for guaranteed delivery. It is reported that the agents of a factory outside the consolidation have been asking $1.25. From a private source it is also learned that an outside factory is shading the consolidation's quotations in Western Canada. We quote :

COFFEES.

There is a fair movement in the local market with prices a little firmer for Rios, but not sufficiently to affect quotations. New York advices indicate an upward tendency in prices to the extent of 5 to 10 points for contracts. European reports were somewhat disappointing, but despite this some little speculative buying transpired. The crop movement continues limited as compared with last year and the course of values is thought to depend upon the October receipts which will arrive in a few days. We quote :

SUGAR.

The general situation is without special feature at the moment. The firmness noted in our last has been fully maintained and it transpires that at the advance of 1-32 a considerable quantity was brought out, totalling, it is reported, 30,000 tons. At the moment, buyers and sellers are indifferent, with holders asking a further 1-32 advance, but quotations remain nominal on basis of $3.91, duty paid New York, for 96 test centrifugals.

There has been further improvement in the statistical situation, stocks at United States four ports being reduced for the week by 17,866 tons. Receipts for week ending September 23 were 27,134 tons with meltings reduced 3,000 tons for the week to, say, 15,000 tons, leaving total stocks in all hands estimated at 177,244 tons, which is only about 7,700 tons more than at same week last year. Combined stocks at United States and Cuban ports are now 348,244 tons, as against 313,849 tons same time last year. There are still two central factories grinding, with prospects of an early start for next campaign. Combined stocks of Europe and America at latest uneven dates are 1,551,244 tons, against 1,651,940 tons same period last year, the decrease being 97,696 tons.

European markets have remained steady at 8s. 4½d. basis f.o.b. Hamburg for 88 test, September shipment, while new crop, for October shipment, is quoted at 8s. 10½d. Latter is equal to $3.87 for 96 test centrifugals, duty paid New York, or fractionally under the spot market. As its arrival, however, would be somewhat remote, this disparity has no immediate effect upon cane sugar quotations.

A purchase has been made for refiners' account of 100 tons new crop for the purpose of testing the new regulations, but it is more than likely that this sugar will be admitted without the additional countervailing duty. The easier tendency in Europe is said to be due to the favorable change in the weather. Licht's first estimate of the coming European beet crop ranges from 5,570,000 to 6,050,000 tons, while other well-informed parties have been counting upon a probable out-turn of 5,850 tons against last crop actual out-turn of 5,605,000 tons. Recent reports are that weights are backward in some districts.

The refined situation is without change both in United States and Canada and there are no special indications for the immediate future.

SPICES.

The spice market maintains the activity reported last week. For the light stocks held locally a very fair demand is met. Cloves are still advancing and pepper is reported rather firmer. The New York market is very active with higher prices for cloves and more general demand for the entire list. Pepper is rather firmer owing to continued high prices from the East and increased demand. Cassias are much steadier owing to steadily decreasing supplies and growing demand. Cayennes are active for all grades and this article will be generally high this Fall. There are likely to be some sharp advances. We quote :

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

An improved demand is noted in these lines since last writing and Barbados have gone up to 45c. with other prices firm. New York reports molasses stocks very moderate and with a fairly full volume of business prices firm. A shortage of 25 to 40 per cent. as compared with last year's crop is predicted from New Or-

TEAS.

A good trade is reported in teas at firm quotations. Some new Chinas and Japans that arrived last week were picked up rapidly, prices notwithstanding, doubtless on account of the market having been bare of good teas for some time. Ceylons have been moving freely in both blacks and greens, especially teas with flavor, also Indian greens.

Reports to hand show a weakness in Indians on the London market partly accounted for by the quality. Teas showing really fine liquors, however, are gradually growing scarcer and for these satisfactory figures were realized.

Ceylons of medium quality are reported to have been steady, but buyers were fastidious in touching teas showing any undesirable qualities.

Javas have met with a satisfactory demand on the London market at a fractional decline. We quote :

seeded raisins have been made considerably higher than last year and consequently business will be considerably curtailed. Cable advices on Tuesday report a strong market in Comadra figs at an advance of 6d. on last quotations. For California prunes the market remains unchanged. Early shipments of Valencia raisins via New York were among the arrivals of the week and show very fine quality. We quote :

Wholesale Commission Merchant and Broker, ent time is quite up to the supply and on some days dealers were not able to fill all orders on account of short arrivals. One reason for the good demand is the lovely weather there has been for the Fall fairs in the different towns and villages, and the consequent big demand for fruit. Banana supplies are light. Blueberries are now off the market; watermelons are also about done, although we continue to quote them. "Moore's Early" grapes have disappeared, but have been succeeded by "Concords" and "Niagaras." Verdilli lemons are a little firmer this week, as also are tomatoes and cranberries. Bartlett pears are very scarce now and have taken a big jump in price. We quote:

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, October 1, 1903.

GROCERIES.

BUSINESS among the jobbers is reported as good during the week, country orders being plentiful, and city trade also looking up. Sugars are going out fairly well considering that the preserving season is practically over. New York quotations are tending stronger though locally no change is looked for. In teas the trade has been good in all lines with possibly the exception of China blacks, which are quiet. Ceylon and Indian greens are sought after freely and readily picked up when offered. China greens, Ping Sueys and Pea Leaf Gunpowders have improved in demand and the latter are hard to get hold of. Japans have shown a firmer front on cable advices to hand declining to fill any more orders as stocks were practically exhausted. The demand for Japans from both country and cities has been very active lately and fair prices have been realized for fine to common grades. Syrups and molasses are in good demand, Barbados receiving attention at even the strong prices ruling, as it is expected that further rise may eventuate within the next few months. Syrups are going out freely and show splendid value in comparison with the high price of molasses. The canned goods situation is still unsettled, though the packers' association have sent out a circular to the trade guaranteeing 60 per cent. deliveries. Jobbers generally feel the uncertain condition of affairs and some grumbling is heard. Uncharitable as it may appear, it is hinted in some quarters that there is a good-sized "nigger in the woodpile" in this Canners' Association and the feeling is abroad that the association is holding back on the pack; with the very large crop of tomatoes in the country it is claimed that packers should be able to make 100 per cent. deliveries, and it is thought that anything over the 60 per cent guaranteed is being used by the association for speculative purposes. While this may seem right to members of the association it is looked upon as unfair to the jobbing trade of Canada—and it is most certainly a handicap to clean business. Salmon is high and quite a demand. Reports from Malaga advise an advance of 50 per cent. in loose muscatels. Crop reports indicate a greater scarcity than was expected. New Malaga table raisins are reported by some of the trade this week. California seeded raisins are 1c. higher. Currant market is unchanged and nothing is expected to alter the position until arrival of first direct steamer in October. California prunes are decidedly stronger. Nuts are quiet and not much trade. In green fruits trade has been quiet owing to unseasonable weather. Grapes are cheaper and came down with a slump this week on account of heavy receipts. Heavy shipments of apples for export are reported, about 54,000 bbls. clearing this week, and next week still heavier shipments are expected. Coffee is unchanged. Spices continue strong and tendency is for further advance, particularly in cloves. Last week's sharp advance caused a little local flurry. Rice and tapioca are quiet. In fish weather conditions have been favorable to good trade. Shell oysters are commencing to come in freely now. Brook trout are out of the market, the close season commencing October 1. The vegetable market continues quiet and without special feature. There are no changes to quote. The bean market is still very firm and further advances in view of the continued unfavorable reports from the bean districts would be no surprise. An advance as soon as the demand for the shanty trade begins is regarded as a certainty. There is nothing special to note in hops. Prices are firm at a slight advance. Offerings of honey continue large but buyers are not anxious to make very extensive purchases. The situation is commented upon at length below. The market for evaporated apples is weaker. Manufacturers are selling at 1c. less for carlots than one week ago and jobbers' prices are weaker in consequence. The potato market is firmer owing to the limited offerings now coming forward and to the reports of rot. In flour the situation is still unchanged. Offerings of feed are limited and prices are firmer. Some changes will be noted in our grain quotations. Oats, corn and wheat are a little easier on the local market. Considerable improvement is reported in the egg and butter markets. Prices are steady at advances. The situation is commented on at length in another column. There is a lack of confidence on the cheese market and prices, although unchanged at time of writing, are weaker. The demand for hog products continues good. Prices of baled hay are firm at a slight advance given below. Ashes, hides and raw furs are dull and prices are unchanged.

GREEN FRUITS.

The market has been rather quiet during the week owing to the unseasonable weather prevailing. The warm weather militated against the demand for apples being sustained and prices eased up. Prices were considerably in buyers' favor. Export shipments have been very heavy, about 54,000 bbls. leaving this port last week out of a total shipment of 127,000 bbls. from all ports. Heavy receipts of grapes caused a sharp break in prices, from 8 to 10c. per basket. We quote :

FISH.

Trade is good. Fresh cod, haddock and halibut are scarce this week owing to warm weather and the re-appearance of the dog-fish on the fishing grounds. Haddies are also affected by these conditions. Brook trout are off sale as the close season for same commences October 1. Oysters are commanding good attention. The first lot of shell Malpecques made their appearance here last Friday, September 25, about 120 bbls. coming by express. Prices ranged from $7.50 to $10 per bbl. Since then other shipments have arrived by freight and these sold at $5 to $7 as to quality. Dealers say the demand for oysters is very great. We quote :

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS.

There are no quotable changes since our last report. The market continues very firm, but buyers are holding off in the hope that prices will soon be lower. It would seem that there are no substantial grounds for this hope. Reports from the Canadian bean districts and also from Michigan are very unfavorable. Moreover when the demand for the shanties begins, as it very soon will, another big advance may be expected. This was the case last year. We quote :

Choice prime, per bushel	2 00	2 10

Choice, small lots	1 75	1 80
Ordinary, carlots	1 40	1 50

HOPS.

The local market is firmer. New Quebec and Ontario hops are quoted at 25 to 28c., according to quality. Some holders are asking 30c. for their new hops. We quote :

HONEY.

There have been considerable offerings of honey during the last week but buyers are rather conservative about making purchases as they have not forgotten their experience of last year. Dealers and producers are asking prices considerably higher than the buyers care about paying. The prices quoted by "The Canadian Grocer" are jobbers' prices to retailers. In many cases producers are holding out for prices as high as those quoted. One buyer reports a scarcity of buckwheat honey. The imports of West India honey have some influence on the situation. Last season was the first year that West Indian honey was sold on this market, and as we understand the price obtained was satisfactory, it is only reasonable to expect that the shipments will be largelv increased this season. The quality, although not quite equal to Canadian clover, is sufficiently good to warrant attention from the trade. We quote :

Strained, white	0 07½	0 08
Clover and basswood	0 08	0 08½

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

EVAPORATED APPLES.

The market is weaker than at the time of our last report. Offerings of new stock in carlots are reported at ½c. less than last week. We quote the following jobbers' prices :

New, in carlots	0 05½	0 06
New, in jobbing lots	0 06	0 06½

POTATOES.

Offerings during the last week have been very limited and prices have advanced slightly in consequence. On Bonsecours market farmers have been asking 65c. per bag of 90 lb:, but merchants assure us that they have not yet found it necessary to pay more than 55c. on track here. The stock arriving by cars has been very poor, the quantity of rotten potatoes being very considerable. It is claimed that when dug the potatoes were sound and that the rot is due to the heat of the cars. Merchants are paying 55c. per bag of 90 lb. and they are selling in jobbing lots at 65c. and in smaller quantities at 70c.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

FLOUR.

There are no quotable changes since our last report. The new crop Manitoba flour has not yet commenced to move. The demand for all grades continues steady as the stocks in second hands throughout the country are small. Prices continue to be well maintained and, as last week, we quote as follows :

Manitoba patent.	....	4 80
" first bakers'	....	4 50
" second bakers'	3 90	4 10

FEED.

Offerings are limited and the demand continues good. In consequence, prices are firm. An advance in Ontario bran will be noted. We quote :

ROLLED OATS.

The demand still continues limited and jobbers report a very quiet market. We quote :

Rolled oats, in bbls.	3 80	3 85
" " in bags	1 85	1 90

GRAIN.

On the local market there is an easier feeling and prices of wheat, corn and oats have sagged slightly. The decline in oats is due to considerably increased offerings from the country coupled with the fact that the bulk of those coming forward are only inspecting No. 3 and are rejected. The demand for these grades at present is very limited owing to the scarcity of ocean freight room. Other lines are quiet and as transactions are few it is difficult to give exact quotations. NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

Office of "The Canadian Grocer,"

St. John, N.B., Sep. 28, 1903.

BUSINESS in St. John continues very good and the trade look forward to a large and profitable Fall business. There are two lines which seem of particular interest just at present, beans and cheese. There have been advances in price and the goods are hard to get. Cream of tartar in the original market shows quite a decline. Local prices are still high as stock on hand was bought at full figures. In spice, cloves are of interest. There has been a marked advance. New Valencia raisins have been received. In dried fruits firm prices will rule this Fall. In markets as a whole, firm prices rule. Flour in particular has shown a large advance.

OIL.

In burning oil shipments are becoming quite general. The season of large consumption is here. Prices are low and little change is expected. Paint oils continue very low, that is in linseeds. Higher values are expected. Turpentine is unchanged. There is a fair trade in lubricating, which is firm. Cod oil is scarce and very firm. Non-freezing cod liver oil is extremely high, the Newfoundland product being over four dollars per gallon and Norway slightly higher. We quote :

SALT.

In Liverpool coarse salt quite a large cargo is to hand. Last week, as usual, while landing, prices were somewhat shaded, to save expense of storing, but the market is very firm. In fine salt the feature of the season has been the difficulty in getting the Canadian stock. We quote :

CANNED GOODS.

There is little of particular interest. The chief feature is the high prices of corn and tomatoes, particularly of the latter. The pack is said to be very light. Dealers who bought at low prices from outside packers, are interested in knowing what part of their order will be filled and they rather regret having sold at as low price as they have. Fruits are held quite firm. Oysters are still high. While there is a fair supply of salmon, prices are higher. The outlook is for a large profit. Sardines will be a light pack. We quote:

DRIED FRUIT.

The market is firm. Some new Valencia layers have been received. As usual, for first stock, prices are high. While rather lower prices will rule for later shipment the market is firm. The feature of the market is that practically no California raisins are being bought. Malaga loose were advanced this week. Their seeded are also higher. Currants are rather higher. New evaporated apples are offered, but little is doing. Prunes are quite low. New goods will cost rather higher. Onions sell quite freely. Prices are rather easier. The crop is reported light. FISH.

The market in all lines is very firm. A strange feature this week was the large quantity of sardine herring caught in our harbor and shipped to Quebec and Eastport. There is no doubt the wholesale killing of the small fish is the cause why pickled and smoked are so scarce. Dry fish are firmly held. There is little doing in fresh fish. MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, September 26, 1903.

TRADE continues very steady with a good volume and few fluctuations in price lists. Difficulty of getting supplies is still complained of and there is not much hope that freight congestion will experience any relief until after navigation closes.

Winnipeg will, this season, have Spanish seeded raisins instead of California. The Malaga fruit, put up in the neatest and daintiest of 1-lb. cartoons, is expected on the market early in the season. The price is much lower than the California seeded raisin. The seeded raisin trade in the West is very heavy and growing every year so that cheaper fruit and better is a matter of first importance to the trade. The introduction of the seeded Spanish fruit is looked upon with great favor by the trade. Spanish Muscatels, 3 crown, are also being imported to take the place of the high-priced California fruit.

Evaporated apples are high and firm, being quoted by some houses at 7¼ to 7½c. The demand is good. No new goods are as yet in and offerings of the same do not indicate very low prices. It is thought here that the heavy export trade in apples may have the effect of keeping up the price of both evaporated and dried fruit.

California evaporated fruits are very firm, old stock is quoted at 11c. and new at 12c. and even a fraction over. Peaches are not yet quoted for new goods.

GREEN FRUIT.

The annually recurring Ontario fruit question is with us again worse than ever. The packing of Ontario fruit this year has been simply scandalous. One house lost $500 on three carloads, and as the irate sufferer remarked, "and after that Ontario people wonder why we buy California fruit, I will never have another pound of the Ontario stuff in my place." A carload of tomatoes unloaded the other day had numbers of grass green tomatoes mixed with others that were over ripe. The entire car had to be repacked for handling. Ontario plums continue to arrive dumped into 17-lb. baskets, and two quarts of waste is no uncommon thing in one basket. When it is considered that it is a common thing to buy 6 or 8 cases of California packed fruit and not find a single decayed plum, the contrast cannot help being painfully evident. As per usual, some of this Ontario stuff is being auctioned at low prices. Tomatoes and plums have been particularly unsatisfactory. Basket pears have come forward in good shape and are in excellent demand at 50c. per basket and 60c. for the best. Grapes are coming forward in pretty good shape, though the first shipments were in rather mouldy condition when they got here. One great trouble with the Ontario fruit is that frequently it is not properly routed and there is great delay in consequence. This week a car was routed to come in by the Great Northern from St. Paul. It would naturally be supposed that any fruit man would know that the C.P.R. will not accept cars from that road from points where it has a competing line. Nevertheless the careless shipper routed the car that way and it was sidetracked at the boundary for two days, was hauled into the city by the Canadian Northern, and what the unpacking will reveal has yet to be stated. It seems useless to write about Ontario fruit. If the fruit men would give proper attention to packing and shipping their fruit there would be a splendid trade for them in the West. As has been said so many times before, the women of the West prefer Ontario fruit when they can get it in decent condition, but they will not buy it in the shape it comes forward now, except at very low prices. Concord and Niagara grapes are quoted at 35c. but are expected to be lower next week.

American peaches are very scarce and $1.25 is being quoted for Washington and Iowa, and the market is practically cleared up. At the present time it looks as if the peach season was almost at an end. The demand is heavy and several cars could be disposed of readily.

NOTES.

Mr. Petrie, grocery buyer for The Hudson Bay Co., has left for his usual Fall purchasing trip to American and Eastern cities.

Foley, Lock & Larsen expect to move into their new warehouse by the end of the week. It is 100 feet square and five storeys high.

Campbell Bros. & Wilson, wholesale grocers, Winnipeg, have begun storing goods in their new 142x98 foot warehouse on Princess street although the windows and doors are not in the upper portion. The contractors are not to date with their contract but it is expected another three weeks will see the building completed. The firm is also erecting a three-store warehouse of generous capacity at Calgary, where they will carry a full stock for western distribution.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 25, 1903.

WHETHER they have enough provisions in the Yukon or not, the vast bulk of the Winter supplies for the season of 1903-4 have gone forward. The White Pass Railway Co. are not accepting any more goods for northern shipment, with the exception of perishables. These will have to take their chances of getting down the river, though there is no blockade at White Horse. Recent advices from that point say that all goods arriving over the railway from Skagway have been sent on down the river in a very short time.

The grocery trade of the city and province has manifested a good deal of interest in the naming of prices by the packers' association of Eastern Canada in the various lines of their goods. Of course, naming the prices, as everyone knows, does not deliver the goods. So that despite the prices having been named that does not affect the present position of shortage. The prices have only been named on open orders. As usual, orders were taken early in the season at open prices. The trade merely gave orders according to their requirements, knowing that the prices would be fair to them as to others in the business. But long ago the goods were withdrawn. Corn and tomatoes are not offering at any price.

Just as soon as the prices were named some of the trade repeated orders in tomatoes and corn, one leading wholesaler giving an order by wire for 3,000 cases additional to what he had ordered on open prices. But no acceptances have been received so far. It is not at all likely that any will be given until the end of the season, for the pack is not equal to the orders and the stocks will have to be sorted up before the second orders on lines withdrawn can be considered. Then it may be that there will be no stocks in these lines over orders already accepted.

While not actively interesting the trade at the present time, owing to the fact that the fresh fruit season is still in its height, the position of the trade in canned fruits from Eastern Canada on this market is one which presents some features of interest. As one leading wholesale manager says, the freight rates from Eastern Canada so far as canned fruits are concerned should be revised. At present they are $1 Summer and $1.05 Winter. These figures should be reduced to at least 70 and 75c. A difference of 30c. would make a great change in the position of the eastern fruit packers.

At present California sells large quantities of the fruit consumed in this market, the principal reason being that with cheaper labor and cheaper fruit the goods are put up there more cheaply than in Eastern Canada. Duty paid, the goods can be laid down here less than from Eastern Canada. The short haul, and that by steamer, makes the freight a very light charge. An example or two might be given: Peaches, which are cheaper this year, were last year quoted at $1.86 per dozen from California, and that is the 2½-lb. tin which the California packers put up entirely. The price quoted on the 2-lb. tin laid down from the east is $1.78, so that it costs but 8c. per dozen more to have the 2½-lb. tin. The prices quoted by the eastern packers on the 2½-lb. tin, which they also put up, figure out even, taking in the ten per cent. discount, which no one will earn, $2.45 laid down here. This is a fair sample of the run of fruit quotations, and should show clearly that the east cannot hope to sell the canned fruit consumed here on such a basis.

Markets on fresh fruits this week show but slight changes. There are larger quantities of crab apples being offered than usual, and prices are lower. The Italian prune, which is a very strong favorite here, is now being marketed liberally by local growers. Supplies hitherto have been from the neighboring State of Washington, as our crop has been slow to ripen.

* * *

The position of the canners' combine in the trade is an unenviable one. By their quotation of a special cut to those who signed a cast-iron contract to purchase exclusively from the combine, the new organization practically guaranteed their ability to fill all orders. There is no other deduction to be drawn, and that is the way the trade here looks at it. But the immediate withdrawal of two leading lines of canned vegetables from the market early in the season and before the first prices had been named was a confession of weakness which had in it the inherent element of failure. More recent developments, as noted in "The Grocer's" columns, would indicate the prospect of the combine failing to accomplish their ends, in any event. But it was not necessary to have had more evidence of weakness than inability to fill orders.

* * *

The general feeling among the wholesale grocers here is one of disgust at the attempt to carry through this huge monopoly. It has had a very unsettling effect on the trade generally, for such staple lines are not easily dispensed with or replaced. The sentiment of many of the merchants is that they would buy in California in preference, cutting out the eastern supplies entirely, if conditions permitted. Were it not that prices open at rates which will make it difficult for the California pack to compete, there would be large orders placed with San Francisco brokers. But in tomatoes, at any rate, prices in California have been kept up by heavy orders from the Eastern States, so that the stocks bought in the east will be able to sell lower. Not until the supplies of Canadian tomatoes are sold off will the California goods be competing. Then the demand for the goods will simply bring them in. A change in conditions which would permit of selling in competition with Eastern Canada would see the trade here taking the goods from California almost exclusively.

As to the prices themselves, the trade does not consider the first quotations unfairly high if the discount is taken into account. Tomatoes opening at $1.05 with 35c. freight, are, of course, somewhat higher than last year, when the opening price was 95c., but the discount would bring it back to almost the same figure.

The quotations on corn and beans of 90c., less the discount, would compare favorably with last year, while standard peas, orders for which are still being accepted, are fairly reasonable at 87½c. It is very evident, however, that the prices have been so framed that it means taking the list as it should be and adding ten per cent. to compel coming into the combine's exclusive control.

Produce markets are quiet now, there being nothing but local consumption to cater for. The northern shipments which were very heavy have all gone forward, with the exception of some orders for Atlin, which will have a little more time to get in than the down-river shipments.

Local fresh eggs are very scarce yet and prices keep up. The stocks of eastern eggs are light, too, receipts of last week only having served to fill the orders for the north. Manitoba is out of it as far as sending eggs this season. Ontario seems to be slow in filling orders. The price is firm and, though not advanced, will soon rise if scarcity keeps up. Local fresh bring 40c. per dozen retail.

Butter stocks are not too well represented. Shipments of dairy from Manitoba and the Northwest, which have been fairly well kept up, have shown a tendency to fall off. Creamery stock is not plentiful, there being a certain amount held back for storage by the Manitoba and Northwest creameries, now that the weather will warrant it.

Local flour quotations have shown advance of 30c. per barrel in the past few days. Weather and crop reports from Manitoba account for the rise, which, of course, originates there, as all our consumption is of Manitoba and N.W.T. flour

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

Let us Mill Our own Wheat.

IN a recent number of THE GROCER we published an editorial under the above caption, pointing out the advantages of grinding our wheat at home and exporting the finished product, flour, instead of exporting in the grain.

The Brandon Times, discussing the same subject from a slightly different aspect, emphasizes the same points which were made in our editorial.

The Times concludes a two-column article as follows :

Summarizing, it might be said that the export of wheat is injurious to the farmer,

1. Because by the export of unground wheat he loses cheap food for his stock and the manure therefrom.

2. He has to pay the freight on the by-products (bran and shorts), to the foreign market.

3. Local mills occasion the employment of men who require all classes of farm produce and so the home market is extended.

It is injurious to the milling industry,

1. By reason of the loss of business.

2. By reason of the foreign miller having bran and shorts to dispose of which has been imported at the lowest cost.

To the transportation companies :

1. Because it means congested freight with all the accompanying disadvantages.

2. In the loss of traffic of by-products resulting from the milling of wheat.

3. Loss of traffic of by-products resulting from mixed farming.

4. The loss of traffic the year round, including the dull seasons.

An injury to Canada because it means

1. The stunting of an industry which is carrying our name to all nations.

2. The loss of wages to thousands of laborers.

3. The loss of wider civilization which comes from the development of an important industry.

Will our Wheat go West?

Mr. Thomas Thom, of the Liverpool Corn Exchange, has estimated this year's shortage in the world's wheat available for British needs at 36,000,000 bushels. Canada's average export of wheat to Britain during the past six years was only 6,000,000 bushels. Mr. Thom contends that any deficiency can scarcely be supplied from Canada, and declares that the natural outlet from Manitoba and Alberta is the Pacific Ocean, to meet the increasing bread wants of China, Japan and the Philippines. Mr. Thom thinks that those who expect sufficient supplies from Canada's Northwest are doomed to disappointment.

South Africa Wants our Wheat.

Canadian wheat is wanted in South Africa, according to a report received by the Department of Trade and Commerce from Mr. J. G. Jardine, Canadian Commissioner. He states that there are several extensive wheat grinders in South Africa at present and additional ones are putting in mills all the time. They have to import all the wheat they require. Mr. Jardine says he will be pleased to place Canadian wheat dealers in communication with these millers in South Africa.

The Western Grain Crop.

THE earlier estimates of the Western wheat crop seem to have erred on the side of modesty, and threshing returns all show more liberal returns than were anticipated. The estimates issued by the Northwestern Grain Dealers' Association on August 15 were as follows :

	Area Under cultivation.	Estimated Yield.	Aver. Per acre.
Wheat	3,123,663	57,163,032	18.3
Oats	1,101,333	40,418,921	36.7
Barley	381,135	10,900,461	28.6
Flax	64,639	43,348	11.9

It is now believed that the yield will run over the 60,000,000 mark, and it is even predicted that it will equal the record of last year of 65,000,000 bushels. At the conservative estimate the present prices of 70 to 72c. for No. 1 and No. 2 Northern will yield about $42,000,000, or $6,250,000 more than last year.

It is more difficult to calculate the values of the coarser grains, but the following estimates have been made for the purpose of comparing this with last year, which may be regarded as approximately correct :

1902
Wheat, 65,000,000 bushels at 55c	$35,750,000
Oats, 46,000,000 bushels at 40c	13,950,000
Barley, 12,500,000 bushels at 30c	3,750,000
Flax, 500,000 bushels at 75c	475,000
Total	$53,925,000
1903
Wheat, 60,000,000 bushels at 75c	$42,000,000
Oats, 40,500,000 bushels at 21c	8,500,000
Barley, 10,900,000 bushels at 35c	3,850,000
Flax, 750,000 bushels at 80c	600,000
Total	$54,950,000

The effect of the much-talked-about storm do not appear to have been much more than slightly reducing the grade of the grain in the district affected, and, all in all, the outlook for the West is brighter than ever.

To fix the Grain Standards.

An Order in Council has been issued appointing the board to choose the samples of wheat and other grains grown east of Port Arthur to be the standards by which inspectors may be aided in their work. The board are W. D. Matthews, chairman ; Thomas Flynn, J. L. Spink, C. B. Watts and John Carrick, Toronto ; James Dunlop, Hamilton ; John I. A. Hunt, London ; Charles B. Esdaile, Montreal ; and William Brodie, Quebec. The examiners meet on October 5, at 10.30 a.m., at 41 Front street west, Toronto.

Opening for Cereals in France.

THE southern part of France produces a yellow maize of a very inferior quality, says The Dixie Miller, used for feeding farm stock. Small quantities are ground for table use, but as the meal is poorly made and turns bitter eight or ten days after leaving the mill, it is not only not a popular article of diet, but is the cause of a prejudice against maize as human food.

The fine quality of American granulated yellow-corn meal is much appreciated in a very limited circle. The people generally know nothing about white and yellow corn meal, hominy, samp, and hulled corn, valuable and cheap articles of diet. The introduction of "johnny-cake" to the French public might prove a profitable departure.

What is said of maize for table use may be said largely of oats and wheat. Small quantities of Scotch oatmeal find their way to the larger towns, but, being generally unknown, it is not popular. Crushed or broken wheat is not used at all and has hardly been heard of.

Advance in Price of Bread.

THE French and English bakers' associations of Montreal, at a meeting, held on the 17th ult., decided to advance the price of bread one cent per half loaf, to take effect September 21. This action was found to be imperative owing to the strong advance in flour—70c. per barrel during the past six weeks—and it was considered impossible for the

But as staple as sugar. Tillson's Rolled Oats are without a doubt the favorite cereal in Canada. This distinction has not been won in a fortnight. Grocers everywhere know how persistently we labored to make our oats the cleanest, whitest, flakiest cereal ever produced. We were never content with "Good" and "Better." "Best" was our goal. Nobody discredits the Tillson quality, though some envy it.

bakers under the strong advance to make even a living, to say nothing of a profit. "There is at present a great scarcity of wheat," said an official of the association, "owing probably to the greatly increased exports. The bakers have been afraid to buy owing to the possibility of prices dropping with the arriving of new wheat. Though the new wheat is coming in now, prices are still maintained, leaving the majority of bakers with practically no flour. The big milling companies will sell but small quantities at a time. With flour at $4.80 per barrel and the cost of making bread much dearer, it was absolutely necessary for the bakers to make the advance."

The Kingston bakers decided on 25th ult. not to raise the price but to lessen the size of the loaf. As a result the 2 lb. loaf has been reduced to one pound and a half and the four-pounder to three.

The Ottawa bakers on 23rd ult. raised the price of 4-lb. loaves from 10 to 11c. and of 2-lb. loaves from 5 to 6c.

A Dry Bread Diet.

MR. T. Thatcher sends to Public Opinion a letter which he entitles "Dr. Hardcrust," in praise of a diet of dry bread with a well baked crust. He himself recently walked 40 miles in one day with no more sustenance than twopennyworth of "hard, dry brown bread crusts," and that at the age of 64, and was none the worse for it, but the reverse; while a holiday in which he ate the normal quantity of good "food" resulted in nightmare and subsequent depression. Naturally a man praises the food which agrees with him, but whether or not a crust of bread be as wholesome for others as it is for Mr. Thatcher, there is no doubt that this plea for food that demands some effort in the eating is not untimely in an age when everybody seems to want to have their digestion done for them. For some people these pre-digested foods cause an absolute hunger dyspepsia. There is nothing in them to "stay" the stomach, and the sufferer would probably be better, instead of trying to find something still more digestible, to put himself for a time on a diet of brown bread and haricot beans. Not that either of these is indigestible, though some might think the latter was. It is, indeed, difficult of digestion, but when digested the food value is high. The really indigestible things are those which have little food value, and make the stomach work for no profit; but if it be worth the effort, a food that is difficult of digestion has a certain merit of its own, in that it exercises the organs of digestion. The gourmet dyspeptic who resented the simple strengthening fare we speak of might console himself with the thought that when his digestion was thus strengthened, he would be able to enjoy the pleasures of the table more than ever before, but if in the process of treatment he grew to enjoy the simplest foods, he would be none the loser.—Confectioner and Baker (London).

Flour Blending.

MIXING and blending of flour is an old practice, says The Bakers' Review. Quality and uniformity in bread are the things most desired and to insure these, blending is necessary. Blending is done by hand appliances and power driven machines, but few bakeries are equipped for doing the work effectively. That flour blending is of the utmost importance to the baker is undisputed and since it is well worth doing, it follows that the better the mixing and blending is done, that much better will be the general results in baking bread.

Of the many properties in flour, bakers are alive principally to those of color, strength and stability. To produce bread that shall combine, among other good qualities, good color, lightness, and flavor, it is necessary to mix and blend two or more flours. As a rule the baker has his own favorite or particular blend, which his experience has demonstrated produces the bread best suited to the demands of his trade. While the virtues of blended flours are well known, few bakers realize that the operation of blending is a work of nicety and exactness, requiring judgment, care, and thoroughness. He has to deal with flours of varying shades of color and degrees of strength; sharp and soft, old and new. He must know the proper proportions of each kind to use for the several blends required in his business, and his feeders should be readily adjustable to varying proportions and be capable of feeding automatically, regularly, and without variation. The mixing should be done thoroughly and the flour rebolted, purified, and aerated. The bolting breaks up lumps and scalps off foreign substances, such as strings, fluff from sacks, and other extraneous impurities.

Discoveries of Vienna Bakers.

THE Association of Vienna Bakers, by the way, have unbroken records back to 1452, which show how they have striven to improve processes in milling and in bread making, says a contributor to Good Housekeeping. By them was made the first advance in the art since Pharaoh's time, the sour dough or leaven being then given up for the new beer yeast in the making of wheaten bread. It was called "the sweet fermentation," and although such an improvement on leaven, it was still the mixed and somewhat uncertain agent that at times balked our American housekeeper. In 1845 this association offered a prize for an ideal yeast that should work rapidly "and produce only alcohol and carbonic acid gas." This prize was taken two years later by Adolph Mautner, and the "press hefe" was immediately manufactured and put in use. It was exhibited in Paris in 1867, and at the Vienna Exposition of 1873 it received the grand diploma of honor. By that time the sale had reached three and one-half million pounds yearly, and yet the United States had hardly heard of it. This example illustrates how a well organized band of artisans alive to the importance of using scientific results may benefit the world by bringing a better product into general use.

Mautner's method was very simple. He grew his yeast in a mixture of coarse flour and water, to 18 parts of which one part of malt was added in order to rapidly convert the starch of the flour to sugar. The yeast which rose as scum was skimmed off and washed repeatedly with cold water. The water was then drained away and further removed by pressure; thus resulted the ideal yeast, easily portable, keeping an indefinite length of time at a low temperature, and containing nothing but the pure yeast. One cubic inch of the yeast as then made contained twelve hundred million yeast plants. Rapidly acting on the starch of the flour, it turns some of it into sugar and this into alcohol and carbonic acid gas, which distends the elastic gluten of the flour and fills it with gas bubbles before any other organisms can work. It is thus seen that the amount and quality of the gluten present in flour is of great importance; hence the value of every advance in milling that shall yield a larger proportion of this principle in its integrity.

It is interesting to know how similar is the method used in our best kitchens to that given by Uhl, the Viennese court baker, to Mr. Horsford, who was special commissioner from the United States to the exposition of 1873 in Vienna:—Eight pounds of flour, three pints of water, three pints of milk, one ounce of salt, three and one-half ounces of yeast. A sponge was made of a part of the flour and the rest worked in later.

The "Force" Food Company have been deluged with applications for the "Be Sunny" buttons, the free distribution of which was mentioned a short time ago in THE CANADIAN GROCER.

As a result of the baking demonstrations given at the Osaka Exhibition an enterprising Japanese baker has had an equipment made exactly the same as that used at the Canadian Exhibition, and is now carrying on business.

The Pennsylvania Railroad has explained to the satisfaction of a committee of citizens why it refused the milling-in-transit privilege to the $1,000,000 Atlantic Flour Mills Co. at Philadelphia. The railroad claims that the location of the plant necessitated unusual expense in handling cars both in and out, and that, with a reasonable additional charge for this extra work, it stands ready to grant the privilege to the new company.

I MET old man Beebe the other day—Lem Beebe who keeps the general store at Way Corners. I happened to be passing through there—I go pretty nearly everywhere you know—and he hailed me almost before I got within bowing distance.

My Goodness, but he's a talker; said he knew me in a minute from my picture in the papers, and asked about the news of a half a dozen towns that lay behind me before I'd had time to seat myself on the cracker barrel he reserves for his guests.

I guess he doesn't do much of a business, from the looks of things. When I asked about it he said "Trade isn't as good as I expected this Fall, but then I didn't expect it would be."

I haven't been able quite to figure this out yet.

"Do you sell much 'FORCE,' Lem?" I asked.

"Don't handle it" says he; "I priced a lot of them foods and decided that 'Eet-it-kwik" was about the profitablest one in the lot, so I stocked up on that. There's 100 per cent. in it for me. Ever try it?"

"Never heard of it, Lem, but then there's a new food out every hour nowadays—trying to look like 'FORCE,' or sound like 'FORCE,' or taste like 'FORCE'—About the only thing they can't do is to make a food that sells like 'FORCE.'"

Now I'm pretty busy, cooking breakfast for two-million people every morning—and cooking enough so's there'll be some left for lunch and supper—so I couldn't stop to talk "FORCE" with him.

Anyway, I knew he'd read in this paper what I have to say on the subject, for I guess THE CANADIAN GROCER finds its way even into Way Corners.

It does seem to me as if the common-sense way of looking at the Flaked Food proposition is this:

The sales of "FORCE" represent nearly three-quarters of all the Flaked Foods sold in Canada and in the United States. The rest of the sales are divided among forty-odd other foods—which may resemble "FORCE" but are not "FORCE" by a long shot. The fact that Wheat and Barley Malt enter into their composition doesn't make them the same as "FORCE" any more than the stone and lumber used in your house make it like the house up the road.

When three-quarters of the public agree on preferring "FORCE" and keep on preferring it after two years of breakfasts and after trying all sorts of imitations, the Lem Beebes of the grocery trade are going to have a hard time trying to substitute "Eet-it-Kwik" or any other make-believe package.

It's bad business pushing an article your customers won't re-order without coaxing, no matter what the profit on it.

It's good business to push the goods that sell easiest, for it means a bigger business, a better total profit—and the satisfaction of your customer is worth something, isn't it?

Think it over and "Be Sunny."

Timely Hints and Suggestions.

A Boissevain, Man., Grocery.

TO place successfully in one building groceries, boots and shoes, and men's furnishings, is a very difficult task. No two go together without great care, and the placing of the stocks so that a disastrous mixture will not result, requires a deal of thought and taste. In the store of McAllister & Robinson, interior and exterior views of which appear on this page, the difficulty has been very well overcome, and a neat interior arranged.

The size of the store is 70x26 feet, built three bricks thick, with a two-inch hollow space. The two front and the side windows are 8x8 and the entrance sides 5x8. The interior front is devoted to men's furnishings and boots and shoes. Thirty feet from the back three steps go up to the grocery section. These steps, in addition to making a line of demarcation, rise over the cellar, which had to be dug very shallow on account of the dampness, and allow good depth. As yet the store is only one storey high, but a good concrete footing, and the shape of the first storey, allows the addition of another storey when desired.

McAllister & Robinson's Store, Boissevain, Man.—Exterior View.

An up-to-date stock of all three lines has been put in. Mr. McAllister went to Manitoba in 1880 and, after farming near Boissevain for many years, moved into the town and, together with R. McCausland, bought out the grocery business of J. P. Gravis & Son and commenced business under the name of McAllister & McCausland. Last January they dissolved partnership, Mr. McCausland retaining the business. Mr. Robinson was formerly a dry goods merchant in Goderich, Ont., for over twenty years, and during the last two years was in St. Catharines, Ont. The firm name is now McAllister & Robinson.

McAllister & Robinson's Store, Boissevain, Man.—Interior View.

Thus it is the firm includes two men, fitted by experience to handle well the lines carried, and the new store is the result of a determination to have the best. The interior is very neatly kept, each line being strictly retained in its own section, and sufficient space being allowed to separate thoroughly one section from another. The shoe section is provided with two settees, both near the front, where the light is good, and the space behind this is taken up with a neat pile of trunks and valises. Rugs in this section serve to give an air of comfort and impart an air suitable for a shoe section.

On the men's furnishing side there are two counters—one long and one shorter. Ties are shown in a glass case, and the shelves are neatly stacked. Seats are provided for the use of customers.

The grocery section is filled with groceries at the back and on one side up to the shoe department. On the opposite side there is a small office, 5 x 7 feet, and at this end a door admits to the storeroom behind. Neat counters without unnecessary decorations are good features, and paper rolls use small space, but fulfil all requirements. The arrangement of the cans and bottles on the grocery shelves and the stacking on top show a desire to have everything strictly neat and tidy in appearance.

INTERNATIONAL GROCERS' EXHIBITION

CANADA seems to be making a good impression at the International Grocers' Exhibition, in progress at the Agricultural Hall, London.

Owing to the neatness of the Canadian patent butter boxes, says a despatch, and the attractiveness of their canned goods labels, Canadian goods for the first time are largely used for ornamentation on nearly every stand in the hall. Thus the exhibition seems almost all Canadian. The whole display is private enterprise, showing that the general trade in Canada is at last alive to the splendid openings here. Seeing there are 120,000 British grocers' shops, every one of which will be influenced by this display, the results will be of the highest importance to Canada. Cape Colony buyers are much in force buying Canadian produce.

FRANCE USES MORE FOREIGN FOODS.

During the first six months of 1902 France imported $79,534,000 worth of food products and $70,502,000 worth for the same period of this year, an increase of over $[illegible]. The food products exports of France for the first six months of 1902 amounted to $57,997,000 and $65,000,000 for the same period of 1903, showing a decrease of over $7,000,000 for the half year. France's internal conditions make that country necessarily a large consumer of imported foods. Besides her own populace that country has to feed 500,000 tourists per year. The loss of France's foreign trade is largely due to the senseless and ill-advised action against the use of borax, which is necessary for the hygienic export of food stuffs.

GROCERIES AT ST. LOUIS FAIR.

THE grocer who takes an active interest in his business will learn something to his profit by making a study of the exhibits and methods designed for his benefit at the World's Fair in St. Louis in 1904.

In the great Palace of Agriculture will be displayed everything edible. Not only will the finished product be shown, but so far as practicable the process of manufacture will be revealed by model factories in full operation inside the great structure. Thus the grocer may by actual demonstration learn all about the making of the goods he sells.

The Agriculture Palace covers nineteen acres. It is the largest exposition building ever erected to contain a single department. It is 1,600 feet long and 500 feet wide. It stands on a hill overlooking the entire exposition, surrounded by magnificent gardens and is the centre of many of the World's Fair's famed beauty spots.

The manufacturer of one of the well-known cereal breakfast foods has obtained space within the Palace of Agriculture for the installation of a complete plant. The grain from which the food is made is taken as it comes from the elevators, and before the eyes of the visitor is carried through all of the processes and is packed in cartons and displayed on shelves and in piles in a model grocery within the palace walls in such a manner as to be the more certain to attract the attention and arouse the interest of the prospective buyers. The breakfast food manufacturer does not stop with this, but has young lady demonstrators who prepare the food in many dainty forms and serve it appetizingly free to visitors.

Chocolate in its various forms is another commodity sold by the grocery every day. A chocolate manufacturer has been granted space to install a complete factory. Here the chocolate beans, grown in South America, are baked like coffee, ground and the mixed chocolate made into toothsome cakes.

The machinery used in the preparation of chocolate is massive and heavy. The beans are ground through several mills before they are thoroughly pulverized.

A model bakery will also form a feature of the food exhibit. Power moving the complex machinery will be supplied by electricity, and the heat required for baking will be supplied by the same agency. Biscuits, cakes, crackers and bread will be mixed, kneaded and rolled and baked in full view of the visitor.

A model dairy will be in operation. Butter will be made, and in this connection the best methods of keeping and handling it will be shown. Refrigerators adapted to the purpose and how to maintain the proper temperature at a minimum cost, form valuable features of the display.

Several confectionery firms have made arrangements to install plants for the manufacture of all kinds of candies and sweetmeats.

Sugar will be treated in the most comprehensive manner. The sugar cane from the south and the sugar beet will be taken as they come from the fields and the visitor may follow them through the various processes and see the pure white sugar as it comes from the refineries. He may also see the various grades of molasses and coarse sugars produced.

Scores of busy factories will be in operation in the Palace of Agriculture and light will be shed at every step on how the thousands of food products that are daily sold and consumed are made.

Here also will be displayed the finished products. Wines, beers, liquors and distilled spirits will form a part of the exhibit in this section of the Palace of Agriculture. To show the processes is scarcely practicable here, and the displays will be mainly in bottles, casks and packages. The exhibitors in seeking to make their displays pleasing to the eye will so arrange their wares that the visiting grocer may gain new and valuable ideas about window and shelf decoration.

CRANBERRY CROP.

THE cranberry crop in Plymouth county and on Cape Cod is not turning out even as well as expected, says New England Grocer, and the first prediction was that it would be less than last year. Abel D. Makepeace, the largest grower in the world, at first estimated his crop at 14,000 to 15,000 barrels, but now, since going on to the bogs, he places the crop at still lower figures. Those who thought they were going to pick 500 barrels say they do not expect to get over 250 or 300. It is the same in every locality.

The reasons for this poor showing are the early frosts, which damaged the blossoms more that the growers thought. Then came a second set of blossoms in many places, and the berries from those blossoms are now green, and in many places have been nipped by the frosts which came during the early part of the week. There were frosts on three successive nights recently, and that on the last night was the hardest of all. At 12 o'clock, when the sky was clear and the moon full, the thermometer sunk below 30, the lowest point known for several years during the September moon. As a usual thing, the growers fear the October full moon, but very seldom do they have to reckon with the September full.

In going over the bogs, the pickers are finding the greater part of the berries on top of the vines. Those underneath are the green ones from the second set of blossoms. The price offered, $5 per barrel, has not been raised since the first picking, but the growers are looking for a sharp rise within a short time.

Not a bad testimonial, is it?

We have already said that this product was the laundress' best friend.

We must not forget either that the Emperor of China has given his august protection to CHINESE STARCH. This national product is not only intrinsically valuable to him, but his hundreds of millions of subjects use it the same as the Imperial Court. This fact is not, it will be admitted, a bad testimonial. That CHINESE STARCH is made in China is a true fact, and as the CHINESE STARCH of the Ocean Mills is made under the same recipe, this high and mighty endorsation applies to the Canadian make as well.

In China every family looks after and takes pride in its linen, as starching and glacing is easy work—CHINESE STARCH makes it so. A trial will do it with your trade as well—the cost is trifling—10c. per package.

Insist upon getting a case from your jobber and please your customers with a starch so highly recommended as CHINESE STARCH. The genuine bears the name of

THE WALL PAPER TRADE

WALL PAPER IN THE GENERAL STORE.

IN the ever growing tendency towards the enlargement of stock, and the increase in lines carried by the general store, wall paper should take an important place in the list. The departmental store of the city is but a mammoth imitation of the general store of the village, but, by means of its large capital and well-paid officers it has broken away from its parent and adopted schemes and departments that cannot be handled in the smaller store with its individual owner, combined proprietor and manager, and limited demand.

In every departmental store the housefurnishings department is considered and treated as one of the most profitable, and altogether satisfactory, in the store; in the smaller store of the town or village, where this department is provided for, its success is a matter of self-congratulation. The disadvantages, however, which the smaller store has to overcome, are the limited capital available, the extent of competition, and the demand—obstacles which are not, as a rule, in the way of the larger store of the city. When a city departmental store commences business the housefurnishing department is always complete—carpets, curtains, art furniture, crockery and chinaware, and wall paper—but the smaller store of the town usually commences with one or two lines at a time and gradually branches out as the business and the demand increases.

Pattern 1484. An effective wall paper manufactured by Staunton's, Limited, Toronto.

Wall paper as a paying line to carry, and to specialize on, has so strongly attracted the attention of certain merchants that in the city very many stores carry nothing else, and are among the best paying businesses. And yet in spite of all these, the departmental store wall paper trade thrives and prospers and appears to suffer little from the specializing merchant. A town seldom supports a store confined to the handling of wall paper, and this fact provides for a successful trade in the stores dealing in other lines—dry goods, stationery, grocery and hardware. All of these are finding money in wall paper, but none seems to be better adapted to making the most of it than the general store, particularly the one which already has a housefurnishing department.

Wall paper is essentially a housefurnishing. The man who needs carpets or curtains is, in every case, interested passively, if not actively, in wall paper, and can be counted upon as one on whom wall paper talk will not be wasted. The housefurnishing department in its busy Spring season is entered by hundreds of prospective customers, and almost every one of them is, at the time, buying wall paper for some room. The big advantage which a general store has over any other store which includes wall paper in its stock, is that wall paper can be talked and shown to every one buying Spring furnishings, whereas in the other stores the Spring specialties are either of no account or are not at all connected with housefurnishing, thus not affording an opportunity for the display of the wall coverings carried. This is a very important consideration too, as a customer very often objects to being forced to look at goods which are not in his mind at the moment, and will not spare the time.

The general store with a little rearrangement may discover a corner that can be utilized for the display and storage of wall paper. With the exception of the stationery store it is the cleanest, as a rule, of any of the stores that handle wall coverings, and in the display of such decorations cleanliness is a telling feature in the surroundings.

Closely connected as it is with the other lines in housefurnishings, the general store that carries wall paper does not seem to have gone out of its sphere in laying in such a stock, and the feeling is abroad that such a man should know something about this branch, and therefore be able to buy to the best advantage and have on hand the most suitable styles. If a men's furnishing store should attempt to deal in wall paper people would realize that the proprietor was departing from the sphere where his experience amounting to anything, and would know that an unsatisfactory stock would be shown.

A DEPARTMENT FOR RETAIL MERCHANTS.

England's Little Bill for Tobacco.

THE British public are greatly increasing their consumption of tobacco. A careful calculation shows that the average consumption of a smoker is 2½ ounces per week. Mr. C. A. Penn, in The Soverane Herb, says that about 56,000 tons of tobacco are imported into Britain every year, and of this 36,000 tons are consumed. Of this only 1,100 tons are foreign cigars, for the pipe is England's smoke.

We are told that about 200,000,000 cigars are smoked annually in the United Kingdom, Landon alone consuming 1,000,000 a week. The lowest estimate places London's daily bill for tobacco at £15,000. "During an average life," says Mr. Penn, "from seventeen to sixty years of age, it is estimated that a pipe smoker expends £100 on tobacco, a cigarette smoker £330, and a cigar smoker £800, an average of, say, £350 per smoker." These are startling figures. "But what," asks the same author, "are these sums in comparison with the solace to saddened hearts, the comfort to wearied bodies, and the courage and joy to harassed souls and saddened spirits? The golden shekels, weighed against the balmy smoke, fly upwards to the beam; they are nothing in man's sight."

Snuff Statistics.

A TALL, thin man, with a bunch of whiskers sticking straight out from his chin, bought a five-cent package of smoking tobacco in a bustling cigar store yesterday, says a New York exchange, and after looking about the place for some minutes said:

"Boss, ain't you got no snuff?"

"Barrels of it," replied the cigar clerk. "How much worth do you want?"

"How much worth?" repeated the stranger. "How much worth? Why, I only meant a pinch. Up in my town we're not so confounded close. Even old Si Tompkins, who charges a cent for the loan of his Sunday paper, has free snuff on his counter. You folks here in York are meaner'n gar broth."

"Well," said the cigar clerk, "we can't afford to put free snuff on our counter. We have ten customers a minute to serve, and we keep open 24 hours a day. That means that 14,100 men come in here every day, or 100,800 a week. I might say 156,400 a month, or 5,256,000 a year. As we've been in business here for ten years, we've served 52,560,000 persons, each of whom if entitled to a pinch of snuff, say half an ounce, would have consumed 26,280,000 ounces, or 1,642,500 pounds, which at $1 a pound would be $1,642,500. That isn't much, but we really couldn't afford to give it away, for the reason that we pay a dollar a minute here for breathing, and you may not believe it, but the rent of the space occupied by that cuspidor near the door amounted in ten years to $1,800, and—"

"Here," interrupted the countryman, "gimme one of those five-cent packages of snuff. I'm always willin' ter help a poor man."

And as he wandered out he was heard to murmur:

"One million seven hundred thousand, nine hundred and forty—what did he say? Gee whiz! I'd rather live in the country."

Pius X. Smokes.

Pius X. smokes, and enjoys the distinction of being the first Pope to make use of tobacco in this form, says a writer in The New York Tribune. Both Leo XIII. and Pius IX. were wont to indulge in snuff, but no pontiff has ever until now been known to smoke cigars, like the present occupant of the chair of St. Peter. Indeed, his pronounced fondness for the fragrant weed is a subject of no little concern to those prelates and dignitaries of the court of the Vatican who regard any breach of etiquette as something akin to a sin. For among the Italian clergy, smoking by those in holy orders is rather discountenanced, and when Pius X. was Patriarch of Venice, his cheerful disregard of their ethics in the matter was wont to disconcert the clerical members of his household, their uneasiness being increased by the fact that the particular brand affected by the Patriarch was that of an exceedingly cheap and to foreigners somewhat unpalatable cigar bearing the name of that Italian statesman, Cavour, who, while regarded as the founder of the unity of Italy, is looked upon at the Vatican as the originator of that policy which culminated in the loss by the Holy See of its temporal possessions.

These facts go to confirm the assertion frequently made since the last conclave that Pius X. is the most human Pope who has occupied the chair of St. Peter in modern times, and will tend to create a fresh bond of sympathy between the Holy Father and the numerous members of the Roman Catholic clergy in this country who see no harm in seeking solace and innocent enjoyment in a cigar, or even a pipe. It will certainly relieve their minds to know that there is no danger whatsoever of Pius X. reissuing the bull against the use of tobacco sent forth by Pope Urban VII.

The Fatuity of Fame.

The great statesman sat alone in his study, gloomily thoughtful. He had just returned to his home after delivering a speech which had been thunderously applauded. His reception had been indeed an ovation, but it brought no joy to him.

"What's the use of it all?" he murmured, with a sigh. "Men think that I am happy because I have youth, fame, vast wealth, and a dazzling political future. Ha! ha!

"Little they know of the anguish of the man who, having these things, is denied the one fond desire of his heart.

"Youth! That will soon be gone. Wealth! A turn of the market may carry it away. Political future! Who can tell what changes a year may bring forth?

"Fame? Ha! ha! What does my fame amount to? The greatest statesmen of the country hang on my words when I speak, and I sway the multitude as I please. But, fame, real lasting fame, my one all-devouring desire is denied me.

"No manufacturer has given my name to a five-cent cigar!"

Grandas Manana Cigars.

At a meeting of The Granda Hermanos y Ca., manufacturers of the "Grandas-Manana" cigars, held at the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, last week, the following officers were elected: N. Michaels, president; Morris Michaels, vice-president; and Max Boronow, sec.-treasurer.

The report of the business for the first quarter of the fourth year of the existence of this company is more than satisfactory, the sales of these three months showing an increase over the first six months of the previous year, or, in other words, an increase of over 100 per cent. What seemed to please the directors more than anything else was the statement made by Mr. N. Michaels that the special train carrying the Manufacturers' Association to the coast was equipped with the highest grades of "Grandas-Manana" cigars.

Tobacco.

"When life was all a summer day,
And I was under twenty,
Three loves were scattered in my way—
And three at once are plenty.
Three hearts, if offered with a grace,
One thinks not of refusing;
The task in this especial case
Was only that of choosing.
I knew not which to make my pet,
My pipe, cigar, or cigarette.

"To cheer my night or glad my day,
My pipe was ever willing;
The meerschaum or the lowly clay
Alike repaid the filling.
Grown men delight in blowing clouds,
As boys in blowing bubbles,
Our cares to puff away in crowds,
And vanish all our troubles.
My pipe I nearly made my pet,
Above cigar or cigarette."

Henry S. Leigh.

As it Should Be.

On Monday last one of the leading wholesale tobacconists of Toronto informed THE CANADIAN GROCER that one of his travellers had been telling him a few days previously of the large number of grocers who had lately made the addition of a cigar and tobacco department, and what an important change it was already making in his sales in his territory.

In addition, he had also expressed the opinion that the time was not far distant when the great bulk of the cigar and tobacco business would be placed through the medium of the grocery trade.

As to our own opinion, leaving the straight tobacco dealer out of the question, we cannot possibly understand why in many towns and villages the druggist and the barber should be allowed to grasp at a profitable line of business which properly belongs to the retail grocer.

German Tobacco.

Government reports show that there are in the German Empire 120,000 tobacco planters who, in 1901, cultivated a plot equal to 1,700,000 acres, and raised 40,000,000 kilograms of tobacco. The value of this crop amounted to 34,000,000 marks ($6,800,000). Germany imported from foreign countries during the year tobacco valued at 120,000,000 marks ($24,000,000). The bulk of German tobacco is raised in Baden, where the crop averages a value of 15,000,000 marks. Bavaria's crop usually averages 4,000,000 marks, while that of Alsace-Lorraine averages 3,000,000 marks. Practically every district in the empire raises more or less tobacco, as shown by Rudolstadt, which raised 2 kilograms, valued at 1 mark, and Schleswig-Holstein, where a crop of 32 kilograms, valued at 23 marks, was raised.—Smoker's Magazine.

DEPARTMENT OF ADVERTISING SUGGESTION AND CRITICISM

NOTE—Herein are discussed the principles and practice of advertising. Subscribers are invited to send Mr. Lydiatt specimens of their newspaper and other advertising, for the purpose of review in this department. Address care of Department of Advertising, CANADIAN GROCER.

Edited by
W. Arthur Lydiatt,
TORONTO.

It isn't Always the Advertisement that is Wrong—Oftentimes it is a Poor Business Back of the Ad.

IT makes no difference what the size of a business may be, experience has proved that generous advertising will bring a crop of sales as surely as generous culture will bring a crop of grain. There is no guess work about it.

There is just one condition—the advertised thing must be worth the attention of buyers.

For most retail businesses there is but one perfectly satisfactory advertising medium—the daily newspaper.

No matter what the nature of a community is, if a newspaper has a chance at the people it sorts them out as certainly as if they were put through a mental sieve.

The progressive, enterprising, wideawake, money-spending, life-enjoying citizen, wherever he is, is always hungry in the head—he wants his paper.

The pinch-penny, slow-going, yesterday man, the too-poor or the too-mean-to-buy, are seldom in possession of a newspaper.

Put an advertisement before the readers of your local paper and you take the cream of the population. You go straight home to the people who can buy and who are ready to buy.

That's one side of it. The other is the merchant's side. He, too, must be wideawake. There's no use in lugging a hidebound business in a moss-grown way before such a constituency.

The public likes a pusher. People always like to go where crowds are. It is human nature. A busy merchant never lacks for trade; an indolent one seldom gets his share. If you are not naturally energetic, cultivate energy. Give the public the impression that you are a hustler, and that you have firmly made up your mind to get your share of its trade—and as much more as possible.

Keep your eyes open to what is going on around you and your ears ever ready to hear the demands of the times. Lead—don't follow. Keep your store as up-to-date as you can, and never fall in a rut.

Don't stick to the same old methods and the same old stock all the time. Something new is the breath of life to the retail store—freshness in goods and methods is the best of all advertising.

Always be doing something new. If you try you can instil push into everything you come in contact with. No storekeeper is fair to himself or does justice to his business who doesn't push six days in the week and fifty-two weeks in the year.

Don't sit calmly down when the "dull season" comes and fold your hands and wait for "better times." Make the better times during the dull seasons. The modern merchant knows no dull seasons. He realizes that lulls in trade are apt to come during the late winter and summer, but he is ready for them and always has plenty to keep him busy in the slackest parts of the year.

He mixes a little more energy with his business, appropriates a little larger per cent. of his profits for advertising and looks the slack times in the face. This man has no time to complain and is too busy to realize that others are having a hard pull. Usually he never experiences a "dull season." He is a pusher, therefore he is successful.

There is a tendency to magnify the art and darken the mystery of advertising. An advertisement in its best form, most wisely placed, is simply the result of an exercise of common sense, based on experience.

A really good advertisement of a worthy article never fails when put in a reasonably proper medium. The newspaper-reading public responds with marvellous promptness and unanimity to any deserving advertisement. Even if it is crude in form, awkward in expression, ragged in get-up, so there's a streak of honest thought and good intent running through it, all else is overlooked.

Advertising Deeds.

One of the first acquaintances I made through the medium of this department in THE GROCER, L. W. Myers & Co., of Stratford, have sent me a copy of a small store paper which they are now publishing, and also a specimen of the kind of newspaper ads they are running.

They tell me that they feel sure the store paper is going to prove a very profitable medium — this being the second number they have issued—and they have accordingly cut down their advertising in the local papers, to make up the cost of publishing the paper, I presume.

This idea of the store paper is a dandy one for any grocer. While it hardly takes the place of the newspaper advertising, it makes a very effective and profitable adjunct thereto.

It is a pretentious form of circular, going more into detail regarding the goods advertised, advertising more goods, and advertising them regularly--every month, or every week, just as often as the paper is issued.

I have a few specimens of grocers' store papers on hand and will be glad to send one to any of my readers who would like to get a few ideas along this line. Enclose postage when writing.

The paper L. W. Myers & Co. have sent me is a four-page affair, size about 7x9. It is interesting so far as it goes, but it doesn't go far enough. I would have you either say more about what you do advertise, or else advertise a greater variety of goods.

Maintain the idea of the "news" paper throughout—make it as chatty and newsy as possible. Don't confine it entirely to quotations on goods, or talk about special sales. You might give a little talk on how things are going in the store—take for example "With Everybody's Publishers" which appears in Everybody's Magazine each month.

Keep an eye open for new wrinkles in cooking—have a scrap book for these, and when you come to advertise your different lines of goods occasionally mention a way to prepare them. Better still to have a regular column devoted to new receipts and ask your customers to contribute to it. You might even have a prize contest in order to secure receipts—but you'll have to work the details of such a scheme yourself.

Regarding the typographical make-up—I would devote the first page to your editorial talk as you have done in this issue, perhaps including a Table of Contents which would bulletin your "specials." Have all your headings the same style type and the paper will present a much neater and more uniform appearance.

Make mention of all the new things as they arrive at your store, treating such things as news.

I would suggest using a column for each department of your store—or as much of one as is required, confining all mention of such goods to that part of the paper. I notice in the paper before me that you announce on the first page that you are going to instal a regular provision counter in a week or so, and on the last page you advertise a "provision department." Why not have connected these two items in some way in one column?

I also notice that the paper is not dated, though it supposed to be published monthly.

Altogether this is a fairly good little paper, and I have no doubt the next issue will be much better.

The newspaper ad. is in line with those last sent me and is reproduced herewith.

THE MANUFACTURE OF FLAVORING EXTRACTS.

By Dr. V. C. Price.*

THIS is a commercial age. From all sides, sneeringly, energetically, and triumphantly, it has been proclaimed until it has become a truism. Commercialism rules, and why not? History should find in this age as much of honesty, integrity, knowledge, and progress as in any other age. It is impossible to refrain from reiterating the power for good which is in the hands of the members of the National Association, or confirming the evidences of advancement already made. The manufacture of food products, one of the greatest, if not the greatest, factor in commerce, has been elevated by this association until it has come to be classed by many as among the professions. This is as it should be. Humanity depends upon its food. It advances mentally, physically, morally, according to what it eats. Its progress is virtually in the hands of its food manufacturers. They should feel the want of their responsibility, the honor of their calling, and be made to recognize the power to legislate against ignorance, carelessness, and dishonesty.

A few years ago the flavoring extract was considered a luxury, used by a few. To-day it stands as one of the household necessities, entering largely into the daily diet. In no food product is there a greater chance for adulteration than in extracts, or a better opportunity for the skill and knowledge of a chemical expert. Much has already been said concerning the manufacture of flavoring extracts. Much remains to be said before the subject is exhausted. What seems most necessary just now is to point out the possibility of their manufacture, as pure with an increase in strength, wholesomeness, and economy, and their manufacture, as adulterated, which renders them injurious to health, unwholesome, and impure. A safeguard to the manufacture of the pure article, is a careful discrimination between the words, "extracts," "essences," and "mixtures," or an insistence upon the proper labeling so that "those who run may read."

Lemon extract, which, with vanilla, forms the staple extracts on the market, is one with which every housewife is conversant, and yet few appreciate or understand the extreme care required in extracting the essential oil, a distinct commercial article. The oil is extracted from the peel by two methods—the hand or cold process, which is both expensive and laborious, and the distilled process, which liberates the oil by rubbing the lemons on a coarse grater, after which the peel is distilled. In the first or hand process, it takes one thousand lemons and two days hand labor to extract one pound of oil, but the result pays, for the essential oil obtained has the natural yellow color and a powerful lemon odor. This, in combination with the peel, makes a strong, effective extract without the necessity of aniline or coal tar dyes for coloring purposes, or oil of turpentine for cheapening, for in strength there is economy.

In regard to vanilla, the first consideration is in the bean. There are, as you know, vanilla beans and vanilla beans, differing in quality and commercial value. There is no flavoring extract in the market more delicate, agreeable to taste, and universally used than vanilla. Good extract is impossible unless the best Mexican vanilla beans are used, properly cured and aged, the flavor and natural color extracted, and allowed to stand for at least one year to mature. A distinguishing feature of the pure, true extract is that it has not a decided taste or smell, as compared to the strong rank smell of extracts made from the inferior bean, or vanillin or coumarin substitutes. It does not deteriorate with age but is improved by it, which is impossible to the fraudulent articles called "Vanilla."

Casting aside all ideas of a business or sentimental purpose, looking from a purely hygienic standpoint (and here business and sentiment are allied) the people of this or any other country are best protected by an insistence upon pure food products, by the condemnation or extinction of fraudulent articles, fraudulently labeled; by the careful investigations of skilled commissioners to prevent deception and fraud, and by legislating, if necessary, against the use of all and every deleterious ingredient in food products.

*Paper read before the National Dairy and Food Convention.

PROFITABLE READING.

The following letter just received at this office is self-explanatory:

BRANDON, Man., Sept. 15, 1903.

Editor CANADIAN GROCER:

Dear Sir,—Speaking of THE CANADIAN GROCER to one of my customers in Pincher Creek, he told me that by reading it last year he was enabled to save three hundred dollars in the purchase of his canned goods.

Wishing that publication every success.

Respectfully yours,

W. T. BAIRD.

BREAKAGE IN FRUIT JARS.

Editor CANADIAN GROCER:

Dear Sir,—Re breakages in fruit jars. This commodity, which, during the past few years has had an enormous sale, is one that in the majority of cases returns no profit to the grocer, as between the cutting of prices and breakages on the railway there is nothing left for him. The railway companies claim the packing cases are so fragile they will only take such goods at the owner's risk, but say that whenever the shippers see fit to enclose such goods properly packed they will then assume the liability. Would it not be far better for the retailer to pay a little more for the fruit jars and have them come in good order than submit to the horrible loss he is now sustaining?

CITY TRAVELLER.

THE BAILEY BROOM CO.

The Bailey Broom Co. is the title of a new company in Kingston, Ont., manufacturing brooms. W. R. Bailey, who retired from business some years ago, re-enters the field, taking up the interests of the old W. Bailey Co. and combining with Lee & Hugh, who have been in the same business in Kingston. The company acquired The Imperial Oil Co.'s site and are erecting a modern brick factory and are installing it with the latest and most improved machinery throughout. They will have some 6,000 square feet of floor space for manufacturing, and storage houses for twenty-five car loads. It is interesting to note that the name "Bailey" has now been associated with brooms for over half a century. The company intend later to go extensively into the manufacture of wood handles for export trade.

To Manufacturers' Agents

THE CANADIAN GROCER has enquiries from time to time from manufacturers and others wanting representatives in the leading business centres here and abroad.

Firms or individuals open for agencies in Canada or abroad may have their names and addresses placed on a Special list kept for the information of enquirers in our various offices throughout Canada and in Great Britain without charge.

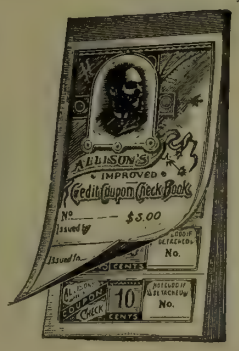
A Two Cent Mistake



Don't amount to much in any business, but the striking point is that a clerk is just as liable to make a mistake of $2.00 as he is of two cents, and a few mistakes like this would pay for enough of Allison's Coupon Books to last a year or more. With these books mistakes are impossible.

IF A MAN WANTS CREDIT

for $10, give him a $10 Allison Coupon Book, charge him with $10, and there you are. No trouble at all. If he buys a plug of tobacco for ten cents, just tear off a ten-cent coupon—that's all. And so on for all his purchases up to limit of the book. NO PASS BOOK. NO WRITING. NO TIME LOST. NO KICKING. There are other Coupon Books, of course, but why not have the best? A SELLING ARTICLE.

We have had an exceptionally large demand for our bird seed of late, due to two causes.

1. The low price at which we have been able to sell it, notwithstanding the advance. 2. The quality, which has always been the same.

This Kind Of A Man

does not jump at conclusions—he investigates! He is not "a penny wise and pound foolish," you can rest assured of that. He is not misled into buying new things said to be "just as good" as the old standard, time-tested articles of trade.

And as he buys, so he sells and builds up confidence among his customers. You'll find a clean stock in his store—nothing unsalable, because "Standard goods are best to handle."

COX'S
Powdered Gelatine.

The new Gelatine is new in form only. It is Sparkling Gelatine reduced to powder, and retains all its old, good qualities, with this addition, that it dissolves instantly in warm water.

The "Griffin" Brand
California Fruits.

There is but one grade of quality in the "Griffin" brand, the highest. And this refers to the growing, the picking and the packing, which is all done right at the vineyards and orchards on the Pacific coast. You get the "Griffin" brand always at first hands—there is no tampering with the fruit en route, no short weight.

P. Codou's
Macaroni and Vermicelli.

The name P. Codou stands for the very best quality of Macaroni, Vermicelli and fancy pastes. It is not alone because only the very best quality of Russian Wheat is used, but because of the long experience and consequent great skill of the makers. They are standard goods.

THE MOP THAT THE SUN NEVER SETS ON.

Self-wringing Mops and Mop Cloths

Much, very much, depends upon the cloth with which the S. W. Mop is fitted, as to whether it attains its highest value, or, for that matter is, of any value. One of our regular standard Cloths would redeem, in a large measure, a very poor imitation of our Mop; but 'twould be better business acumen to insist upon getting the regular, true

"Tarbox" Self-wringing Mop

with its full value and completeness and thereby give your customers value received in the start.

It means better results in the line and greater confidence between buyer and seller. A very large percentage of the better class of jobbers of kindred articles handle our goods.

"Sterling" Brand Pickles are pleasant and profitable.

On every occasion where the finest pickles are wanted, give your most exacting customer "Sterling" Brand pickles. The grocer, who makes these pickles and a fastidious customer acquainted, can depend on a future demand. A twentieth century maxim is: "Sell good goods," and these pickles are distinctly good.

Subjects Being Discussed at Ottawa

Written for The Canadian Grocer by a Member of Parliament

ON three occasions during this long session now drawing to a close has the Angel of Death brought his summons to members of the House of Commons, calling them to leave consideration of the affairs of that country which they loved so well and to cross forever the Great Divide, beyond which lies infinity. The Hon. Donald Farquharson passed away at his home in Prince Edward Island, Pierre Raymond Leonard Martineau at a hospital in the City of Ottawa, whither he had been removed for the purpose of an operation, and Henry Cargill within the very Parliament Buildings themselves, distant but a few yards from the Commons Chamber in which he had just been participating in debate.

However strenuous may be the attack in political warfare at Ottawa, the fact remains that but few animosities are carried past the Commons' doors, and that the best of good feeling obtains among the members, regardless of politics. An Englishman once described the Home Parliament as "the best club in the United Kingdom," and, so far as esprit de corps is concerned, the greatest of the Canadian legislatures would, we fancy, take no second place in a similar comparison. Hence it is that when some member is stricken down, the sorrow is not confined to his political colleagues, but is felt by all, irrespective of party.

Of Mr. Farquharson the Federal members of Parliament had but little opportunity to judge. Elected at a bye-election in 1901, he came to Ottawa with a certain amount of glamor attaching to his title of ex-premier. What's in a name? asks Shakespeare. Much, we venture to assert. A man comes up from a small province where he has held a position to which attaches some high-sounding title, and most certainly performances are expected from him in proportion to the name of the office he has borne. This was exactly the case with Mr. Farquharson. Members did not stop to consider that the whole province of Prince Edward Island has a population not much more than half that of Toronto. The Mayor of Toronto may come to Ottawa, and his presence does not create a ripple, but the Premier of Prince Edward Island—why, that's a different thing. And so it was that perhaps a little too much was expected of Mr. Farquharson. In his own province he had enjoyed a long and honorable career. Elected to the legislature in 1876 he had sat without a single defeat until 1901, when, as we have seen, he entered the Federal arena. Arriving here when that session was well under way, he showed his good sense by silently observing the new surroundings in which he found himself. As what proved to be his last illness detained him at his home during the present session, it is evident that he only participated actively in Dominion affairs for the session of 1902. During that time, owing to ill health, he was unable to take a prominent part, though his work in committees, and where anything pertaining to his own province came up, demonstrated his sound sense, and was a pledge of future usefulness, had he been spared longer to serve his country.

Mr. Martineau, like Mr. Farquharson, made his debut at a bye-election, entering the House in 1898, and being re-elected thereto by a substantial majority in 1900. Mr. Martineau was a man of fine education, having studied at the Quebec Seminary and Laval University, obtaining from the latter the degree of LL.D. While he was well versed in English, he had not acquired that intimate acquaintance with it which makes speaking in that tongue easy, and, as a consequence, he did not often take part in the debates. He was, however, a very constant attendant, and was possessed of a common sense on which his Quebec colleagues were often glad to draw. As a man Mr. Martineau was an example to all. For years he was a constant sufferer from a disease of the foot (it was the amputation of a part of that member which resulted in his death), and yet he was never heard to complain. He stuck to his post with a fortitude which was little less than heroic, and when other men would have remained in more comfortable surroundings, he limped to his desk and sat there through his pain, doing the duty for which his electors had singled him out. The reward of such men is not in medals and military decorations, it is in the respect and sympathy of their fellows, to whom their self-sacrifice is known, and both sympathy and respect Mr. Martineau had in overflowing measure.

And lastly we come to Mr. Cargill, whose taking off was so sudden as to lend an air of tragedy to the occurrence. With 16 years service in the Commons to his credit, he sustained but one defeat, that of the general election of 1891. Though a Conservative in politics, he was one of those men whose personality won for him many Liberal votes, and he was a living example of the fact that given a thoroughly good candidate the previous political complexion of the riding in which he stands is not of so much importance after all, for he won his seat from the enemy, and, having won it, held it, as we have seen. Mr. Cargill was a typical Canadian. His parents were both of County Antrim, but he himself was born and educated in Canada, and there he lived and died. A man of business shrewdness he scored a financial success in life, and Bruce will miss him in this as in many other ways. Unlike so many successful money-makers, Mr. Cargill's character never seemed to harden, and on both sides of the House he was looked upon as one of the most genial of its members. In debate he was ever practical and sound; not eloquent, but always listened to, and never anxious to speak unless he had something to say that was really worthy of attention. In all the times he addressed the House he was never known to utter an unkind or cutting word. His politics were entirely disassociated from personalities. In "Les Miserables," Victor Hugo describes the interchange of remarks between the dear old country priest and the Emperor Napoleon. In Paris on a visit, the former very naturally regarded the Emperor keenly in passing him on the street. Napoleon, ever observant, turned upon the cure and said: "Sir, you behold a great man," to which the priest replied, "And you, Sire, a good one." There is indeed a difference. Mr. Cargill could not be called one of the world's great ones, but he was something better, he belonged to that choice minority, the good.

The sixth annual meeting of Charities and Correction, which has been held in Ottawa during three days of last week, has not excited so much interest in members of Parliament as could be wished. The object of this society—the care, particularly for children, fallen women, drunkards, and generally for all not incorrigible criminals—is such as should enlist the best efforts of all, and, inasmuch as its members will sooner or later apply to Parliament for legislation to put their views in force, some study even at this stage would not be thrown away. While all the members of both Houses were cordially invited to be present, less than a score availed themselves of the opportunity, but, perhaps the fact that public business has been rushed at last, with a view to ending the session before the next one begins, is a reason for the slim attendance of our public men.

In every large city particularly—and the cities of Canada are fast becoming thickly peopled—we have a number of children born into the world under conditions so fearful that from the moment of their birth their future prosperity is almost an impossibility. Illegitimates, disowned by parents who seek to avoid the shame of their immorality, and the children of drunken parents, constitute the large majority of this class. What shall be done with these? The question is not easily answered. To establish homes commodious enough for all the unfortunate children would tax the resources of any government, and might be an encouragement to illegitimacy, as the old Bastardy Laws of England were found to be. A better course would seem to be the working of some such society as this, with branches everywhere, through the agency of which children might be found homes, where amid healthy and moral surroundings they would have a chance to grow up to something better than the lives to which their parents had fallen.

A yet more difficult question, and one quite as pressing, concerns the treatment which should be accorded to habitual drunkards. England is seeking to grapple with this question, and no doubt Canada will profit by her experience, but, in the meantime, there seems no way of restraining these unfortunates, except by imprisonment in the common gaol, and even this cannot be resorted to unless the drunkard is so violent as to break the laws of order. We have asylums for the deaf, the blind, the insane, and we have hospitals for the sick, but there is, as yet, no place for the dypsomaniac. True, there are private asylums, operated for gain, to which those who are in the dread clutches of alcoholism may be sent, but to these a man must go of his own free will. The law allows no forcing. As a matter of fact drunkenness begets stubbornness even in the weakest natures, and it is next to impossible to get one of these afflicted ones to submit to what might prove to be a cure.

In this regard the Criminal Code certainly needs amendment. Personal liberty is the great heritage of our people, but even personal liberty must be curtailed for the good of the many. Machinery should be provided by which relatives could force unwilling drunkards to go to some place of confinement. In many cases there are those who would willingly put up the necessary money, but the refusal of the delinquent to allow his freedom for self-indulgence to be interfered with, frustrates all plans made for his betterment. The gaol is no place for a man who is disorderly through drink; that is when his disorder is no more than a minor offence. Fancy a man under a fit of temporary insanity who breaks property or who comports himself in a disorderly manner, subjected to the disgrace, disgrace not to himself alone, but disgrace to all his respectable kinsfolk, of being confined in the common gaol. We would cry out against such harshness. And yet scientists have pretty well demonstrated to us that intemperance is an inherited tendency, and that the victim of it is not so culpable as we once believed him. Such cases should and must be controlled. Let us have, we repeat, a law which will enable those of sound mind to control the freedom of one who through drink is no longer compos mentis, and we will not only save from a drunkard's grave a large percentage of those who go down to it, but we will lessen the suffering of the innocent by one half. In these days of strong materialism we think too much of those projects which produce mere wealth, which, as we are so fond of putting it, develops the latent resources of our country, and too little by far of the regeneration of those who have fallen by the way.

During the last two or three weeks a number of petitions have been presented to Parliament from many different parts of Canada praying for delay in the matter of the National Transcontinental Railway. The Liberals have openly avowed that these petitions were not spontaneous, but were inspired from Ottawa by the Opposition, who furnished petition blanks to trusted partisans in the constituencies, for the purpose of political effect. A very unpleasant incident to all good Canadians, who have the credit of Canada at heart, was the point of order raised by Mr. Marcil, of Bagot, with regard to these same petitions. It seems that a number of petitions from his county had been presented to the House by Mr. Morin, member for Dorchester. Mr. Marcil took occasion to examine the signatures, and was much surprised to find the names of a number of electors whom he had thought favorable to the project. He noticed, however, that these signatures were in the same hand-writing, and thinking that the matter required further investigation, he wrote to a friend in that part of Quebec, who thereupon interviewed a few of those whose signatures were suspected of being unreal. Mr. Marcil asserted that his friend had had time to see but a small number, but from these he obtained a statutory declaration that they had not signed the petition, or authorized the signing of it, and that far from opposing the immediate action of the Government in connection with this matter, they heartily endorsed the same.

In other words the names were proved to have been forgeries, and quite naturally suspicion is now cast upon the other petitions and signatures, many of which are undoubtedly genuine.

The incident created a most unpleasant sensation. Mr. Morin honorably acquitted himself of all complicity by asserting that he had handed in the petitions because asked to do so, and that he had absolutely no personal knowledge of their contents, except, of course, of their tenor. Other members of Parliament have since examined petitions from their ridings, and several claim to have discovered similar irregularities. The incident is probably not yet closed. It will be a lesson, if a severe one, to members not to lend the credit of their names to any document which they present to Parliament, unless first convinced of its bona fides. If the House is not to be protected against such dastardly deeds, what faith will it put in future in widely-signed petitions? This matter should be taken up, and the perpetrators of the outrage should receive the punishment awarded to forgers under our criminal law.

INQUIRIES ABOUT CANADIAN TRADE.

Among the recent inquiries at the Canadian Section of the Imperial Institute, London, S.W., were the following:

1. A Manchester firm asks to be placed in touch with Canadian producers of graphite of good quality.

2. A house in Newcastle-on-Tyne wishes to hear from Canadian manufacturers of closet seats.

3. A firm of linen manufacturers is prepared to appoint as resident Canadian agents a firm possessing both experience and connection. References required.

The names of the firms making the above inquiries can be obtained on application to the Editor of THE CANADIAN GROCER.

The Ripening of Cheddar Cheese.

TO ascertain the extent to which carbon dioxide is formed in American cheddar cheese during the process of ripening, and also to learn the nature of the chemical changes that give rise to the production of this gas, experiments were made with two cheeses. One was quite normal, while the other was made from milk containing chloroform and kept under aseptic conditions. In the normal cheese, carbon dioxide was given off continually, decreasing in quantity after twenty weeks, but still being formed after thirty-two weeks. The total amount produced was 15,099 grms., equal to 0.5 per cent. of the fresh cheese. Only 0.205 grms. was given off by the chloroformed cheese, practically none being found after three weeks. In the case of the latter cheese the carbon dioxide evidently came from that present in the milk; but the carbon dioxide yielded by the normal cheese was due to the decomposition of lactose by lactic acid organisms and to the respiration of living organism in the cheese. The only active agents present in the chloroformed cheese were—lactic acid, lactase and rennet pepsin. These, under the conditions of the experiments, were unable to form ammonia or secondary amino compounds with production of carbon dioxide, as the presence of the chloroform could not account for this inaction, the results suggested that in the normal cheese some agent must have been present which was not present in the chloroformed cheese, and that this extra factor was of a biological character. —Jour. Soc. Chem. Industry.

To Keep Shippers out of Hams.

IN answer to a request for a formula and method of painting covered hams so that skippers will not get in, The Butchers' Advocate recommends the following method:

To yellow wash from 1,200 to 1,300 hams, use the following quantity: 500 pounds powdered barytes, 25 pounds rye flour, 10 pounds finely powdered chrome yellow, 20 pounds glue. To mix this yellow wash, it is necessary to have a vat 5 feet long, 20 inches wide and 16 to 18 inches deep. The glue should be soaked in water over night, and then it should be heated until it is all dissolved. The chrome yellow, if finely powdered, will dissolve readily in cold water. The 25 pounds of rye flour should also be dissolved in cold water. The glue, the chrome yellow, and the rye flour should all be dissolved in separate receptacles. The 500 pounds of barytes should be put into the vat and sufficient cold water put on to it to make a thick batter. The rye flour should also be dissolved to a thick batter, and cold water should be used. After the barytes has been dissolved, the flour should be added and then the chrome yellow, and then the glue. The glue should be hot when it is added to the mixture. A hoe should be used, and the entire batch should be mixed well. Then a steam hose should be turned into the mixture and heated to the boiling point. All this time the mixture should be worked with the hoe. The water, or condensation from the steam, will, to an extent, thin the mixture. When it is finished it should be about the consistency of thick cream, then it is ready for use. The hams should be canvassed with either burlap or muslin, and a loop should be sewn on at the butt end, so that the hams can be hung up. A rack with about 7 or 8 hooks should be arranged over the vat which contains the yellow wash. About a dozen hams should be thrown into the vat, and they should be immersed in the yellow wash, then they should be hung up, and with the hands the superflous quantity of yellow wash should be scraped off. Then an ordinary whitewash brush should be used so that the yellow wash is on the canvas evenly and smoothly; then the hams should be hung on sticks and left to dry over night, when they will be ready for shipment. If the hams are to be labeled, then the label should be put on the yellow wash right after the hams have been brushed with the whitewash brush.

THE PROVISION MARKETS.

Toronto.

THERE is a very good demand for all cured and smoked meats, especially for hams. The lumber camps are also making heavy calls on provision supplies, and stocks have been pretty well cleaned up. This applies particularly to hams. Prices are firm, with a slight advance marked in long clear and roll bacon. We quote:

The situation is much the same as at the time of our last report. For hog products of all kinds there is still a good active demand. There is beginning to be some inquiry for barreled pork for Winter shanty supplies. In the City of Montreal itself provision men and packers report a good demand for all lines, and inquiries from country points are coming in more freely. There is a slight decline in hams and bacon, which is partly caused by the weakness on the English market where the heavy Danish and home supplies are depressing prices. We quote:

There is practically no change in quotations. In fresh meats mutton and pork are easier. Barreled pork and plate beef are firm. The F. B. Dunn Packing Co. will erect a factory here and begin packing pork probably before the end of November. We quote:

CHEESE.

The market has eased off from the quotations of a week ago in face of reports from the cheese boards. On Tuesday 11 7-16 was asked, and none sold at Ingersoll, and at Woodstock, same day, 11¾ was asked, with sales at 11⅞. The week previous 12 to 12½ was paid. We also learn of a lot of 500 boxes western selling on Tuesday to be delivered at Montreal, at 11⅞c. We quote:

EGGS.

Since our last report there have been some sharp advances, which are due to small supplies and an exceedingly active demand. For strictly new-laid eggs we are told that as high as 21 to 22c. has been obtained. Selected stock is quoted at 20c., while for the ordinary common stock the price is 18c. Such a sharp advance was not anticipated last week, and it has created no little stir among the trade. The demand still continues exceedingly active, but it is scarcely probable that any further advances will be made just at present.

BUTTER.

The butter market continues strong and prices have an upward tendency. The stocks held are at least one-half less than for the coreesponding season of 1903, consequently, the demand is good and offerings are being quickly snatched up. Select Eastern Townships creamery is quoted at 22c., and the supply being insufficient to meet the demand, the market is strong. Holders expect to make a good profit out of July and August butters, which they have quietly picked up. August butters are quoted at 20 to 21c.; held, 19 to 19½c.

CHEESE.

The cheese market seems somewhat demoralized, and buyers are uncertain just what will be the outcome. The general opinion seems to be that prices will drop, but there are as yet no changes to report since our last issue. On the country boards, last Saturday, prices were weaker, but in some places, notably in Ottawa, salesmen appear to think that prices will advance and that it will pay them to hold for the expected rise. Pasture conditions continue good in most parts of the country, owing to the frequent rains, and in many sections more cheese is being made to-day than in June, which was a dry month with pastures correspondingly lean. If the present weather conditions continue, there will therefore be a much longer season this year than usual with a correspondingly increased make. Meanwhile prices locally in a jobbing way are 12 to 12½c.

MONTREAL RETAIL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

THE annual meeting of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association, was held Thursday night, October 1, at Monument National. As the election of officers of the association is always held at the October meeting, a large number of members were present. The occasion was, however, a more than usually interesting one, as there was evidently something in the air to bring out such a goodly number of members. What the occasion was, was manifested immediately after Secretary J. P. Dixon had finished reading the minutes of the previous meeting, and when President Ald. Turner had put the question of the adoption of the minutes before the meeting. It seems that exception had been taken by some of the members to the nominations for office at the September meeting, it being claimed that some were irregular and illegal on account of several absent members having been nominated at that meeting, and that according to the constitution of the association this was ultra vires. It was also intimated by one of the members (Mr. O'Brien) that it was clearly manifest to him and other members of the association that it was evidently the intention to have only French Canadians on the Board of Management, as, with exception of himself, nominated as first vice-president, there was not another English-speaking member elected. Mr. O'Brien felt that it was the desire of the members not to have any "Irish apply for office," and he withdrew his name as a candidate, and at the same time handed in his resignation as a member of the association.

Ald. Lapointe, a member of over 25 years standing, protested against the action of those members who desired to overthrow the proceedings of the September meeting, and claimed that as that meeting was a regular and properly conducted one, the proceedings could not be overthrown. Mr. J. A. Menard declared that the minutes should be adopted, as same were a faithful record of the last assembly. Mr. A. O. Galarneau was under the impression that the minutes should pass and that the older members of the association, who had failed to be present at the September meeting when the nominations were made, had not done their duty and could not blame the younger and newer members for being placed in office.

Mr. Meloche said that enough time had been lost in this discussion, and suggested that the minutes be adopted if found to be correct.

Ald. Lapointe again moved, seconded by Mr. Menard, that the minutes be adopted.

Mr. Galarneau moved in amendment, seconded by Mr. Dionne, that the minutes be adopted with the exception of the nomination of the officers.

Mr. Limoges criticized the manner of doing business in this sort of way, trying to upset the proceedings of a legally called and properly conducted meeting as that of September 3, in which the officers had been nominated and elected. He said it seemed to him that the whole difficulty lay in the fact that Mr. J. A. Beaudry had been placed in nomination for secretary against Mr. J. P. Dixon, the present secretary, who was not even an active member of the association, not being a grocer.

Mr. J. A. Beaudry, on rising, said that the society would be placed in a very unenviable position if it adopted the amendment, which was entirely out of place and had no reason for existence. He said the question of nationality was a very delicate one, and should be avoided at all times, especially in an assembly or association like the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association, where it was necessary that the members should all work for the best interests of their calling. He stated that at the last meeting Mr. Manning was nominated for 1st vice-president, but as that gentleman was not present and it was against the constitution to nominate absent members, his name was withdrawn, and Mr. O'Brien, the only English-speaking member present, was nominated in Mr. Manning's stead. Mr. J. P. Dixon, the secretary, being opposed by the nomination of Mr. Beaudry for the secretaryship, Mr. O'Brien withdrew his name. No one was to blame in the matter. Moreover the older members did not seem to take an active interest in the affairs of the society. Mr. Chartrand, who was nominated for president, had been a member for a long time, and had always taken an active interest in all that pertained to the society's affairs. Mr. Beaudry insisted that the president could not accept any amendment to the motion to pass the minutes of the last meeting, as such action on his part would be illegal. Mr. Beaudry's explanations were so clearly and logically placed before the meeting, that at the conclusion of his speech, he was loudly applauded.

The president, Mr. Turner, however, put the amendment to a vote, and it was carried by 30 to 20, many members declining to be recorded.

Mr. Beaudry again protested that this action was illegal, that the previous meeting was regularly called and properly conducted, and he could not see why members who had not taken enough interest to attend the September meeting should now endeavor to upset what was correctly and legally done. He stated that it was the association that should rule by its voice and not the president, and he asked for a reconsideration of the amendment. This was granted, voted on and the amendment killed, upon which the original motion of Ald. Lapointe was put and carried.

The new officers were then duly declared elected and same called to the dais by Ald. Turner, the retiring president. The officers for 1903-4 are as follows:

President—N. Chartrand.
First Vice-President—E. Limoges.
Second Vice-President—J. A. Menard.
Secretary—J. A. Beaudry.
Treasurer—Arthur Bastien.
Directors—E. Guilmette, J. A. Labonte, J. H. Paquette, F. Bergeron, J. B. Beaudoin, A. Landry.

Congratulatory speeches were made by retiring President Turner with best wishes to his successor and his officers. The thanks of the association were tendered to Ald. Turner and Secretary Dixon for the very efficient manner in which the work of the association had been looked after by these officers, also by the retiring treasurer.

Mr. Chartrand, president elect, on rising, was received with applause. He modestly claimed very little ability but said that having been elected he would see that what powers and abilities he possesses would be directed to the interests of the association. There were many features in connection with their trade that deserved the attention of the Retail Grocers' Association—he instanced among others the peddling nuisance as one. Mr. Limoges, 1st vice-president, who followed, made a most enthusiastic speech on similar lines, and his remarks were repeatedly interrupted by loud applause. One evil he touched upon was the selling of goods by the wholesale grocers to consumers, to "sisters, cousins and aunts, etc.," and taking business from the retail trade that legitimately belonged to them. The peddling question was handled without gloves, and the aldermen present, Mr. Lapointe and Mr. Turner, were greatly stirred up to look more closely to the interests of the trade that paid the taxes. There were over 1,400 retail grocers in Montreal whose vested interests were extensive and who paid into the city treasury something like $125,000 in taxes, besides an amount fully as large into the Provincial Treasury for license fees. It was the duty of the retail grocers of Montreal to bestir themselves and make their influence felt, and he for one would see that something was done.

Speeches by the other officers elect were made and acceptably received. From the spirit of activity manifested by the newly elected officials the association should develop very strongly during the year, and "The Canadian Grocer," as the official grocery journal of the Dominion, wishes them every success, and will be at all times ready to assist the association and its members in any work taken up in the interests of the trade.

THERE is never a dish prepared at home over which there is more worry and anxiety than the popular and intricate Plum Pudding. It is all right to claim that you know of what it is composed, when you make it yourself; but supposing a responsible house, with a reputation for honorable dealing, guarantees that the PREMIER PLUM PUDDING they make is clean, wholesome and made of the best materials, and, furthermore, agrees that if it is not satisfactory, or not as represented, they will take it back and refund your money, is it not cheaper to buy their Plum Pudding than to spend your time and patience in making some yourself? We think you will readily admit this after trying a can of our PREMIER PLUM PUDDING. It is put together by an expert who has made it a special study, and we do not believe it can be made any better by anybody.

The above argument should enable dealers to sell the first can of PREMIER PLUM PUDDING—after that it will speak for itself. To prove these claims they should try a can on their own table and they will be convinced that our claims are just. The fact that our sales of this article are ten times larger than one year ago, is conclusive proof of the appreciation which marks our efforts to give good value by turning out first-class goods.

We follow the same idea in all our departments, and dealers everywhere will find it to their interest to carry an assortment of our food products—PREMIER Specialties.

N.B.—We will mail a sample tin to any dealer who is interested, to make comparisons.

W. H. Gillard & Co. report that their first shipment of 10-lb. boxes Eleme figs now in store shows a quality and appearance above anything they have ever handled, and price low.

The Eby-Blain Co., Ltd., have received advice of shipment of their first car of new California seeded muscatels in packages. This was one of the first cars shipped from the coast this season and is expected here about two weeks ahead of regular shipments. Buyers would do well to get their quotations for shipment upon arrival.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. Rose, of the firm of Rose & Laflamme, Montreal, visited Toronto this week.

Mr. J. H. McColl, of the house of C. R. Somerville, London, was a visitor in Montreal trade circles this last week.

"The Grocer" is informed that The Cow Brand Soda Co. have serious intentions of locating a Canadian branch of their works at Toronto.

Mr. Reginald G. Beddington, formerly with W. H. Gillard & Co., Hamilton, has accepted a position as traveller with The W. H. Malkin Company, wholesale grocers, Vancouver.

Mr. P. C. Larkin left Toronto on Monday for a visit to the branches of The "Salada" Ceylon Tea Co., in Detroit, Chicago and Pittsburg. He will likely visit St. Louis before returning home.

Mr. Shaw T. Nishimura, representative of The Central Japan Tea Trading Association, is at present making a tour of the Eastern States in the interest of his company, taking in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, etc.

Mr. R. N. Sterling, formerly well-known in the wholesale grocery trade of Hamilton through his connection with the firms of Alex. Harvey & Co., and Balfour & Co., was run down by a butcher cart in Toronto on Saturday last and seriously injured.

AMERICAN SALT COMING IN.

American table salt, of very fine quality, has been freely placed with Montreal jobbing houses this week. It appears that Montreal jobbers are not in such distress as regards being able to procure salt as their western friends, and while at times shipments are a little delayed, on the whole they have been able to supply their customers fairly well.

A RECORD SHIPMENT OF PICKLES.

It is claimed that the largest individual shipment of pickles ever made in the history of Canada from the British Isles was made by Rowat & Co., Glasgow, recently through their Canadian agents, Snowdon, Forbes & Co., Montreal. The number of cases was exactly 1,946, and it goes without saying that this record shipment will long stand as a monument not only to the energetic work of the agents, but as an argument of popularity and excellence of the goods. From the Atlantic to the Pacific Rowat's pickles point a moral. What is it?

DEMAND FOR COD.

Advices from Newfoundland report an unexampled demand for cod. It appears that, owing to the shortage in the Canadian and American catches on the Grand Banks, agents of the large dealers in codfish in Nova Scotia and Massachusetts are now there seeking to purchase 100,000 quintals of codfish for disposal in their markets. The local supply is also short, so that the outlook for speedy and profitable sales is assured. In the same manner cod liver oil, which last year sold for 70c. a gallon, now brings $3, the medicinal dealers fearing an oil famine.

Windsor Salt.

You buy the best butter, why not the best Salt? Do you forget that it is the little things that count? A woman doesn't tell all she knows. Perhaps she has been trading at some other store just because she can't buy Windsor Salt of you. She doesn't say this to you, but there are a good many chances that she tells her friends.

Windsor Salt is pure, white, dry, crystalline—it is nothing but Salt. There is no dirt, no impurities in it. It is the highest quality there is or can be. Think it over—perhaps the woman who is trading elsewhere will trade with you if you sell Windsor Salt.

AFTER careful consideration of the comparative merits of the many excellent pictures submitted in our window dressing competition, decision was at last arrived at and the prizes awarded to the successful contestants, whose names are herewith announced :

1st prize—Whitehead & Huether, Walkerton, Ont.—Canned fish display.

2nd prize—John Robertson & Son, 2257 St. Catherine street, Montreal—Summer camp and tourists' supplies display.

3rd prize—Entered by Wm. H. Seyler for J. B. Berthiaume, corner St. Lawrence and Prince Arthur streets, Montreal—Red Heart tonic wine display.

Three others crowded close for fourth position, and received equal awards from the judges.

The class of window dressing exhibited was of unusual merit, and the ingenuity and artistic taste shown in nearly every window submitted was of such a calibre as to be a revelation to the judges.

In the judging of the contests various points had to be considered, and it is possible the attention to a few of these may have lowered the position of many displays which may have had such good selling points as to merit a higher stand. First of all, reproduction was a necessary qualification, as any photograph or drawing submitted had to be such as could be reproduced to enable it to enter the contest. Some half-dozen pictures had to be rejected on this account, either because of small size, indistinctness or careless drawing. After this the judges considered the powers of the window to attract the eye, to hold it and to advertise the goods displayed. A few special windows dropped in value on account of the little advertisement they gave to any class of goods, acting more as an attraction than as a selling agent. Artistic qualifications, of course, entered as a requirement, while ingenuity and care in arrangement were also rewarded.

As soon as possible the awards and payments for accepted pictures will be forwarded to the winners.

MADE IN CANADA.

THE vogue which has been attained by the phrase "Made in Canada" is matter for pride and satisfaction to every Canadian who has a proper regard for his native land. It should do much to bring to the notice, not alone of the foreigner, but of our own citizens the goods which are being produced by our own manufacturers, and should soon make a thing of the past that lingering prejudice in favor of imported goods which prevails in some quarters.

But in undertaking this "Made in Canada" campaign the manufacturers are assuming a responsibility which is no light one, and which is exactly equivalent to the advantage accruing from the use of that now popular motto. "Made in Canada" is a trade mark, a tacit guarantee of quality, or it is a piece of arrant hypocrisy. It must be a finger mark directing attention to merit—not a plaster to hide deficiency.

A self-respecting manufacturer has every right to ask his fellow-citizens to buy his goods in preference to those of foreign manufacture when the qualities are equal, and he will find a generous response to his appeal ; but he has no right to attempt to palm off inferior stuff under cover of the "Made in Canada" cry. No such attempt will prove successful, nor is it in the interest of our manufactures that it should prove successful.

Our permanent success as a factor in the industrial world depends upon the inherent merit of our products. In that and in nothing else.

It is well that this thought should be kept well in the foreground. "Made in Canada" should be our boast, and he deserves ill of his country who through negligence or design brings that boast into reproach. We have the natural resources ; we have intelligent labor ; we have clear-headed resourceful manufacturers. We should yield to no country under the sun in the quality of our products.

WE CAN SUPPLY THE FOOD.

MR. T. CARLAW MARTIN, LL.D., of Dundee, Scotland, editor of The Dundee Advertiser, in an interview with The Toronto News has damned the project of a preferential tariff with a pronunciamento declaring that Britain is dependent upon the United States for her foodstuffs, and that it is impossible to believe that before many years the colonies will be able to surplant the latter. Such a deliverance, coming from a gentleman of such prominence and one who had crossed the ocean for the express purpose of investigating the matter at first hand, might have shattered our hopes for an imperial zollverein this side the millennium had not the eminent doctor innocently revealed to us the source of the information on which he had based his conclusions.

In his efforts to find out what the colonies could produce in the way of foodstuffs, he goes, forsooth, to Chicago, Minneapolis and Texas, where he learns from a number of very amiable grain speculators and meat packers that the only original and reliable firm in the foodstuffs business, first, last and for all time, is "your Uncle Samuel," and that Canada's dream of becoming the granary of the Empire is a figment of youthful imagination, amusing in its way, but scarcely worthy the attention of a hard-headed Briton in search of facts—solid facts.

The subtlety of intellect which prompted the learned editor to set about the investigation of Canada's possibilities in the production of food by visiting the packers of Chicago, the millers of Minneapolis, and the ranchers of Texas is, we confess, beyond us, and is on a par, we submit, with an attempt to discover the merits of British manufactures by consulting the unbiassed opinion of captains of industry of Hamburg, Berlin, or Chemnitz.

In our simplicity we would have supposed that a trip through Canada to Winnipeg and the western grain fields would have been the proper mode of arriving at a just estimate of our possibilities in raising food for the Empire, and so thought the Hon. Thos. Brassey, who, on his return from this trip, declared in Liverpool that he was convinced the territory was capable of producing all the wheat the Empire needed for generations.

We have had sufficient cause for complaint from that class of British tourists who want to see Canada in three days from a parlor car, but if the Chicago-Minneapolis-Texas route becomes popular we may as well shut up shop.

THE FALL OUTLOOK.

THE outlook for the Fall trade seems to be particularly promising. In conversation with the wholesale trade a buoyant feeling is everywhere apparent. Orders of goodly proportions are being received every day. The retail trade seem to be stocking up liberally in all lines in anticipation of a good Fall trade.

The bountiful harvest and handsome prices realized on cheese this season have placed the farmer in easy circumstances, and the good effect is felt up through the retailer, wholesaler, broker and manufacturer. After all, in this Canada of ours the farmer is a factor of the very greatest importance to all.

The bright outlook is a matter of congratulation to the trade all round.

Success is born of the union of Right Buying and Right Selling.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN'S GLASGOW SPEECH.

THE word has been spoken. Since Mr. Chamberlain unreservedly declared himself for a radical revision of the fiscal policy of the United Kingdom the public have snatched with avidity at every item of news which has purported to throw light on the vexed question of ways and means. The situation has been one of tremendous dramatic interest. The proposal to subvert a policy which has been an unquestioned article of political faith for over half a century is a momentous thing, and doubly so in a country such as the United Kingdom, where men neither adopt nor abandon their political views lightly, where politics is a pursuit, a career, an end in itself, and where it is gratifyingly common to see men retire from offices of the highest position and emolument in deference to principle.

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS

Thursday next being Thanksgiving Day the forms of THE CANADIAN GROCER will go to press one day earlier than usual for the issue of October 16.

Will advertisers please note that all new copy and changes must be in our hands on Monday morning, 12th inst. We cannot guarantee to change advertisements after that date.

THE PUBLISHERS.

The task undertaken by Mr. Chamberlain is Herculean in its magnitude, as no one knew better than did the late Colonial Secretary when he launched his policy on the stormy waters of practical politics. This is indeed "the parting of the ways." The retirement from the Cabinet, rather than countenance even Mr. Balfour's modest endorsation of fiscal change, of such men as Mr. Ritchie, Lord George Hamilton, Lord Balfour of Burleigh, and, lastly, of the Duke of Devonshire, together with the unbroken front opposed by the for once united Liberal party, is eloquent of the deep-rooted hold the doctrines of free trade have upon the British people, Liberal and Conservative alike.

A less dauntless statesman than Mr. Chamberlain would have quailed before the storm he had raised, but not so the redoubtable man from Birmingham. He revels in a contest, and his indomitable courage will sustain him in what promises to be one of the most notable campaigns in the annals of British politics.

Heretofore Mr. Chamberlain's proposals have been of that general nature which admit equally of acceptance or rejection according as sympathy or aversion biases the mind to which they are addressed. At Glasgow Tuesday night he unmasked his batteries, and henceforth the fight will be in the open. Details are what his opponents have been demanding. To outline a definite policy they have been challenging him. He has outlined his policy, he has furnished his details.

And how have they been received?

Says The St. James Gazette: "It is impossible to imagine anything better conceived than the whole speech, which was sober and restrained, yet instinct with fire, fervor and faith."

Says The Liverpool Daily Post: "Mr. Chamberlain's programme is positively fantastic in its impracticability. There is not a self-governing colony that will listen to his proposals."

A remarkable speech indeed, of which two such contradictory statements can be made!

But what is his policy?

Shortly, he proposes to put a low tax, not exceeding two shillings per quarter (six cents per bushel), on foreign corn, but none on corn from British possessions. Maize is to be free. A corresponding tax is to be placed on flour. A small tax of 5 per cent. is to be imposed on foreign meat and dairy products with the exception of bacon, the food of the poor, which is to be free. Lastly, a substantial preference is to be given to the colonies on fruits and wines. Against these increases he proposes to remit three quarters of the duty on tea, half the duty on sugar, with corresponding remissions upon cocoa and coffee. The net result of these re-arrangements he estimates will be to reduce the cost of living of the laborer from four to five cents per week. The loss to the exchequer he estimates at £2,600,000. A moderate duty of 10 per cent. on manufactured goods, on the other hand, will yield £9,000,000, which should be used in further remission of taxes. This is the ingenious arrangement by which the great imperialist statesman hopes to be able to tax food and at the same time lessen the cost of living to the workman, bind the colonies closer to the Empire, protect the United Kingdom from the unfair competition of the high protectionist countries of Europe and America, and place the United Kingdom in a position to treat for reciprocal treatment in the matter of tariffs with her great rivals for the trade of the world.

The speech, judging from the incomplete reports at hand, was a remarkably powerful one. Whether his proposals as to the taxation of food will meet with the approval of the British workman, time alone will tell. His data and logic will be relentlessly scrutinized, and upon this point will turn the tide in the battle now on.

The practical stagnation of the British export trade during the last thirty years in the face of 30 per cent. increase in population, its gradual falling off with the protected countries of Europe and America, the great increase in exports of the latter to Britain, were effectively presented as proof of the necessity for a reconsideration of fiscal arrangements.

To anticipate a similar evolution in the trade of the United Kingdom with the colonies, which, says Mr. Chamberlain, is now "more valuable than our trade with the whole of Europe and the United States together," he is bending his energies. But here arises the great difficulty from the colonial and, more particularly at the present, the Canadian point of view. What Mr. Chamberlain wants to prevent is the growth of colonial industries which will compete with those of the Motherland. What we as Canadians want to encourage is the development of our industries to the greatest possible extent, to supply our own markets and to take our place in supplying the markets of the world at large. Mr. Chamberlain says :

"We can say to our colonies : 'We understand your views and aspirations, and do not desire to dictate or think ourselves superior to you; we recognize your right to develop your industries so as not to be dependent on foreign supplies ; but there are many things you do not know how to make, for which we have a great capacity of production ; leave them to us ; do not increase the tariff walls against us ; let us exchange with you for your productions ; do it because we are kinsmen, because it is good for the Empire as a whole, and because we have taken the first step and set you the example ; we offer you a preference ; we rely upon your patriotism and your affection that we shall not be losers thereby.' "

And with this we can very largely agree. We have every wish to buy from the Motherland, in preference to a stranger, those things which we cannot ourselves produce, and in earnest of this witness our preferential tariff.

But Mr. Chamberlain is out of harmony with Canadian sentiment, at least, when he says he believes that the colonies "would reserve to us the trade we already enjoy; also arrange their tariffs in the future in order not to start industries in competition with those already in existence in the Mother Country ; and not only would they enable us to retain our trade with them, but they would give us preference on all trade done with them by our foreign competitors."

With every regard for the Motherland our first duty is to Canada. We are a young country, with, we know, magnificent natural resources, which it is our duty and will be our privilege to develop. We cannot barter away our birthright and pledge ourselves to leave undeveloped industries simply because they might compete with those of the United Kingdom, nor would such a compact tend toward strengthening that bond of empire Mr. Chamberlain holds so dear. Canada and the United Kingdom must regulate their fiscal arrangements with a view to their several necessities. Any other basis must prove disastrous both to industry and sentiment.

Such a view, we hold with the Hon. Thomas A. Brassey, is not irreconcilable with the principle of imperial preferential trade, a satisfactory plan for which we hope to see yet evolved from the present discussion.

THE PICKLE TRADE.

A NEWS item in another column announces a record consignment of pickles from a British firm to Canada. When we consider the advantages possessed by Canada for developing this industry and the fact of a 35 per cent. import duty (less, of course, the preference), the situation seems rather anomalous. Why should we not be exporting pickles to Britain instead of importing them ?

Turning to our trade returns we find that for the year ending June 30 last we imported 208,056 gallons of bottled pickles, valued at $183,420, of which 149,507 gallons came from Great Britain and 46,505 from the United States, and at the same time 103,733 gallons of bulk pickles, valued at $32,296, of which 2,398 gallons came from Britain and 94,670 from the United States. So, in all, our bill for imported pickles for the last fiscal year was 311,789 gallons, valued at $215,716.

This is a very respectable trade, and one which our Canadian pickle manufacturers should make every effort to secure to themselves.

It is noticeable that bottled goods are by far the largest part of our imports, and by far the largest part of these come from Great Britain, which, by the way, sends very few bulk pickles.

Is this not suggestive that perhaps our British friends win out in the greater care they give to putting up the finest quality of goods and in putting them up in the very best style possible ?

THE CANADIAN GROCER has for many years worked hard to stimulate Canadian manufacturers to put up better goods, to put them up in better style, to label them more tastily and to advertise them more vigorously.

There has been a great advance in the Canadian pickle business within recent years, but the figures above quoted would indicate that we have not yet reached the point where we can afford to stop. The pickle men of Canada must, along with our other manufacturers, determine that "Made in Canada" shall be synonymous with the very highest degree of excellence.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, October 8, 1903.

GROCERIES.

TRADE has been very good during the past week, and booking for futures has been lively, especially for nuts, table raisins and other holiday goods. Merchants are stocking up and from the free buying evidenced wholesalers are expecting a very good Fall trade. Collections are reported as satisfactory and confidence is quite general. Country merchants declare that farmers have been prosperous this season and are well supplied with ready cash. There is no particular change in canned goods situation, but the trade are watching the weather with great interest in its bearing on the tomato and corn pack. Coffee has been firming up the last few weeks, but latest reports are of a decline in New York consequent upon favorable rains in Santos. Sugar has declined 10c. all round again in sympathy with the American market and a feeling of uncertainty prevails as to further movements in view of the fact that the largest consumptive season is over. Spices maintain the firm position last reported, while syrups and molasses are also meeting with a demand of satisfactory volume. Rice and tapioca are unchanged. Tea is quite firm in view of bareness of stocks held here. Good common Indian and Ceylons are quite actively sought and China greens despite high prices are selling rather freely. The feature of this week's market news has been the further advance of 1s. in Valencia raisins along with the latest estimate of the crop at 200,000 boxes less than was originally announced. Other dried fruits are unchanged.

CANNED GOODS.

The canned goods situation is still uncertain. The Canners' Consolidated have not, so far, altered prices for tomatoes announced, but it is said that they are not making sales. In the meantime jobbers are asking $1.20 to $1.25 for the output of outside factories. The trade have resigned themselves to the sockeye situation and some little business is being done in cohoes. Buyers are holding back somewhat at the figures demanded, but holders are firm. We quote :

COFFEES.

Movement has been slow during the past week. Buyers have been holding off on account of the decided advance in both Rios and Santos at New York, there having been a full cent advance in the last month. SUGAR.

The firmer feeling noted last week was short lived and this week we have to report a much easier tone to the whole situation. The hope for improvement in raws did not materialize and during the week transactions have been on the lower basis of 3.7/8, duty paid, New York basis 96 centrifugal, and at close there were still sellers on this basis, with refiners indifferent. Offerings were being withdrawn from the market at the moment of writing. The weakness started in Europe, where new crop beets, October shipment, have declined to 8 and 8.1/4d., and for November shipment to 8 and 7.1/2d. The former figure is equal to 3.84 duty paid New York for centrifugal ; that is, without bounty, which was withdrawn September 1. With the differential now in favor of beet root sugar it is more than likely that American refiners will turn their attention to this description for a time. Meltings for week ending September 30 were reduced by 5,000 tons, or say to 40,000 tons, while receipts were 8,000 tons heavier than the previous week and were reported as 35,421 tons. On this basis there was a reduction in stock for week of 4,579 tons. Within the last three months stocks in all hands at United States four ports have declined over 155,000 tons. Combined stocks of United States and Cuba for week under review were 328,665 tons, an increase of 49,016 over last year. Combined stocks of Europe and America at latest uneven dates were 1,528,665 tons, against 1,606,210 tons last year, the decrease being 77,545 tons. The weakness noted in raws has had a similar effect on refined market. Prices at New York declined 10c. all round on Friday, October 2, followed next day by a similar decline in Canadian quotations. The effect has been to check the demand which makes prevailing conditions very dull, as natural consumptive requirements are very much less now than they were quite recently. The outlook for the immediate future is very uncertain and it is not safe to make predictions, but from present indications it would seem wise to purchase only for absolute requirements. We quote :

No particular change is to be noted in the situation since last week. The demand generally has been good and prices have been held firm at quotations listed. The outlook is regarded as quite satisfactory and it is thought that cloves and nutmegs will go still higher. We quote :

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

A good steady trade locally is reported in these lines with an increased demand springing up lately. Prices have, as a result, been held firm at quotations. New York reports a steady demand at firm prices for both New Orleans and foreign molasses, with limited stocks in the hands of dealers. Syrup is unchanged there being a ready demand from exporters for the light offerings made by refiners. We quote :

TEAS.

A very good movement is reported for tea just at present. The demand on spot for good common Indian and Ceylons is quite active, but supplies barely exist. Pan-fired Ceylon greens are also good sellers. China greens are selling rather freely notwithstanding that prices are very high, values having recently advanced in Shanghai, owing to the scarcity of fine teas and the very unfavorable rate of exchange for export. There is not much change in local prices but it is worthy of note that the stocks in this country are lighter than for years.

London advices indicate a slightly easier feeling in common and medium grades, but teas of desirable quality fully maintain quotations. Buyers have been a little timid owing to reports of increased crop, but latest indications are that the increase will not be maintained and that position of growers will be strong. We quote :

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

Brokers report that the increased price of Valencia raisins abroad has lessened the buying for importation during the past week and it is not thought that half the quantity required for season has been contracted for. Just at going to press a cable to P. L. Mason & Co., from Mr. J. D. Arguimbau advises that present estimate of the Valencia raisin crop is 200,000 boxes less than originally estimated. This leaves the crop at 1,600,000, the smallest since 1890, as will be seen by reference to our report of September 18. In view of this estimate the market has again advanced 1s. Currants are quiet, but steady. Fluctuations in price are more governed by fluctuations in exchange and freight than price of currants in Greece, which has been on the same level for some time.

The quality is good and a large business is being done. The first direct boat brings 1,000 tons to Montreal, of which one-half was shipped by one house in Patras and the rest by a half-dozen other shippers. Advices from Malaga by cable report that large orders have forced up the market for raisins and prices are likely to rule considerably higher than those of 1901-or 1902. Almonds are now on the way. The market is steady and unchanged. There is nothing new in California fruit. We quote :

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, Oct. 8, 1903.

GROCERIES.

TRADE during the past week has been very satisfactory, the jobbing trade reporting good orders from all quarters. Country trade reports from Eastern Ontario and Quebec speak of prosperity, farmers realizing good returns for all their produce, the high prices obtained for cheese placing buyers on good footing. Orders for Fall and Winter stocks are coming in in good shape and volume. Reports from Northwest and Manitoba travellers for local houses speak of splendid business, and, taken all round, a pleasant feeling exists among jobbers for the future. Payments are promptly made. The tea business has been quiet, no special features being noted. Japans are in fair demand, good, medium qualities having been sold at 18 to 18½c.; nothing is to be had under 16½c. Ceylon greens are asked for and cable advices show a firm market. In Chinas, the advance in Chinese exchange has stiffened prices and enhanced values from 1 to 1½c. per pound, according to quality. Indian blacks are easier, also Ceylon blacks. A drop of 10c. per 100 pounds is noted in sugars, both hard and refined, granulated selling at 4.10. A fair amount of business is being done. Molasses are quiet and unchanged from last week's prices. Corn syrups are going out more freely on the contrary. Glucose dropped 10c. per 100 pounds. In dried fruits Valencia cables maintain advances reported last week. Currants are steady and unchanged. Malaga loose muscatels are high and buying has been discontinued, the advance of 50 per cent., reported last week, making buying prohibitive. A feeling exists that the jobbing trade is not taking advantage of the opportunity offered by the high market to realize proper prices. Apricots are reported too high to do much with at present. In green fruits the continued warm weather has somewhat deadened trade, particularly in apples and grapes, the latter having dropped down to 20 to 21c. per basket. Spanish onions are on spot, and a fair trade done in them. A large shipment on the Escalona will no doubt, on arrival of that steamer, bring prices down, though an effort is being made in some directions to corner the supply and hold the price up. The first Canadian chestnuts were placed on the market last Friday, fetching 14 to 15c., but are selling at 11½ to 12½c. Coffee is quiet, though New York reports indicate possible advance. Spices of all grades are very strong and tending up. In canned goods the circular sent out by the Canners' Association that deliveries of corn to 90 per cent. and tomatoes 70 per cent. would be made, is pleasant news for the jobbing trade. It is felt that should the splendid ripening weather continue, the packers ought to be able to make full deliveries in both corn and tomatoes, and it is hoped that this will be possible ; if not, dissatisfaction will undoubtedly prevail. Fish trade is quiet, the warm weather being a drawback to any activity. Shore and Labrador herrings are reported scarce from all accounts and prices must rise. Shell oysters are in good demand ; prices are easier owing to large receipts. Rice and tapioca are unchanged and little doing. The situation in the provision market is much the same as at the time of our last report. There is a slight decline in hams and bacon and also a somewhat easier feeling in lard. The egg market has witnessed a considerable jump, which should please the country dealers. Butter is also firm and in good demand, but the cheese market is uncertain and inclined to be weaker. The bean market, in spite of conflicting reports, seems to be very strong, but there are few transactions on spot. The honey situation is unchanged, buyers still holding off. Evaporated apples are steadier than last week. Flour is weaker and declines have occurred in the grain market. The offerings of feed are limited and some prices have advanced. Ashes are dull. There is a good demand for lambskins, and opposition buyers are all advancing the price.

SUGAR.

In sugars a drop of 10c. per 100 pounds went into effect on Saturday, thus making granulated 4.10 and refineds proportionately lower. Business is good and country orders coming in generally more freely. We quote :

FISH.

The fish trade during the past week was very quiet. The warm weather militated against good trade. Shell oysters showed most activity, receipts being more plentiful and the price easing off from $10 to $6.50 to $9, according to quality. Lake fish are commencing to come in more freely. What is wanted for this trade, however, is cooler weather. Reports so far this season indicate a shortage in supplies of herrings and prices today are above those of last year, half-barrels being $2.75 and barrels $5.50 for bright, new shore herrings. COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS.

The bean situation at present is hard to summarize. Upon the whole the market may be said to continue firm, although it is stated that some brokers are quoting lower prices. In the absence of transactions on the spot it is hard to quote with any degree of exactitude. While some brokers are quoting lower prices they are at time of writing making no deliveries and the western producers who are quoting high prices are making no sales. Evidently the producers anticipate no drop, but buyers do not care to make heavy purchases at present high prices. A prominent broker informs us that he never saw so little demand for beans at this season in any previous year. We quote :

HOPS.

The local market remains firm and unchanged, there being no special features to note this issue. We quote :

HONEY.

The situation, as described at some length in our last issue, remains unchanged. Offerings are still very considerable, but buyers continue to be conservative in view of their unfortunate experience last year. Prices quoted below are jobbers' prices to retailers, but as was stated in our last issue, producers are, in many cases, holding out for prices as high as those we quote. The local market is influenced to some extent by the expectation of West Indian honey being imported in considerable quantities. We quote :

Market continues steady at prices quoted last issue. We quote the following jobbers' prices :

New, in carlots	0 05½	0 06
New, in jobbing lots	0 06	0 06¼

POTATOES.

The market continues steady and prices are much the same as last week. Dealers, grocers and butchers are beginning to lay in Winter supplies and one contract with a grower is reported to supply 1,000 bags at 55c. per bag of 90 lb.; but other lots have sold at 60c. Merchants are paying 55 and 60c. per bag and are selling in jobbing lots at 65c., and in smaller quantities at 70c.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

FLOUR.

The local market is weaker and although prices are nominally unchanged there is no doubt that reductions have been made. The smaller Manitoba millers are offering at a decline of from 25 to 30c. per bbl. We quote the following nominal prices :

Manitoba patent		4 80
" first bakers'		4 50
" second bakers'	3 90	4 10
Winter wheat patents	4 00	4 15
Winter patents		4 15
Straight rollers	3 75	3 85
90 per cent. patents	3 55	3 70
Extra	1 65	1 70
90 per cent. bags		1 80
Straight rollers, bags	1 80	1 85

FEED.

The offerings are still limited and the demand is good, hence some advances will be noted below. We quote :

Ontario bran, in bulk	16 50	17 00
" shorts	19 00	20 00
Manitoba bran, in bags		18 00
" shorts	20 00	21 00
Mouillie	22 00	30 00

CORNMEAL.

The market is quiet and prices are unchanged. We quote :

Gold dust, bags	1 80	1 90
" bbls	3 90	4 00
Ordinary, bags	1 40	1 45

ROLLED OATS.

There is some improvement in the demand this week but prices are unchanged. We quote :

Rolled oats, in bbls	3 80	3 85
" " in bags	1 85	1 90

GRAIN.

The following table shows the stocks of grain in store in Montreal on the dates mentioned :

	Oct. 3, 1903.	Sept. 26, 1903.	Oct. 4, 1902.
Wheat	74,855	115,567	116,786
Corn	60,060	65,847	26,308
Peas	34,166	33,466	47,175
Oats	198,226	197,935	212,626
Barley	11,053	11,533	10,240
Rye	2,133	2,133	16,232
Buckwheat	1,126	1,126	561
Flour	14,600	16,330	12,294
Meal	417	726	104

The stock of wheat in store in Montreal shows a decrease of 40,712 bushels compared with a week ago, and a decrease of 41,931 with a year ago.

Corn shows a decrease of 5,787 bushels compared with a week ago, and an increase of 33,752 with a year ago.

Peas show an increase of 706 bushels compared with a week ago, and a decrease of 13,009 with a year ago.

Oats show an increase of 291 bushels compared with a week ago, and a decrease of 14,400 with a year ago.

Flour shows a decrease of 1,730 barrels compared with a week ago, and an increase of 2,306 with a year ago.

Prices locally are somewhat easier this week and some reductions will be noted. We quote :

No. 1 hard Manitoba		0 84
No. 1 Northern		0 82
Rye	0 57	0 57½
Peas	0 72	0 73
Corn	0 54	0 55
Buckwheat		0 48½
Barley	0 50	0 51
Oats		0 34½
Malt	0 75	0 80

BALED HAY.

The market is quiet and No. 1 timothy is slightly reduced this week. There is plenty of hay offering but owing to the wet season much of it is of poor quality. We quote :

No. 1 timothy	10 00	10 50
No. 2 timothy, choice	9 00	9 50
No. 2 timothy, ordinary	8 50	8 75
Clover, carlots	7 50	8 00

LOOSE HAY.

New hay is quoted at $7.50 to $8 per load of 100 bundles of 15 lb. each, and old hay $8 to $8.50.

ASHES.

No change to report. We quote :

First pots		5 85
Seconds		5 50
Pearls, per 100 lb	6 75	7 00

HIDES.

The hide market continues quiet. The hide association has established the price for lambskins at 65c. for this month, but it is reported that opposition buyers are paying more than this figure. We quote:

No. 1 beef hides		0 09
No. 2 "		0 08
No. 3 "		0 07

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

Office of "The Canadian Grocer,"

St. John, N.B., Oct. 6, 1903.

THE horse show and carnival this week has attracted many merchants, among others, to the city, and the local dealers have been greeting many friends and customers. Business continues active in all lines, with indications good for Fall business. The crops in this province are good. The lumber industry will be very active during the Winter. Men are scarce and wages good.

OIL.

Trade in burning oils is active and the tendency is toward higher prices. Linseed oil and turpentine are a little lower than two weeks ago. In other lines there is no change in the state of the market. We quote :

American Water White	....	0 19½
Best Canadian	....	0 19
Prime	....	0 18½
Linseed oil, raw	....	0 54
" boiled	....	0 57

SALT.

There is no change in quotations since last report. A recent cargo of 12,000 bags was all sold, and another of 9,000 to come will go quickly. Over 6,000 bags were sent to Eastport last week, and one firm will send out 2,000 bags by rail this week. The stocks are moderate for this season and demand is active. We quote :

CANNED GOODS.

The market has not yet settled down to a definite working basis, and at the moment there is nothing of special interest to add to what has been said. Dealers are awaiting more definite information about this season's packs, which will, of course, affect the trend of prices, which may now be said to be nominal. We quote :

GREEN FRUIT.

Pears, peaches and plums are practically out of the market. Melons are also out. Lemons are firmer. The only oranges are Jamaicas. Apples are in good supply, but bring a fair price for good stock, though there are quite large receipts of poor grades, that sell at auction from 80c. to $1.25 per barrel. We quote :

DRIED FRUIT.

There is a very strong raisin market all round, and the tendency appears to be upward. Currants are also firm ; dealers have bought quite freely. It is, however, a season between old and new, and values, though firm, are a bit unsettled as yet. Quotations at present are about as follows :

FISH.

Dry cod is decidedly firm, as are indeed all kinds of fish, with stocks light. Reports from the bay tell of a very light catch. The fishermen are preparing for the haddock fishery. There has been a scarcity of bait. Sardine herring have been taken in large quantities in St. John harbor during the last two weeks and taken to the Eastport factories. We quote :

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL.

The flour market continues firm all round. Beans are a little higher than two weeks ago. There is a good demand for oats and feed, but hay is extremely dull. We quote :

MONTREAL

The Most Liberally Managed Firm in Canada.

NOTES.

Dearborn & Co. are Maritime Province agents for Tartarine.

John McGrory, retail grocer, Main street, has retired from business.

A schooner will be here this week to take general cargo to Bermuda.

The Imperial Packing Co., of Woodstock, will begin killing cattle this week.

The Bank of New Brunswick now provides all its clerks with a mid-day hot lunch.

O. H. Warwick, wholesale crockery merchant, has gone to the Old Country on a business trip.

Schooner Kipling arrived last week with a cargo of molasses from Porto Rico for L. G. Crosby.

W. F. Campbell has bought out the retail grocery business of Wm. Rankine, 16 Germain street.

Hamm Bros., the Main street bakers, have built a large brick block, and will add the manufacture of confectionery to their other lines.

A Nova Scotia schooner captain who sold inferior apples as No. 1 Gravensteins, was fined last week for violating the Fruit Marks Act.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, Oct. 5, 1903.

THE firm condition of the flour market continues a main topic of interest to the grocery trade. In this city the response to the demands of millers for higher prices has been delayed as long as possible, and even now retailers are not paying as much for some brands as present mill prices would seem to warrant. It is considered that flour at the figures jobbers here ask to-day is a very safe purchase, and no doubt when stocks now controlled by distributing houses are exhausted, still higher prices will rule. Mill-feed has advanced considerably in the last two weeks. All coarse grains are very firm for the time of year. The C.P.R. has given notice of an advance in freight rates ranging from ½ to 2c. per bushel on all grains carried from Ontario to the Maritime Provinces. There is a considerable trade done here during the Winter and Spring in Ontario oats, and this article is now quoted higher. There is a very good supply of P. E. Island oats now coming on this market.

In provisions, American are quoted somewhat higher in the last fortnight, but this is probably only temporary. The Fall packing season for P. E. Island and domestic mess pork has now opened and packers are anticipating an easier market for these lines. Lard is quoted lower as a result of the opening of the local packing season, and the decline on outside markets. Beef remains steady and unchanged. A good business has already been done in provisions, etc., for lumbermen's supplies, as preparations for the woods have been made somewhat earlier than usual.

Sugar remains unchanged, but the refinery is occupied chiefly in filling old contracts. Molasses holds its strength and the leading distributors have very firm ideas regarding the future of this commodity, even though for the moment fairly good sized lots are being disposed of at provincial points by outside traders.

The direct fruit steamer from the Mediterranean is expected at Halifax about the end of the month with a supply of raisins and currants for the city wholesale houses. We hear of one firm that is cutting prices on old stock to clear it out before the arrival of the new season's crop. The dried fruit market is in a somewhat unsettled condition, California raisins are higher in the primary market than at this time last year, and if this condition continues, it is unlikely that valencias will long be offered to the trade at to-day's quotations.

There is a very good demand for canned tomatoes at the prices set by the C. C. Co. Jobbers, however, have been advised that the canners cannot guarantee to fill more than 60 per cent. of the orders now in hand. Canned salmon are also said to be in short supply, although most Halifax houses are satisfied that they have secured enough for their requirements.

* * *

Buyers have been compelled to accept the views of makers regarding cheese, and last week a very large quantity changed hands on the P. E. Island Cheese Board at 12c. This established the price for Nova Scotia and New Brunswick factories also, but dealers who have to take the risk of carrying the stocks into the non-productive season, are afraid they are being compelled to pay too high a price. In the last day or two there has been less disposition shown to pay the extreme figure. Butter is in very good supply, the pasturage continuing good and the make of the provincial creameries above the average.

* * *

Apple shipments at this port are heavy. Some 37,000 barrels were exported last week, and at the present time two steamers—one for London and the other for Liverpool—are loading at this port, while a third is being loaded at Annapolis. The rolling stock of the D. A. Railway is taxed to its utmost to move the immense crop of apples and potatoes out of the Annapolis Valley. All expected a big apple crop, but results have far outstripped the highest predictions. The Gravensteins are now all gathered and the yield is fully 50 per cent. larger than was estimated while the fruit remained upon the trees. So far excellent prices have been obtained on the English market. One fruit grower sent 50 barrels of Gravensteins to London and realized $200 clear, or $4 a barrel. Buyers have been paying $2 per barrel in the orchards, but very many refused to sell at that figure, and the experience of the man alluded to would seem to justify their action.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 1, 1903.

RECENT arrivals from the north say that the amount of freight lying at White Horse for transhipment down the river to Dawson is very considerable. It is feared that there is little chance to get it all down before navigation closes. The river has never been known to be so low and the steamers as a consequence have no chance to get their full cargoes aboard. This makes the reducing of the big pile of freight a difficult matter.

Dawson advices received this week predict rise in prices of some lines of supplies before long, owing to the approach of Winter. In the markets, it is noted that hay is reported strong at 4½c. per pound and eggs are still at $11 per case. The supply of eggs is said to be limited, and this is notwithstanding the heavy shipments which have left this port for the north. Possibly there are some yet to arrive in Dawson, but it will not be long until it will cost more to ship them than the eggs cost here. Fresh fruits were also reported as scarce in Dawson, delay in receipt of expected shipments having been the cause. It is curious to note the prices mentioned. The remark is made that watermelons have fallen in price from 12½ to 10c. per lb.

Conditions in Vancouver markets have shown but little change for the past few weeks. There is a good trade being done. The cessation of through or guaranteed shipments to the north, followed by the refusal to receive further shipments, had some effect on the trade of course, but there is good business being done with the interior, and local trade is very satisfactory.

The visit of the eastern manufacturers, though it has been necessarily a brief and hurried one, will be productive of immense good, both to the east and the west. There is bound to follow an understanding of conditions, which would have been impossible without the personal visit and contact which the manufacturers have experienced. The people here have been most hearty in their reception, and the drawing closer of the bonds between the east and the west is promoted under very happy auspices.

* * *

The produce market shows but little change. Orders for butter have been sent out liberally, and the stocks will be fairly good when the Winter season begins. Still, there have been no great surplus shipments over actual needs so far. The cheese market is firm and advancing steadily. The supply of eggs from Eastern Canada has been better of late. There have been no shipments to the north to any extent for a week or more, so that the local supply is improved thereby. Prices are about at last quotations.

The fruit receipts from California are almost entirely confined to grapes, which are received fairly liberally and in good quality, the price being in keeping with the stock. A few shipments of peaches of the Salway variety are being received from California, but the Washington stock is done. The local plums are out of the market, and the local Italian prunes are also nearly over. The supply was great while it lasted, but it was so late in coming in that it did not last long.

Local apples are beginning to show up in very large quantities, and the quality this year is very much higher on the average. There have been two or three cars of apples received from the Coldstream ranch, the property of Lord Aberdeen, in the Okanagan district. They are choice in quality and good sellers. From the same ranch there are to be heavy receipts of Winter apples later on in the season.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, Oct.5, 1903.

GENERAL trade is very active in all lines, prices are steady, and there is little change of any kind to report since last week. Up to Friday the weather was very fine and warm and threshing operations were rushed in all parts of the province, but with Friday came a heavy downpour of rain that was general throughout the entire province and territories and this will again make a serious delay. The amount of wheat coming forward has been very much behind that of last year. The delay of threshing is not the only cause for this. The increased rate for storage and the failure of the C.P.R. to reduce freight rates, as was expected, are factors in the slow movement of the grain.

Among the grocers, the news of the week is the decline of 10c. per cwt. on all lines of sugar. There seems to be no special reason why it should have occurred. The prices now are $4.65 to $4.75 for granulated and $4.05 to $4.10 for bright yellows. The trade is now down to normal demand for domestic purposes, as fruit canning and preserving is over for the season. The new Valencia raisins spoken of last week are now in stock and are proving of excellent quality.

GREEN FRUIT.

There is considerable anxiety in the West as to whether the heavy exports of apples will advance prices to buyers here. So far the offerings have been plentiful, and prices though fairly high and firm, are not exorbitant. The dealers state, however, that although offerings are large, the offerings of real No. 1 apples are comparatively small, while the demand for them is great. Prices are $3.75 to $4.25 Winnipeg, according to quality. Snow apples are on the market this week at $5, but are small and uneven in size. Ontario grapes are coming forward in good shape, but the supply is not equal to the demand and prices are firm at 35c. for blue and 50c. for red Rogers. A few Ontario basket pears arrived and are selling at 60c. Peaches have become very scarce; the demand for them is increasing and the price has advanced to $1.35 per case. Tokay grapes are in. The crates are perfect pictures, the fruit is so fine and so exquisitely colored. They sell at $3; muscat, $2.25. Washington plums are drawing to a close, and are quoted at $1.25. Pears are $2.75 per crate. Cape Cod cranberries have arrived and are quoted at $10 per barrel, sweet potatoes are also in and are quoted at $5.50 for Virginia and $6 for Jersey.

BEANS.

The crop is reported short and beans are a little higher, being quoted this week at $2.05.

CANNED GOODS.

The first of the new pack of tomatoes arrived and the price is firm at $2.50 for the 2-dozen case. No change in the canned vegetable situation can be recorded. In canned meats there has been a decline of about 5c. per dozen on corned beef, pork and beans and roast beef. This is to meet the American prices.

sentatives in this city, Messrs. Tees and Persse. Mr. Eddy is accompanied by Mrs. Eddy and will visit the coast and Edmonton before returning to the east. When interviewed Mr. Eddy commented on the signs of progress in the West, particularly as indicated by the increased consumption of paper by the newspapers. In some cases this increase had gone from 60 tons to 200 per month.

Mr. Fife, chief inspector of scales for the Weights and Measures Department of the Dominion Government, has been in the city giving a demonstration of a device for weighing grain in the field just as it comes from the thresher. Any machine of this kind, the accuracy of which would be accepted by the Department, would be a mutual advantage to the farmers and the threshers of the West. The men who principally attended the demonstration were manufacturers of and agents for threshing machines.

PORTO RICO ORANGES.

THE Porto Rico orange has been seen on the New York market for a short time each year for some little time back, but until the present has not been able to make much the place for itself it should have done. The reason for this is to be found in the undeveloped state of the country. The fruit has been brought down to the coasts on rafts and mule packs, and as there is only one wharf on the island the greater part of the fruit has had to be lightered out to the steamers. Little attention has been paid to cultivation, and as a result the market has not been getting the best fruit which the island is capable of producing. Nor has the stock been received in good merchantable condition.

Recently, however, some New York merchants have interested themselves in the island orange, and are packing it in California style with most gratifying results.

The Porto Rico orange, it is expected, will prove a competitor of the Jamaica orange, but not of the California fruit, as the latter does not ripen at the same time. The natural flavor is good, and the orange very sweet and juicy, although, like all seed oranges, it has a certain amount of tissue which puts it in the same class with the Spanish and Florida. The noticeable light color is due to being ripened by artificial heat. These oranges are worth to-day $2.75 to $3, New York, for sounds. The first consignment to Canada is expected by a Toronto fruit man at any time in the immediate future.

It is seldom that one sees a boiled fish alive, yet there are such in the boiling lake of Amatitlan, Guatemala. These fish, it is asserted, often pass days in the boiling water, which comes from numberless hot springs.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

We Can Supply the Empire.

THE Hon. Thomas Brassey, M.P., who has just returned to England from a trip through Canada to gain by personal investigation an adequate conception of our possibilities in the matter of supplying the food needs of the Mother Land and who, it will be remembered, delivered a remarkable address on the trade relations between the United Kingdom and the colonies at the reception to the manufacturers in Toronto a few weeks ago, has delivered his opinion in the following words.

"I am convinced that the territory is capable of producing all the wheat the Empire needs for generations to come. Mr. Chamberlain has taken the right course by resigning."

This endorsation of Canada's claim to be the future granary of the Empire, by a man of such prominence, and one who is so little given to rash predictions as Mr. Brassey showed himself to be in his public deliverances in Canada, should have no inconsiderable weight in raising Canada in the estimation of the Mother Land.

Ogilvie Extensions in the West.

MR. F. W. THOMPSON, vice-president and managing director of The Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., who has been in the West on a tour of inspection of the company's interests there, in speaking to the representative of a Winnipeg paper recently, said :

"I may state emphatically that we will proceed immediately with the erection of the proposed mill and elevator at Fort William. I will, before returning east, complete all necessary arrangements so that the work can be advanced as far as possible this Fall, and orders will be at once placed for all necessary supplies. It is my intention, if possible, to have the mill in operation by October 1 of next year.

4,000 BARRELS PER DAY.

"The capacity of this mill will be four thousand barrels per day, and it will be the largest flour mill in the British Empire. The elevator to be built in connection with the mill will have a capacity of three quarters of a million bushels."

Speaking of the improvements to their Winnipeg mill Mr. Thompson said that they were at present making a large addition to the mill on Higgins street, which would increase its capacity by 500 barrels per day. They also intend to increase their elevator facilities at this point. In the country, he said, they had built eighteen new elevators this season, and would build a number more next year.

Speaking of the crop conditions in the west Mr. Thompson expressed the hope that the results of the recent unfavorable weather would not be as serious as some seemed to anticipate, but at any rate the high prices prevailing for wheat would more than compensate the farmers for any depreciation in the quality of grain that might be caused by the rain.

Breadstuffs in Trinidad.

Gordon, Grant & Co., of Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, writing September 10, say of breadstuffs :

"There have been no arrivals between mails but stocks which are working down are still ample to meet present light requirements until the arrival of the steamer Maracas, now due. There is a steady, although light, demand for flour and we quote bakers' quality at $6 to $6.25 ; extras, $5.70 to $5.90, and superfine at $4.40 to $4.65, according to brands. Some small parcels of Canadian flour have lately come to hand, but this description having been out of the market for some time is not now enquired for, and the trade which at one time looked promising will have to be practically built up again. We quote for cornmeal $4.25, but stocks although small are moving slowly owing to the absence of any Venezuelan demand."

Reduction in United States Grain Rates.

A reduction of one cent per bushel was announced on grain shipped from Buffalo to New York this last month, says The Flour Trade News. The reduction in rates is the result of protests by New York grain merchants against the high rates current to that port which were, it is claimed, forcing the bulk of the grain exports through the Gulf ports and Montreal. The new rates apply to Boston and Philadelphia, as well as New York. Baltimore has a differential of 4 mills. The grain trade of Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore have been quite as strong in their complaints as that of New York.

The reductions were not granted by the railroad people until after a most thorough discussion, and the reduction was made in the face of active opposition from some of the lines. Although the reduction that shippers are now hopeful of receiving is not all that the eastern seaports should have in order to meet the Montreal competition, yet export and steamship men feel that it is a move in the right direction on the part of the railroads and they hope that the railroad managers may be prevailed upon to make a larger reduction.
